New York, May 2—The dull and aimless market now existing is analagous to the market periods we have had each spring since 1900 inclusive: they have annually put in an appearance between the latter part of April or in May or June, and have in each instance lasted from two to six weeks. Strange to say they have in each instance appeared after a decline in prices, also have in each instance been followed by a sustained and vigorous advance. While with us the markets were dull, fluctuating within more or less narrow limits, the period was one of stock accumulation, it was also a noteworthy fact that buying when prices were heavy, turned out better than did selling when prices were strong. We firmly believe the above idea appertains most strongly to the present situation.

Railway reports of earnings continue to be most gratifying. Reading for March showed a net increase of $322,981 and an increase in the surplus of all the Reading companies aggregate $618,848; St. Paul reports for the month a gross increase of $225,400 and a net gain of $11,025, while Union Pacific turns up with a net gain of $261,679. As Union Pacific in January and February reported net decreases, this last report is most gratifying. Union Pacific officials say from now on for some time to come, net earnings will show continued gains.

The remark of Mr. Baer that within two years Reading would pay full dividends upon both classes of its preferred stock is most significant. The day is not far distant when the common will enter the dividend list. The coal stocks are all splendid to buy and put away.

Speculative interest at the moment is at comparatively low ebb. It is always when stocks are downward when they should be bought. We are confident that the present time is a most excellent one to buy into the market. Several of the large operators are vacating, taking advantage of the restful period in the market.

Those who have patience, if they will buy some of the better class of securities will, in our opinion have no cause to regret.

Summary—The feature of the market was Metropolitan, which advanced 1 1-2, then lost one point of the advance after the bank statement. The day's market was firm, but sluggish and dull. Max. N. showed signs of accumulation. Traders realized [illegible] Statement, causing fractional recessions. Stocks are in our opinion a purchase. No money quoted today. Total sales 133,300.

NEW GASOLINE CARS

Ottawa, May 2—The Canada Atlantic chief engineer, Mr. Mountain, has purchased a new gasoline touring car for inspecting the railway. The new car is built to run from twenty to fifty miles an hour with ease. These cars are now being adopted in the States for the use of section gangs, and are there built to carry twenty men. Thus a larger area of ground is covered with larger gangs and it may be that the Canada Atlantic will adopt these in connection with their proposed new system of doing section work.

A MAGNIFICENT INVESTMENT

THE GOLD TUNNEL COMPANY.

PRESCOTT, ARIZONA

The Company owns in SIX PARALLEL VEINS of GIGANTIC SIZE, one of the largest GOLD PROPOSITIONS in the country. Each of these six veins would make a mine by itself.

The Company, by purchase and consolidation, has succeeded in acquiring the entire length of these great GOLD BEARING ledges; covering an area six thousand feet in length and about two thousand feet wide. The Company owns this valuable property free of any incumbrance.

The ground included in this group of mines gives ample evidence of tremendous natural disturbances, and shows plainly on the surface the acid and mineral stains characteristic of a heavy mineralized gold lead of gigantic proportions.

Six Miles of Gold Bearing Veins

Through the length of four of the mining claims; forming a continuous line 6,000 feet long run THREE LEDGES so close together as to be economically worked from one opening; they aggregate from 85 to 200 feet in width.

The adjoining line of three mining claims shows a ledge 4,500 feet in length, varying in width from 7 to 200 feet, with the same character of ore.

Beginning at the south end of the "Eighty-Four" mining claim, is a fifth large ledge carrying good values in GOLD, and running in a northerly direction for a distance of fully forty-five hundred feet.

Two mining claims on the east side show GOLD BEARING CROPPINGS 40 to 50 feet wide through their entire length, a distance of three thousand feet.

All of the ledges are well mineralized, carrying at grass-root values in gold running from about $2.00 to $6.00 per ton.

IF YOU HAVE CATARRH

Remember the best Catarrh medicine that money can buy is Catarrhozone; it cures quickly and permanently when all else fails

The remedy don't exist that will cure Catarrh as quickly as Catarrhozone. It relieves the most stubborn cases in a short time, and drives the disease so thoroughly from the system that it never returns.

Druggists boldly recommend Catarrhozone in preference to other remedies, because they know it is the best, and every progressive doctor prescribed it for the same good reason.

Catarrhozone is a rational, common-sense treatment that finds favor with everybody. It cures by the inhalation of medicated air, which comes into contact with the mucous surface of all the breathing organs. It gets at the source of the trouble, kills the germs and drives every vestige of catarrh right out of the system.

It doesn't matter how deep-seated or chronic your case may be, Catarrhozone can cure it. Even though a thousand other remedies have failed, don't give up hope till you have used Catarrhozone. It has cured other cases probably worse than yours, and will cure yours if it gets a chance.

Mr. Dutcher Law, a prominent citizen of Italy Cross, N.S., says: "I experimented with hundreds of catarrh remedies and found the majority to be worthless dismal failures. Catarrhozone was the first to give lasting relief; it cured me and I am with pleasure testifying to its merits as a cure for Catarrh of the nose or throat.

(Signed) DUTCHER LAW.

You are sure to derive the most pleasant results from Catarrhozone. It has been tested many times and never found wanting. Every druggist in Canada sells it. Complete two months' treatment, guaranteed to cure costs $1, or a trial size 25c. By mail from N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

More Power

The promoters of the Ontario Electric Railway have decided upon developing power by means of a dam at Glen River on the Trent River, seven miles from Trenton. The installation will cost $200,000. Nothing will be done until amendment is secured at the Legislature to the act of incorporation. This railway, if built, is to run from Toronto to Kingston, along the lake shore.

A Sure Thing

Some people think the proposed electric railway from Cornwall to Toronto will never be built, but this is an error, says the Kingston Whig. The capitalists have already invested $20,000 in the scheme, and do not intend to throw it away. Mr. Smith, one of the promoters, is ill in Boston, but is hopeful of being around in a short time. One of the wealthiest men in the United States is behind the scheme.

The girls are rapidly taken up here as they arrive.

TRACKMEN MAY STRIKE

Grand Trunk May Have Serious Trouble With Its Men

There is a possibility that a strike may take place on the Grand Trunk Railway before long. There is a spirit of unrest among the trackmen that may develop into serious trouble. For two months now the trackmen have had delegates in Montreal trying to effect some satisfactory arrangement for the recognition of their union, and J. A. Wilson, president of the Trackmens' Union, has also been in consultation with the Grand Trunk authorities for some time. Wilson, who, like all the labor disturbers, comes from the other side of the line, no doubt is working more for the interests of American railways than for the trackmen, whom he claims to represent.

Awarded to the William Hamilton Manufacturing Company

The Canada Paper Company has given the contract for ten large water wheels to the Wm. Hamilton Mfg. Co., of town, for their new pulp mills which are being erected and equipped with the finest machinery in the world.

These are not the only machines our enterprising company has manufactured for this new mill, but this is the largest order yet received, and amounts to $25,000.

This paper company evidently believes in Canada for Canadians, as they are giving all Canadian concerns the preference in making all their machinery. Their new buildings and plant are erected in Quebec in the town of Windsor Mills.

PROSPECT OF TROUBLE

Between City of Ottawa and Bell Telephone Company

Ottawa, May 4—The Bell Telephone Company this morning notified the city that it intended to use the streets, raise poles and string wires without the consent of the city, and requested the Mayor to appoint some city official to supervise the work. Mayor Cooke says the poles will not go up if it takes the whole police force to prevent it.

Unmistakable Signs of Catarrh

If you have a ringing in the ears, dropping in the throat, bad breath, headache, morning weakness, bad taste in the mouth—then it's catarrh. Catarrhozone kills the germs, heals the inflamed membranes, clears nose, throat and air passages by one application. Catarrhozone quickly remedies the head noises and deafness, prevents dropping and is warranted to absolutely cure all forms of Catarrh, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Lung Troubles. DANGEROUS BUSH FIRES

Timely Rains Last Week Saved Immense Forests

Lindsay Post:—If the rain had not come Thursday the whole north country would have been swept by fires, and immense damage done to property. As it was, the fires did considerable damage to timber in the vicinity of Dysart, which is about six miles this side of Haliburton. At this point Messrs. Craig & Austin, of Kinmount, whose timber limits are near there, had over $1,000 worth of tanbark piled at the railway siding. It caught fire during the afternoon and every bit of it was destroyed. The ties on the railway at Dysart caught fire, and as a result the Haliburton train did not reach its destination till after 9 o'clock, it being over two hours behind time. The sawdust at Craig & Austin's mill at Kinmount took fire, and the millmen experienced considerable difficulty in putting it out.

Mr. F. P. Brady's many Peterborough friends will be pleased to hear of his promotion to the position of General Superintendent of the C.P.R. with headquarters at Winnipeg. Mr. Brady was formerly Division Superintendent at Smith's Falls, and more recently at Fort William. His present appointment is in succession to Mr. Leonard.

Mr. Brady, who was born in 1853, entered the service of the Passumpsic Railway in 1859 as station baggage master, being thereafter, from 1873 to 1880, train despatcher on the Northern Railway at Concord, N.H., a line which has since been absorbed by the C.P.R.; From 1880 to 1888 he was chief despatcher on the South-Eastern Railway, with headquarters at Richford, Vt. For the two years following he was one of the C.P.R's trainmasters, and then for a decade assistant superintendent. Since 1898 he has been one of the superintendents.

THE MONTREAL STRIKE

The Whole Shipping Schedule Disarranged by It

Montreal, May 1.—The situation in connection with the strike of longshoremen has been complicated by the refusal of the members of the Teamsters and Freight Handlers' Union to handle goods delivered by the steamship companies. The men of the Dominion Transport and Shedden Companies yesterday refused to take goods from the docks, after notifying their employers to that effect.

It looks as if the militia is prepared to stand the siege for some time, for marquees and cooking utensils have been ordered out. Several large steamers are expected in port at the close of the present week, and as most of them have sufficient men to load and unload, the militia will be obliged to remain on duty to afford protection. The strike and consequent delays will alter the entire sailing schedule of this port, and what is to be done with the vessels coming in is one of the important questions. A number of business men are already protesting against being obliged to have their clerks patrol the waterfront in uniform instead of attending to the duties of their employers. The steamship owners claim to have cabled for 750 men. No settlement is yet in sight.

Mr. W. I. Gear, vice-president of the Board of Trade, and vice-president of the Robert Redford Company, in an official statement, said: "The outcome of the present dock struggle will mean either the freedom of the port of Montreal or its manipulation to the detriment of Canada from Washington. The gauntlet is thrown down [illegible] fight to a finish. Ships will be tied up. English labor is on the way to Montreal."

The commanding officers of the different corps now on duty at the harbor front in connection with the longshoremen's strike, have sent out details of militiamen for the purpose of bringing into camp a large number of men who have not reported for duty, as required by the Militia Act. Many of these men are members of labor unions and have openly boasted that they will not turn out for duty to the detriment of the strikers. They are being taken wherever found from their places of work or on the street.

Ferrozone will renew your appetite and digestion—make you sleep soundly—in fact will make you well. Try Ferrozone. Price 50c. per box, or 6 boxes for $2.50; at druggists or N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

Insurance Rates

The losses of the fire insurance companies doing business in Canada last year only amounted to 39.11 per cent. of the cash received for premiums as against 70.20 per cent. in 1901, and as against an average of 61.33 since 1869, a showing which can only be regarded from the companies' point of view as brilliantly satisfactory. There is no excuse for the heavy increase so far as Peterborough is concerned.

Burned in Bush Fire

Ottawa, May 1.—Abbie Perry, aged 28 years, was burned to death yesterday while helping the family beat back the forest fires from their home in Hull Township, about 12 miles from Ottawa. By some means she became separated from the others, and was surrounded by the fire. This morning her charred body was found. The fires raged all through the Gatineau yesterday, the people in Wayon and Kazabuza having to turn out en masse to save their homes. Several farm buildings are reported to have been burned.

—The recent frost has done considerable damage to the fruit crop in this locality.

—A very successful entertainment was given in Lindsay on Friday evening last, under the auspices of the Y.M.C.A., in which about 20 of our local talent took part.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES

Frequent Throbbing Headache.

There's many a cause for headache. Men are not often troubled by headaches. When they are it is generally due to biliousness or indigestion. But women have headaches which seem peculiar to their sex, frequent nervous throbbing headaches. Does it not seem as if such headaches peculiar to women must be at once related to womanly disease? Women who suffer with diseases peculiar to the sex do not realize the drain of vital strength and nerve force they undergo as a consequence of disease. It is this which causes the familiar headaches of sick women.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription cures such headaches by curing the cause — irregularity, weakening drains, inflammation, ulceration or female weakness. "Favorite Prescription" invigorates and tones up the entire system, encourages the appetite, quiets the nerves and gives refreshing sleep.

"I was troubled with congestion of the uterus and female weakness for five years," writes Mrs. Robt. Kerwin, of Albert, Hastings Co., Ont. "Was so weak and nervous I could hardly do any work. Had severe pain in back, also dizziness and pain in head. My heart would beat so hard and fast at times I would have to sit still till I got all right again. But after taking four bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and one of his 'Golden Medical Discovery' I felt entirely well. I also used one box of 'Lotion Tablets' and one of 'Suppositories' as directed. All the symptoms of my trouble have disappeared and I am completely cured. I thank you for your kind advice and your medicine."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets clear the complexion and sweeten the breath.

STREET RAILWAY AND LIGHT FRANCHISES

Agreed Upon by the Town Council Last Night

DETAILS YET TO BE NEGOTIATED

Ald. Morrison, chairman of the Committee on Electric Light and Franchises submitted the following report of his committee at last night's regular meeting of the Town Council:

Gentlemen,—Your Committee on Electric Light and Franchises beg leave to report and recommend as follows:

1. That the Council offer the Peterborough Light and Power Company a contract, for ten years, from the time of the expiration of their present contract, for supplying 120 or more 2000 candle power arc street lights in the present town of Peterborough at $60 a lamp per year the Company to pay the Town $400 a year rental for the privilege of having their poles on the streets and the contract of $60 per lamp per year, to include Ashburnham in case the municipalities are united, or any other additions to the Town, provided that the other details of the terms of the contract are arranged to the satisfaction of the Council.
2. That the Council offer the Peterborough Radial Railway Company the street railway franchise of the streets of the Town except Crescent street, for thirty years, the Company to build and equip at least five miles of railway in the Town, including the old street railway line and extensions to the River Otonabee, on Park street and a spur line to Jackson Park, provided the other details and terms of the franchise are arranged to the satisfaction of the Council.
3. That the following be a committee in regard to legislation:—The Mayor, Ald. Morrison, O'Connell and McWilliams, and the solicitor and Clerk, with authority to attend the Legislative Committees at Toronto, and that the Treasurer be authorized to pay their expenses on the certificate of the Mayor or the Chairman of this Committee.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

This report was adopted and read, and the Committee empowered to negotiate the details.

By the above resolution the Town Council have emerged from a somewhat embarassing situation. They have separated the franchise for street lighting from that for street railway transportation, and have made two distinct propositions. Accepting, no doubt, the opinion of experts, they have concluded that the present arc lamps are more desirable than the closed lamps for street purposes, and have offered the Peterborough Light and Power Company, now controlled by the American Cereal Company, a ten years' contract for street lighting at $60 per lamp a year, the Company to pay the Town a pole rental of $400 a year. They also offer the Peterborough Radial Railway Company a franchise of the streets, subject to above mentioned conditions, for thirty years. As this street railway Company, which sprung into existence last year apparently are not in a position to operate the system, this paves the way for a transference of franchise, rolling stock, rails, etc. to the American Cereal Company who it is to be hoped will undertake the task of giving the people of Peterborough a thoroughly up-to-date radial railway system.

GENERAL BUSINESS.

The Town Council met in regular session last night, when there were present, Mayor G. M. Roger, presiding, and Aldermen Morrison, McWilliams, Rush, Shortly, Hatten, Edgcumbe, Corkery, Finnie, Clinkscale, and O'Connell.

BORROW MONEY.

Four by-laws to provide for borrowing money to pay for sewers on Rubidge, Harvey, Water, Smith, Walton and Dalhousie streets, and Babb's lane and Homewood avenue passed their several readings.

THE TOWN'S RATE.

At this juncture Ald. McWilliams took exception to the rate of 19 mills which had been fixed by by-law at the last regular meeting. He admitted having permitted the passage of the by-law without raising any objection, but said that he did not understand the reasons advanced for the increase by one mill. Since that meeting he had been questioned by citizens as to the necessity for such increase, and would now ask for some light on the matter. He argued that if the Town were adopting a scale of expenditure not absolutely necessary, it would involve us in a corresponding increase of taxes next year. Two years ago the rate was but 17 mills, last year it rose to 18, and this year it has been fixed at 19 mills; this he thought was altogether too rapid a rate of increase for a town like Peterborough. We are now, he said, almost up to the rate of a city, and if another mill is added next year we shall pass that of Toronto. The Town had a surplus of $2500 from 1901, and an extraordinary revenue of $3,000 from the Water Commissioners, which we cannot reasonably look for next and following years. And should we outrun the estimates this year, the Town will have used up $5,500 of extraordinary revenue. Should the present scale of ordinary expenditure upon which this year's taxes are fixed, he continued, he could not see how, with a number of items of capital expenditure, such as a new school building, new fire hall, and an isolation hospital, facing us, next year's council could avoid raising the taxes another mill. He urged the different committees to remember that they are running on heavy estimates, and to retrench as much as possible.

Ald. Rush, as chairman of the Finance committee, replied that every member of the Council was sorry to see the rate raised, but the estimates had been carefully gone into by the Finance committee, who decided to submit the matter to a Committee of the Whole Council. Ald. McWilliams was notified, as was every member of the Council, but he failed to attend the meeting. That Committee of the Whole was unanimous in recognizing the necessity for fixing the rate at 19 mills. Subsequently the by-law was read three times in Council, and that was the time for Ald. McWilliams to object. Ald. Rush also explained that he had personally consulted several large property owners on the question, and they had expressed their ready acquiescence in the increase. Mr. Wm. Bradburn, who pays $2,400 a year in taxes, or nearly 140th of the whole taxes of the town, agreed that it was perfectly in order to raise the rate to 19 mills.

The Mayor did not think it fair for Ald. McWilliams to make a comparison with Toronto, as the only matters we dispose of by frontage tax are sewers and sidewalks, which are provided for in the city by a general tax. This is a growing town, and our expenditures naturally increase; the demands for school purposes, by the Town Trust Commissioners, wages, and salaries of Town Officials are increasing year by year. He ventured to say that Peterborough compares favorably with any municipality in the country. He also asserted that the Board of Works had more money for expenditure in past years with a 17 mill rate than they have this year with our 19 mills rate.

Ald. Morrison said he believed the people are satisfied to have the rate at 19 mills, providing the money is well spent. Ald. McWilliams appears to assume that each committee is going to spend the whole of its appropriation. This need not necessarily be the case. The Committee on Franchises will probably only spend $200 of the $800 appropriated for its use; this will mean a saving of $600, and other Committees may find themselves in a similar condition. We have an extraordinary expenditure to make this year on wooden sidewalks which have been sadly neglected. These walks will be put in good shape and will then need very little attention for some time. Then the outlying streets are in a dilipidated condition and must be looked after this season. Then the Board of Works have an heavy expenditure to make for the construction of storm-age drains on Hunter street to protect our sewer system. Taking all in all, he thought the ratepayers are well content to pay 19 mills providing they get value for their money. Continuing, he remarked that an old resident had characterised Peterborough's streets as better than those of any town he had ever been in. Then Peterborough compares exceedingly favorably with other towns in the matter of its assessment; the rate for Lindsay is 28 mills; Port Hope 25 mills; Belleville 25 or 28 mills; Collingwood 23 to 25 mills; and all assessors are sworn under the same oath to assess property at its full value. He understood that some property in Port Hope is assessed above its value. "I am prepared, to stand by our rate, and I can't see why Ald. McWilliams should bring this matter up at this time, when he does not know where we will stand at the end of the year."

A SUBSTITUTE.

Ald. Shortly was appointed to act as Chairman of Board of Works in the absence of Ald. Best.

The council then adjourned.

MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP

The Waterworks Pass into the hands of the City

Stratford, May 5.—The consummation of the transfer of the Stratford Water Supply Company to the city took place this morning, when a check for nearly $98,000 was paid over to the company by the city. The whole of the plant, franchise, etc., passed into the hands of the city. The former outside manager, Mr. T. Clark, is now engaged by the city.

A by-law for $100,000 was submitted to the property holders and carried by a large majority. The difference between the amount paid to the Water Company and the $100-000, about $2,000 is held by the city for extraordinary expenditures, as the plant is expected to pay running expenses and gradually repay money expended on capital account. Owing to a clause in the Municipal Act, commissioners cannot be elected till the next session of municipal councillors in January, 1904, the works being run in the meantime by the [illegible] which Alderman Eidt is chairman.

HON. MR. STRATTON IN THE WITNESS BOX---PLEDGES OATH THAT HE NEVER BRIBED THE MEMBER FOR MANITOULIN

Never Paid Him Any Money, Directly or Indirectly, and Never Promised Any---Says That They Only Had One Interview in September, That on the Ninth, When Gamey Stated His Intentions

NEVER HAD ANY DEALINGS WITH EITHER OF THE SULLIVANS OR WITH MR. D. A. JONES, OF BEETON

Declares That the September Letter Was Written Solely on the Suggestion of Mr. A. B. Alyesworth, K. C., Alibi Presented for Noon Hour of Both September 10 and 11.

The long anticipated evidence of the Provincial Secretary, Hon. JR Stratton, was commenced before the Gamey Commissioners this morning. It came sooner than was expected and the crowd in the court room was rather thinner than on previous days.

Mr. Stratton, who was faultlessly attired, gave his evidence quietetly and modestly, but without apparent nervousness. He stated that immediately after the general elections of May last, which were very close, the Premier and the Attorney-General went to England for three months. He (Mr. Stratton) was told by the Premier to take charge of the protests, but after attending a few meetings with Mr. Foy, Mr. Bristol and Dr. Nesbitt, the Conservative negotiators, he abandoned the matter, and told Mr. R. A. Grant, solicitor for the Liberal Association, to take entire charge of the matter.

Mr. Stratton knew nothing about either the failing or the withdrawal of the Manitoulin petition. He had never employed either Captain Sullivan or Frank Sullivan to see Mr. Gamey as to his protest or as to patronage. All he knew of Gamey when he came to see him on September 9 last, was that it was rumored that he would support the Government, and had been elected on that undertaking. On that morning Mr. Stratton arrived from his summer home at Stoney Lake. Shortly after he reached his office Costello, the messenger, ushered in Frank Sullivan and Gamey. The former he had known for several years, and he introduced his companion as the member for Manitoulin. They talked on general subjects for awhile and Gamey asked why the Government did not appoint Mr. Thomas Fresner Justice of the Peace, and was told that he would have to see the Attorney-General. Finally Gamey said he was going to support the Government; their policy was all right, but its administration by the officials was sometimes bad. He also spoke about the protest, and Mr. Stratton advised him to see Mr. Aylesworth, and told him that if he supported the Government he would receive the same consideration as other supporters of the Government.

Subsequently Mr. Stratton met Mr. Aylesworth in the corridor, who suggested that he get Mr. Gamey to sign a letter. He followed the suggestion and drafted one.

"It was a tenative letter, submitted to Mr. Aylesworth at his own suggestion, to use his own judgment in dealing with it," declared the witness.

Mr. Stratton also gave an account of his business in connection with the Nova Scotia Eastern Railway Company, and the Sapphire Corundum Company, which were occupy- [illegible] 11. On September 10 he left the buildings to take the draft letter to Mr. Aylesworth at Osgoode Hall, shortly after twelve o'clock; on September 11 he left the Parliament Buildings shortly after 10 a.m., with Mr. Walter Boland, who was at the Dominion Permanent Loan Building, on King street, until after one o'clock. At half-past one he bought a pair of shoes from Mr. Guinane personally.

"Did you pay Gamey any money, or did you pay anyone money for Mr Gamey?" asked Mr. Johnston.

"Never."

"Did you give Frank Sullivan $3,-000 to divide?"

"No! Nor three cents!" declared Mr. Startton.

"Did you send a man to the smoking room with a packet on any occasion?"

"Never!" was the reply.

He also denied that he had discussed with Gamey the protests in Algoma or that he had held any communication with Mr. D. A. Jones, of Beeton, within the past two years.

He had never had any business dealings, with the Sullivans, either. The word "consideration" was used only in the sense of the consideration a Government supporter ordinarily received.

"I never made a signle appointment with Gamey! He never came to see me except by his own wish!" declared the witness, and added that the only date on which he had seen him in September was the 9th.

"As to where the money came from!" said Mr. Johnston. "I suppose that it would be easy for you to obtain $3,000?"

"Yes, or $30,000!" said Mr. Stratton.

"Out of your own resources?"

"Yes."

The cross-examination was begun in the afternoon.

Warrants Issued.

At the opening of the court this morning warrants were issued to compel the attendance of John Galbraith, and John Hilliar, two Manitoulin witnesses, who have apparently gone home.

Rev. John Francis Guigon, a Mennonite minister of the Gospel, at Long Bay, on the Island of Manitoulin, who affirmed rather than kiss the Bible, was the first witness this morning. He is not Mr. Gamey's spiritual adviser, but a frequent guest at his house, and after the publication of the Globe interview, Gamey told him that he was as good a Conservative as ever, that he had not been bought, as people charged, and that he intended to support the Government on measures in the interest of Manitoulin. Gamey did not deny having signed the Globe interview, but said that in print it looked stronger than he intended.

Cross-examined by Mr. Charles H. Ritchie, K.C., Rev. Mr. Guigon said that after the convention, called to consider Gamey's conduct, he met the later on the road and asked him if were going to resign: Gamey replied: "No! not yet!" and added "There will be something more later on."

Mr. Johnston put in a letter from Mr. Gamey to the editor of the Manitoulin Expositor, after the publication of the Globe interview, telling him that he had not gone over to the Liberals as completely as possible, that neither party properly represented the people, and that there would be a big shaking up of the dry bones in the near future.

Mr. Walter J. Boland, barrister was next called. He states he was solicitor for the Nova Scotia Eastern Railway Company, a project in which Hon. Mr. Stratton is interested. In September last they were very busy trying to arrange for subsidies with the Nova Scotia Government, and the Dominion Government, and naturally saw a great deal of each other. On September 10 he was sent for by Mr. Burrows, at that time Mr. Stratton's secretary, to come to the buildings. He was present when the letter, afterwards signed by Gamey in Mr. Aylesworth's office, was drawn by Mr. Stratton.

The Commissioners ruled that anything Mr. Stratton said as to his motive in drafting the letter would not be evidence.

Mr. Boland then related Mr. Stratton's movements on Sept. 11. They had gone down late in the morning, had separated for awhile and met again. The testimony was produced to show that Mr. Stratton could not have been at the Parliament Buildings during the noon hour on Sept. 11, when Gamey says he got the money.

When Mr. Ritchie undertook the cross-examination of Mr. Boland, the matter of the $3,000 check paid by the Ontario Bank on Sept. 9, was brought up again. It came on that the bond transaction upon which the check was issued was in connection with the Riviere Du Loup Pulp Company of Fraserville, Quebec. Of this company Mr. Stratton is president [illegible] office of the company is at Toronto, and nominally in the Board Room of the Trusts and Guaarntee Company of which Mr. Stratton is also president. Mr. Boland also testified that the directorate of the latter Company is practically the same as that of the Dominion Permanent Loan Company, to which the $3,000 check was paid.

Many other companies in which Messrs. Stratton and Boland are interested also figured in the cross-examination. The witness had done business with Mr. Stratton in connection with the Republic and Kettle Valley Railway. On Sept. 10, when he went to the Parliament Buildings, it was to see Mr. Stratton in connection with the Sapphire Corundum Company, of which the Provincial Secretary had been advertised as a director. Mr. Boland swore that he believed that Mr. Stratton had been named a director without his consent. The company was one S denounced in England as over-capitalized. On the two days in question Mr. Bolands had also seen the Crown Lands Department in connection with the International Gold and Copper Company and other parties in connection with the Silver Antimony Company.

"Can you enlighten us on the question that is going round? Where did the money come from?" suggested Mr. Ritchie.

"I know nothing whatever about it," said Mr. Boland.

Anonymous Letters.

Mr. Blake stated that the prosecution was receiving hourly anonymous letters containing statements so vague that they could not deal with them. He did not want it said afterwards, however, that such and such facts could have been ascertained if proper efforts had been made, and therefore wished to announce that such letters could not be considered unless definite statements were made.

The Chancellor said that he and his brother commissioner saw that Mr. Blake's words were opportune, and that they would invite all persons possessed of information, to make statements in such a way as would enable them to be considered as evidence.

MODERN MOSES WANTED

Who will Aid Starving Thousands to Reach a Land of Plenty

London, May 2—Miss Barclay, of the famous Quaker banking family, is organizing a fund to assist desirable youths and maidens to go to Canada. English Quakers have always had the strongest sympathies and admiration for Canadians. I believe that if the poor had the price of their fares many thousands would leave England. Today one out of every forty is in the poor house, and one out of every four underfed, underclothed, and wretchedly housed. Another Moses is wanted. A dry Atlantic would depopulate England.

EVERYTHING BEING OVERDONE

Significant Declaration of Important Men in New Brunswick

St. John, N. B., May 6. — John Galway, jr., of Scotland, son of the president who controls the Mispec pulp mills, and Messrs. Grusset and Dixon, of Scotland, are here on an inspection tour. Mr. Galloway said the pulp business was overdone all over the world. Over production in this country, Norway, Sweden, and other places has forced the price down so fine that the margin of profits under present conditions was almost invisible. He would not say whether the mills [illegible] continued in operation or not.

The party left for Montreal last evening.

Municipality Has no authority to Give preference in Contracts

Toronto, May 4.—Corporation Counsel Fullerton wrote the board that he had appeared upon the injunction motion of the Crown Tailoring Company to prevent the city from awarding the contract for firemen's clothing to anyone else. Mr. Fullerton had the matter adjourned for a week, but repeats his former statement that the city has no authority to put a clause in the specification applying to the use of one particular label.

The board instructed the solicitor to contest the suit.

His Lordship the Bishop of Toronto Delivers an Address

The Ministerial Association held its regular monthly meeting in the parlor of the Y.M.C.A., yesterday morning. Rev. J. P. Wilson, B.A, President, was in the chair. The following members were present:—Rev. J. P. Wilson, President; Rev. J. A. Wilson, Secretary; Revs. Dr Torrance, J. Bastow, J. C. Davidson, W. J Joliffe, E. A. Langfeldt, J. Kilgour, W. L. After the usual routine business had been transacted the Rev. J. C. Davidson, M.A., Rector of St. Johns', read a paper entitled, "Different Means of Ministerial Co-operation and Fellowship." The paper was a most helpful one. An interesting discussion took place on the points brought out therein.

His Lordship the Bishop of Toronto also addressed the meeting, and in a few kind and encouraging words expressed his pleasure at being present and his delight with the excellent spirit that existed among the ministers of Peterborough.

A COMPARISON

Louis Decker has been convicted of perjury in connection with some franchise legislation in St. Louis, and has been sentenced to four years in the penitentiary. We hear a good deal about the corruption of American politics; but we are apt to overlook the efforts that are made in the direction of purification. Perjury is becoming as common in Canada as weather talk, but we hear of nobody being punished for it. The evidence in the South Oxford election trial was a mass of perjury, but nobody was punished. Will anybody be punished for the perjury that is so significant a feature of the Gamey inquiry?

HONOR TO THE POPE

The visit of King Edward VII. to Pope Leo XIII. last week, was an event of world-wide interest and was marked by ceremonies as picturesque as they were impressive. It was eminently fitting that the representative of the people of Great Britain should personally extend his congratulations to the venerable pontiff at a time when the latter had passed the age of St. Peter, and all Christendom learned with pleasure that the Holy Father, in spite of his great age, was not only as virile intellectually as ever, but was in wonderful physical condition considering his weight of years and the immense amount of work that has rested on his shoulders.

The tribute pain by the King of Great Britain to the Pope also emphasized the friendliness of the Anglican church toward Leo XIII. and the great church of which he is the head. No more imposing figure than the present Pope has appeared in modern times and Christians of all denominations, honor and revere this man of brilliant intellectuality, profound piety and great heart, whose every effort has been toward the uplifting of the human race. During his long career he has been confronted by problems that would have staggered a less courageous individual; but in his serene manner he has triumphed over all difficulties and has seen his devoted followers spread the Gospel to the remotest ends of the earth. He has done a great work for Christianity generally, and particularly for the Catholic church. It can be truthfully said of him that all mankind is his debtor.

Not only in a strictly spiritual sense has Leo XIII. earned the veneration of all Christendom. His encyclicals on the great social problems of the times are models of wisdom and will stand as masterpieces for all time. There has been no problem affecting the welfare of humanity in which he has not taken a deep interest and on which he has not given the soundest advice. He has always pitied the oppressed, whether oppression was of a political nature or of industrial character, and on many occasions he has lifted up his voice in behalf of the great army of workers whose lives are passed mostly in the shadow.

King Edward spent twenty minutes in private conversation with the Pope and the greetings on both sides were most cordial. To those privileged persons who witnessed the ceremonious reception of the British King at the Vatican the event will never be forgotten. The scene presented a magnificent subject for a great painter. The rich costumes of the church dignitaries, the picturesque uniforms of the guards, duplicates of those worn in mediaeval times, formed an ensemble that would have taxed the genius of Raphael.

At the close of this great and good Pontiff's reign approaches his soul must be exalted and comforted by the homage that is coming to him from all parts of the civilized world, but even more elevating must be the inward consciousness that he has lived a full life in the highest sense, and that the world has been immeasurably benefitted by his labors and his illustrious example of piety and benevolence.

A Sensitive Man.

"Ah! good morning," said a well-known gentleman, addressing a man whom he met in the street.

"How are you, Colonel?"

"Look here," the first speaker, after a short pause, continued, "every day I discover additional evidences of the fact that you do not like me. Why is it?"

"Do you mean why you discover the evidences or why I do not like you?"

"Why you do not like me, of course."

"Well, in the first place, you are such an outrageous liar."

"Yes."

"And, in the second place, it has been proved that you are a thief."

"Well," said the Colonel, "I merely wanted to know, and it strikes me that your reasons are very good. I am a sensitive man, and it nettles me to think that anyone dislikes me without a cause. I am glad you have expressed yourself so clearly."

DEAF

FOR THIRTEEN YEARS

Mr. Geo. Warner, publisher of the Masonic Register Toronto was almost totally deaf in both ears for a number of years. He experimented with a thousand different remedies and only go relief by using Catarrhozone and it cured

Mr. Warner says: "For the past thirteen years my hearing has been badly affected. The streets were as as quiet to me as if I lived in the city of the dead. I could neither hear the noise of the street cars or sound of horses feet on the pavement. Before I had used Catarrhozone Inhaler three days I was able to notice a great change in my condition, which gradually improved until now I can hear a whisper across the room. I cannot tell you how much I appreciate Catarrhozone, or of the wonderful results I have derived from using it. Catarrhozone has my strongest endorsement and I am quite willing that you should use it."

Mr. Warner's unsolicited testimonial furnishes abundant proof that deafness can be cured, even in old age, if Catarrhozone is used. This remedy is scientific in its application and meets with the endorsement of prominent ministers and doctors all over Canada. Our best equipped health institutions always keep it on hand, and cases are recorded where it has been used with great success in the Government deaf and dumb institutions where other means proved futile.

If you hearing is poor, if you have head noises or ringing in the ears, be sure and use Catarrhozone. It is a regular miracle worker and is sure to help you. Complete outfit costs $1; trial size 25 cents. Sold by all druggists and N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

Buried Gold

By FRED WHISHAW.

Author of "A Boyar of the Terrible," etc.

here. As to this chap, now—it was in Southampton you saw him, wasn't it?"

"That's it. He'd had an illness at 'Frisco, he said, and it made him feel a bit mad now and then."

"Ah, he's come to Seadown to recruit, I dare say; nice balmy sea-air, kind friends to nurse him, and so on; a sweetheart, maybe, what he left behind him."

"Well, he may be in Seadown now, but I saw him in Southampton day before yesterday, though he did say he'd be in Seadown presently."

"Now see here, young man," said the talkative stranger; "I don't mind tellin' you, as it's you, and I like your intelligent face, that I believe you're talkin' of one of those we're most particular anxious to find; if so, you sha'n't lose by it, and I may say you're in luck. Now listen to what I say. Me and my mate here are boarding at Southampton for the present. You can hear of us at the Blue Dragon. I dare say you wouldn't object to earnin' a five pound note, now?"

Harry grinned. "Not if it's to be done honest," he said.

"Perfectly honest and above board. We want this 'ere man from San Francisco. We came from there ourselves, arrivin' only yesterday. He had two weeks' start of us. We want him, as I say—a matter of money owing to us by him—he's absconded, in fact. We knew he had friends in Seadown, and that's why we're askin' about the place and him and all. You go on to Seadown, now, and see if you can hear of him. If he ain't there come and tell us at the Blue Dragon, and come and tell us if he is, too. P'r'aps you'd better stay there till he does come, and when he comes you've got to tell us."

"Give me a pound or two down for good faith and I'll do it," said Harry. "How'm I to know you're genuine if you don't?"

The men produced a sovereign and some silver. "That'll be all right," he said. "No receipt required, and four more when we nab our man."

"If I could do a day's work like this once a week," thought Harry as he walked on towards Seadown after seeing his new friends start in the other direction, "I shouldn't want to go to sea."

Meanwhile things had gone very uneventfully at Seadown.

Though two years had now passed since the fatal day upon which Denys Drake and his companions, her father included, had sailed from Southampton, Jessie did not give up hope. Her brothers, sailors all, contrived to keep the roof over her head, and were kind and good to her in the main; but in the matter of Drake's fate and their father's they were plain spoken as to their opinion.

"Old dad's drawn his last pay," they told her. "No doubt of that, and young Drake too. You'd better forget him, Jess: he ain't the only good fish in these waters. There's plenty others swimming about what'd come to your net once it was set. You can't expect the chaps to come about you so long as your eyes are red for poor Drake."

"I don't want them to," said Jessie. "Not yet, anyway. Men have come back from the sea what've been lost for two years, yes, and longer, too; and so may father and Denys."

"Well, it'll be better for us all when you begin to think otherwise," said Tom Foster. "You're a good girl, Jess, but you must think of other people a bit as well as yourself." This meant that the brothers found it hard to keep up a home for her, and the thought of it made the girl miserable. Nevertheless she determined to "hold on for a bit yet" before casting her net for another fish, as her brother so prosaically expressed it.

Since the occasion on which he had paid Ruby a silent visit of sympathy soon after the news of the "Hecuba's" disappearance had reached her, Keith had seen the girl several times. He was generally at sea, but whenever he returned home he paid her a visit, and once or twice they walked out together. On these occasions he was as helplessly idiotic in her presence as ever. Keith felt that he ought to speak sympathetically about poor Dick, and began with a praiseworthy attempt to say something kind about his dead friend: something that would show the girl that he felt for her and bore no grudge for her somewhat brusque dismissal of his suit two years ago.

But Ruby was not in the least anxious to talk about Dick Robinson, and had little to say on the subject. She dismissed it quickly and talked of other things.

"I oughtn't to have mentioned him," thought poor Keith; "it pains her—I never can do the right thing with maids."

This would depress him and paralyze for a while his powers of conversation, never very marked, and this in turn would anger Ruby, who was impatient when in Keith's society, longing for a better understanding and irritated by the blindness of the lad who would not discern what should have been plain to any man who was not a born fool in such matters.

"Any other man would have me in his arms for half the encouragement he gets from me," Ruby sighed. "And a man like him to be so modest—the best lookin' and the bravest and the darlingest of them all."

And Ruby would stamp her foot and tell herself the lad was a simple fool and not worth the love of a maid, and she'd bother about him no longer—well knowing all the while that she could not obey this self-proffered advice even if she would, and that she would not have Keith changed one atom from what he was—not even to be less "a fool with maids," or less modest and retiring—not for worlds and worlds.

Thus the love history of these two young hearts moved very slowly forward; so slowly that the progress was almost entirely unnoticeable, yet, somehow, there was progress, for at the end of the two years Keith had at least learned this much—that he had not, as he had fondly imagined, abandoned all idea of Ruby as a maid who might be loved with some reasonable chance of being eventually won.

After his rebuff and her acceptance (as he believed) of Dick Robinson as her lover, Keith had recognized the inevitable, abandoning all hope and dismissing all idea of winning the girl. He had persuaded himself that he had uprooted every particle of his love for her. "What's the good of letting it bide?" he had said to himself. "If it can't do no good to anyone, not to her and not to me, it's got to go."

So Keith bade his love go, and imagined, poor fool, that it would depart for the telling; imagined, even, that it had gone.

But lately he had found out that the impertinent little love-god had by no means flitted, frightened away. He still remained at hand to tease him with those poignant arrows of his. This was progress, of a kind.

With this discovery came a second, namely, that since Dick Robinson was drowned and no longer to be considered as his successful rival, there was no reason why Keith should not aspire, after a decent and reasonable period of mourning and waiting, to renew his efforts to make an impression upon the heart of the maid he so loved. True, his previous efforts had ended disastrously, and a renewal of wooing might bring about renewed disappointment. But true courage is that which returns to the attack again and again, though beaten off, until defeat is changed into victory.

Thus it happened that now, rather more than two years after the sailing of the "Hecuba" and his first rejection by Ruby, Keith suddenly realized that he was not only very much in love indeed, but that he was once again in full pursuit of the maid whose heart he had long ago given up as a prize beyond the reach of his aspirations.

Forgot Where He Had Found Gold.

"There's a man with a hard luck story beside which our troubles look like 30 cents," said one human derelict to another as they stood in front of a cheap lodging-house. The man to whom he referred had just emerged from the building. He slouched along in a despondent way, with downcast eyes, stooped shoulders and that look of resigned hopelessness peculiar to those who have long been well-nigh penniless and never expect to be anything else. As he disappeared into a neighboring saloon, the man who had pointed him out to his companion resumed his story.

"I knew that fellow well when we were both prospecting for gold in Southwestern Arizona. He, like most of us, had been at it a long time without having any luck, and was down to hard pan, when one day he suddenly turned up with a bunch of nuggets rich enough in gold to make your eyes pop out of your head. He started in to whoop it up, and whoop it up he did until his stake was gone. Meanwhile he had told enough to convince us all that he had found a bonanza, but no amount of persuasion would induce him even to hint at its location. About the time he went broke the 'rot gut' he'd been drinkin' got in its work and he had the 'Willies' as bad as I ever saw a man have 'em. When he came to, his memory was gone. Not a single event in his past could he recall for months, when some portions of it began to come slowly back to him. The location of his bonanza, where nuggets of the richest kind could be picked up from the surface, could never again be recalled by him, not even a general idea as to its direction, and to this day it remains among the many lost gold mines of that locality."

"Gee, that's enough to make a man swear off forever, and I'd do it if I thought I could remember where there is a gold mine," said the second derelict as he and his companion followed the "man with a history" into the saloon.

A Legend.

The following Oriental legend is not without its application in the West:

There was once a youthful dude named Ali Hamid, and another of the same genus named Abou Ben Aka.

They met one day in the street, and Ali Hamid enquired of the other where he was going.

"To the Grand Mosque," he replied, "for this is the day when rich and poor alike go thither to implore the mercy of the Prophet."

"I am going there, too," said Ali Hamid, but first I must find a beautiful horse richly caparisoned in order to cut a good figure."

"I envy you," said Ben Aka, "for I am so crippled with debts that I am compelled to go as humbly as possible, to let my creditors see that I am retrenching."

"My dear friend," replied Ali Hamid, "my creditors are quite as pressing as yours, and it is precisely for their benefit that I am going to make myself as gorgeous as possible to day."

They both went to the Mosque, the one modestly on foot, and the other riding upon a magnificent high-stepper.

"Ah!" said the creditors. "Ben Aka is evidently in a bad way. Only see what he has come down to!" And they promptly had him arrested for debt.

On the other hand, they decided that Ali Hamid must have come into money, and determined to leave him alone for the present.

The moral is that, although it is no crime to be poor, it is something very like one to appear so.

His Impropriety.

They were alone. Far away across the wide, beautiful park that surrounded her father's mansion they could see the stately walls of the noble building peeping from among the trees. It was an ideal spot for the confession that he longed to make.

Behind them the high iron fence completely covered with sweet-scented vines shut them off from the great, unromantic world and made their seclusion sure and complete.

"What a glorious afternoon it is," he said at last, as her fingers stole into his hand.

"Ah, it is heavenly," she sighed, looking up out of her big, soulful eyes at him.

"How I wish," he said, "that it might last forever and that you and I might remain here alone together through all eternity."

"Henry!" she exclaimed, drawing away from him. "How can you say such a thing?"

There was a frightened look in her eyes; her beautiful red lips were parted as if in fear and her whole splendid form seemed to be filled with a sudden emotion of terror.

"Darling," he replied, "forgive me if I have said anything that is wrong. But what is it? How have I overstepped the bounds of propriety? Tell me—tell me my loved one, that I may undo my wrong."

"Ah, dearest," she said, nestling upon his breast and sobbing for joy. "I knew—I knew you could not mean it. If we were to remain here through all eternity I could not establish a residence in South Dakota and get my divorce, you see. And think how improper it would be for us to be here alone while I was the wife of another man."—Chicago paper.

The Astute Salesman.

An astute salesman was enjoined by his employer to be strictly honest—but to sell goods.

Next day the salesman displayed some new fabrics, saying to the lady shoppers:

"Here is some calico that looks just like silk." But they turned up their noses scornfully.

The following day he said to the same shoppers:

"Here is some silk that is made to look like calico." And they bought every yard of it.

This shows us that we should use due judgment as to which end of a truth is first presented.—"Judge."

Last week a man entered the cafe of one of the old hotels in New York, called for a glass of brandy, drank it and fell dead. The verdict was death from heart disease; but the incident recalls the story of poor Frank Brower, to whom a new barkeeper at the Metropolitan Hotel said, "Just pay for that brandy before you drink it!" "W-w-what?" stammered Brower; "is it so in-in-instantaneous in its effects?"

A Sure Thing

Some people think the proposed electric railway from Cornwall to Toronto will never be built, but this is an error, says the Kingston Whig. The capitalists have already invested $20,000 in the scheme, and do not intend to throw it away. Mr. Smith, one of the promoters, is ill in Boston, but is hopeful of being around in a short time. One of the wealthiest men in the United States is behind the scheme.

Interesting Items.

The experiments made on the roads near Saint Germain and Versailles with sprinkling crude petroleum to prevent dust are highly successful, and will be largely extended to other routes near Paris, Lyons, Nice and Marseilles.

According to "La Vie Illustree," the last surviving witness of the Battle of Waterloo is Mme. Marie Therese Dupuis, now living at Chapelle-lez-Herlaimont, near Charleroi. The old woman recently celebrated her one hundredth birthday. She lives with her two sons. The ages of the three of them total two hundred and forty-five years. Mme. Dupuis was the daughter of a small farmer named Roland.

The Swiss have been stirred to bitter wrath by the rapidity with which motorcars career along their roads. Formal instructions have been given to the police that when a motorist does not slow down and submit to arrest, the next police station along his route shall be warned by telephone, and "obstacles shall be placed in the road to arrest his progress."

In the concluding scene of a piece called "The Bandits," at the London Hippodrome, a mill is blown up with dynamite, letting loose a mighty rush of water, which falls down in a cataract the height of the stage and sweeps away a bridge just as a coach and four horses attempt to cross, carrying horses, coach and occupants into the raging torrent. It is the most marvelous piece of realism ever seen in London.

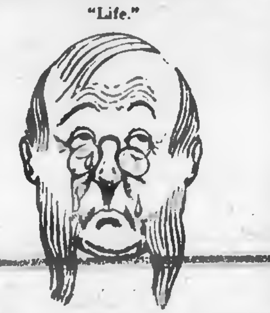
The remarkable disclosure that one of the ancient Roman statuettes in the museum at Vienna is found to be indisputably made from the worn out mouthpieces of pipes and cigar holders, will send a shock through all the cabinets (with a small c) in Europe. It is now asserted that the majority of the antique works of art of this description are the work of contemporary Greeks, who appear to have made this unsavory industry theirs.

Hallie Erminie Rives, the authoress, recently assumed editorial charge of a daily paper of Atlantic City for one issue, the receipts of the day's sales going to aid the Atlantic City Hospital. Some remarkable stories are told of her labors. She conscripted a staff of special writers and, it is said, detailed a prominent pastor to report a ball, a musician of international reputation to do the police court, and a political boss to write an article denouncing the corrupt methods of modern elections.

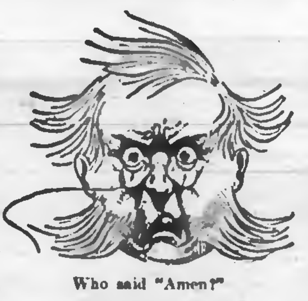
Carleton F. Hodge, editor of the "Independent" of Assumption, Ill., is threatened with prosecution by a prominent official of the St. Joseph Savings Bank at South Bend, Ind., for printing the Bible in his newspaper. Editor Hodge says he proposes to continue to use a chapter of the Bible each week, despite this threat. At this rate it will take more than fifty years to complete the publication. "It is to chapters of Genesis and Deuteronomy that the bank official objects," said Hodge. "He wrote me a letter saying there were spots and places in the Bible that were not fit to be put before the public for perusal. For my part I consider that anything that is fit to be the basis of Christianity and to be taught to children in Sunday schools is good enough to be submitted to newspaper readers along with news items of the day."

A Little Study in Expression.

"Life."



Brother Smoothly—Ah, yes, brethren and sisters, I feel to-night that I ought to confess, in the words of the apostle that I am "the chief of sinners," and——



Who said "Amen?"

Not a Satisfactory Answer.

"Dearie, I didn't know that wheat could be harvested in the winter time, and yet I see in this newspaper something about the price of January wheat. When I was a girl on the farm the wheat always ripened in July or August," and her face wore a troubled look as she laid down the paper in which she had happened to glance at the market reports while looking for the society gossip.

"Wheat doesn't ripen in January now any more than it did when we were young, my love," replied her husband. "The terms you refer to do not mean that the wheat ripened in January, but that it was sold for delivery in that month. It was harvested in July, just as it used to be, stored, and kept for use at some future time. The supply thus accumulated is then sold to various buyers, some of whom want it delivered in one month and others in other months. Sales thus made are called 'futures,' and form the basis of much of the gambling that takes place on 'Change."

"How interesting! Now tell me what 'squeezing the shorts' means."

He mused a moment, and then realizing the impossibility of properly explaining the term in his limited time, said:

"You are much shorter than I, you know. Well, when I put my arms around you I 'squeeze a short:' see?"

"Oh, indeed! Well, if that's what you men do on 'Change it accounts for your devotion to business."

And he realized that he had made a mistake.

To know mankind is easy; but to comprehend any one man or woman is impossible.

Published Ocean Newspaper

Southampton, May 2—The steamer Philadelphia, of the American line, which arrived from New York, published an edition of an ocean newspaper at sea yesterday. It contained a summary of the news of the week, a column of local wavelets, and some editorial paragraphs. The title of the paper was the Philadelphia Marconi Bulletin. The Philadelphia, which is equipped with wireless apparatus, sailed from New York last Wednesday.

FOR IMPERIAL DEFENSE

Australia Strong for Supporting an Imperial Navy

London, May 4—The British Ministers warmly welcome the strong attitude of Premier Seddon on New Zealand on the defence question in urging the New Zealand Parliament to increase its navy subsidy from $100,000 to $200,000 yearly. He said that if he found the New Zealanders prepared to go on ignoring that which maintained her highway or weakened the Empire, not recognizing the necessity of keeping Britain safe as the mistress of the seas, they must get another Premier.

Ottawa, May 2—The Canada Atlantic chief engineer, Mr. Mountain, has purchased a new gasoline touring car for inspecting the railway. The new car is built to run from twenty to fifty miles an hour with ease. These cars are now being adopted in the States for the use of section gangs, and are there built to carry twenty men. Thus a larger area of ground is covered with larger gangs and it may be that the Canada Atlantic will adopt these in connection with their proposed new system of doing section work.

A Conscientious Sabbatarian.

A commercial traveling man landed at Edinburgh, Scotland, one Saturday night, too late to get out of town for Sunday. The next day he found that there was actually no form of amusement in the whole city to assist him in whiling away the day. He went to the proprietor of the hotel to see if he could suggest a way of passing the remainder of the day.

The landlord took pity on the stranger and took him to one of the rooms in the house in which a number of Scotchmen were playing a game called nap, which is a sort of modification of seven-up. They were playing for a shilling a point, so that the game was a pretty stiff one.

The stranger got in the game and played very cautiously, for he was quite sure that the players, or at least some of them, were cheating. One solemn-faced Scot, he was especially sure, he caught cheating a number of times. He began whistling a part of some vagrant tune. The Scot who had been cheating arose from the table and threw down the cards.

"What is the matter?" the other players asked.

"I'm gangin' awa'," the Scot answered, glaring at the stranger. "I'll play cards wi' no mon that whustles on the Sabbath."

What Did He Mean?

Mr. Fussilove's mother-in-law remarked pathetically the other day, "I don't suppose that I have more than another ten years to live, yet I would give two years of my existence at this moment for a nice melon." Mr. Fussilove left the room with great alacrity, and shortly afterwards returned bearing a large parcel which he placed politely on the table before his respected relative by marriage. On opening it she found it contained five melons!—Ex.

The Minersville Gold Mining —and Milling Company—

(Organized under the laws of Oregon.)

CAPITAL STOCK, - - $1,000,000.00
PAR VALUE SHARES, - - $1.00

(Full Paid and Non-Assessable.

The property of this company consists of three full claims known as the "Fleur de lis," "Mayflower," and "Mistletoe" Group, embracing an area of sixty acres of highly mineralized ground, located in the famous Sumpter district, Baker county, Oregon, about 3½ miles from McEwen on the Sumpter Valley Railroad.

The best evidence we have to offer as to our "being in good company" is to mention a few of those who are our immediate neighbors, viz: the North Pole, Bonanza, Red Boy, Eureka Columbia, Golconda, Cracker, Oregon, Golden Wizard, all of which are in this same district, producing from [illegible] to $100,000.00 per month each.

From the preliminary amount of development work already done on our property and from the assays of ore which is entirely free milling, running $14.00 to $150.00 per ton, we are confident that with the installation of modern machinery we have a proposition worthy of the most searching enquiry by those seeking a high grade investment.

Our board of directors consists of men who have a practical knowledge of mining, well known and of high standing, who have invested every available dollar of their own to acquire this valuable property and put it on a dividend paying basis.

To accomplish this it has been decided to place a limited amount of the treasury stock on sale at 15c per share for development purposes only until such time as the condition of the mine will enable it to take care of itself, when the sale of stock will be withdrawn.

Our prospectus will give you all particulars. Let us send it to you. We shall also be pleased to answer all enquiries whether by mail or in person at our office.

TWO-TEN OIL CO.
of Boulder, Colorado.

Capital Stock, 1,500,000 shares. In Treasury, 500,000 shares

TRANSFER OFFICE; BRISTOL, CONN.

This Company has a perpetual lease on 20 acres of proven oil land in SECTION NINE (9) of the Boulder district, and this section and the immediate vicinity have the best and largest number of producing wells in the entire district.

Our Well No. 1 came in, in January and is now pumping and shipping Oil regularly to the Refinery.

The Directors have decided to put down well No. 2 at once, and they now offer a block of the Treasury stock for the next 30 days at

10 Cents per Share, after that price will be advanced.

It is a well known fact that a 15 barrel well will pay over 100 per cent. profit upon its cost.

This is no longer a speculation for we have proved that oil is on [illegible] in paying quantities, with two wells pumping we can soon pay dividends, and every well we put down increases our earning capacity.

STOCK MARKETS

PROFESSIONAL TRADER'S MARKET

New York, May 4.—There is not much to be said about existing state of the market affairs; it is simply one of those periodic periods which appear from time to time, it being a notable fact that each spring a few days of market relaxation put in an appearance, accompanied by a slowness of trading. Such periods usually occur after a smart decline or a prolonged advance. They are rest intervals as a rule between active periods, and the market usually, when it awakens, moves in the opposite direction to the one taken by it in the movement prior to the rest period. If you will search the Wall street records, you will find such to have been the case nine times out of ten. There exists a very natural reason for such condition; it is because a prolonged upward movement results in distribution of stocks to many holders, many taking much more on hand than they can conveniently and properly care for in case of a reverse market movement. Such was the case last September. A prolonged downward movement causes a drift of prices. The latter process termed liquidation, then comes the dull period, which is followed by the move in the opposite direction. Such dull periods is what we are having right now. Again stocks are inordinary cheap at the moment, down from ten to forty dollars per share since September 1st. They must appeal to the lovers of good bargains. Take that standard investment security, the exponent of American railroading, a continuous dividend paying stock since 1853, namely Pennsylvania, down around 137 from 170 in six months. In a few days it swells ex-dividend 3 per cent., and shortly after about 3 per cent. more, selling ex-rights. It will certainly look low, and is really a bargain. All the standard rails are in similar condition at the moment as far as prices are concerned. We strongly urge you to open an account and buy in accordance with your means, as we afford special facilities for carrying on margin 10 shares upward. Upon a marginal deposit with our house of $5.00 per share, the man of average means can through us avail himself of the market's present opportunity equally as well as his richer neighbor.

[illegible] above 138, Missouri Pacific above 111 etc. There appears to be a slow growing tendency to buy stocks. Lower money rates are creating more stock and bond buyers. We are favorable to the long side at the present time, and suggest moderate short sales of cotton, wheat, and corn should command still better prices.

PUREST OF WATER

How Absolutely Pure Water May be Obtained Cheaply

The American Mineral Water Machine Co., of 305-309 East 43rd Street, New York, N.Y., has been engaged during the past six years in manufacturing machines for supplying pure carbonated water to hotels, hospitals, restaurants and private dwellings, and that they are a success is evidenced by their use in such well-known places as The Waldorf-Astoria, Gilsey House, Hotel Empire, Rectors', Cafe Martin, Hann's Healey's, Bellvue Hospital, New York Hospital, and hundreds of other establishments.

The Company is now manufacturing an automatic machine to be installed in depots, ferry-houses, office buildings, summer resorts and all public places. These machines will supply a large glass of pure carbonated water for the sum of one penny and will prove of immense benefit to those who desire a glass of absolutely pure water.

The Company has its factory and offices at 305-307 and 309 East 43rd Street, New York. Its capital stock is $1,200,000, of which $500,000 is preferred stock paying 8 per cent. per annum (2 per cent. quarterly). The preferred stock has lately been increased from $300,000 to $500,000, and this $200,000 is now offered for subscription at par ($100). The dividends have always been paid and the business is on a sound commercial basis, the officers being gentlemen of experience and reliability. The President and General Manager is Mr. John Mulholland, who is well known amongst a large and conservative class of investors as a man of exceptional executive ability.

Anyone desiring an investment of undoubted stability and merit can get full particulars by applying to Adlert Weldon, 128 Broadway, New York, or J. F. Brennan, 201-202 Winthrop Bldg., Boston, Mass.

Invitation to visit the factory is cordially given.

A RICH PROPERTY

The National Oil Reporter of April 25th predicts a steady and ultimately tremendous rise in the price of crude petroleum, caused by the course of the Standard Oil Company.

In the article referred to the Reporter says: "We have learned of plans by the Standard Oil Company to constantly force up the price of petroleum. * * * Not that the Standard is philanthropic, but because it is finding its reserve being so steadily reduced by the world's demands that it has adopted strenuous methods to stimulate production. * * * The Standard has decided that the only solution of meeting the increased demand for high grade oil is to give such tremendous stimulus to the development of new fields by frequent and substantial advances in prices to producers as will insure the development of new fields by drilling."

The new district in Green River, Grand County, Utah, is unquestionably the richest depository of high grade petroleum yet discovered in America, and the oil is of the highest grade. The excitement in that district is now at a fever heat and oil lands are rapidly rising in value. The Florence Oil Company, of which mention is made in another column, were fortunate in getting into this field early, and have 1280 acres of choice land with every indication in their favor. The Company has an experienced field manager and are so confident of big results that their officers and directors have agreed to serve without pay until the Company is on a dividend basis. This is in itself a guarantee of entire faith in the proposition. They will begin work as soon as the weather conditions will permit. We feel confident that purchasers of the first allotment of stock now being offered at 20 cents per share will reap rich returns.

A MAGNIFICENT INVESTMENT

THE GOLD TUNNEL COMPANY.
PRESCOTT, ARIZONA

The Company owns in SIX PARALLEL VEINS of GIGANTIC SIZE, one of the largest GOLD PROPOSITIONS in the country. Each of these six veins would make a mine by itself.

The Company, by purchase and consolidation, has succeeded in acquiring the entire length of these great GOLD BEARING ledges; covering an area six thousand feet in length and about two thousand feet wide. The Company owns this valuable property free of any incumbrance.

The ground included in this group of mines gives ample evidence of tremendous natural disturbances, and shows plainly on the surface the acid and mineral stains characteristic of a heavy mineralized gold lead of gigantic proportions.

Six Miles of Gold Bearing Veins

Through the length of four of the mining claims; forming a continuous line 6,000 feet long run THREE LEDGES so close together as to be economically worked from one opening; they aggregate from 85 to 200 feet in width.

The adjoining line of three mining claims shows a ledge 4,500 feet in length, varying in width from 7 to 200 feet, with the same character of ore.

Beginning at the south end of the "Eighty-Four" mining claim, is a fifth large ledge carrying good values in GOLD, and running in a northerly direction for a distance of fully forty-five hundred feet.

Two mining claims on the east side show GOLD BEARING CROPPINGS 40 to 50 feet wide through their entire length, a distance of three thousand feet.

All of the ledges are well mineralized, carrying at grass-root values in gold running from about $2.00 to $6.00 per ton.

Charlie Pogue Again in Trouble

Charlie Pogue, a former resident of Peterborough is giving the Hamilton police lots of work these days. They had to arrest him again Saturday. This time he is in trouble over a horse deal. THE PRICE OF COAL

The price of coal for May shipment at Suspension Bridge is $4.70 per ton. In Peterborough the coal men charge $7 per ton.

This may or may not be an argument in favor of municipal coal yards; it depends upon what is regarded as a fair profit.

A VERY SAD DEATH

Mrs. E. M. Poussette Suddenly Passes Away Yesterday Afternoon

It is with profound sorrow that we announce the death of Mrs. E. M. Poussette, of town, which took place yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

The deceased was the second daughter of the late Richard Meade, of Ashburnham, and was only 21 years of age. She leaves besides a husband a baby daughter scarcely a week old, and two sisters—Mrs. W. T. Hall and Miss Meade, of town.

The deceased was a member of St. Luke's church, and was beloved and esteemed by all who knew her. She was married to Mr. Poussette about a year and a half ago. The Times extends its sincere sympathy to the bereaved husband and sisters in their great sorrow.

MR. STONE LEAVING TOWN

The Well Known Barrister will shortly Remove to London

General regret will be felt when it is known that Mr. E. B. Stone, the well known lawyer, is about to remove to London, Ontario. Mr. Stone has accepted a partnership in a law firm in that city, as senior member, and will leave in a few days for the western city.

During his residence in Peterborough, extending over a period of 18 years, Mr. Stone has made hosts of warm friends. In his profession he was very successful, and we believe it can be truthfully said he has not an enemy among the legal fraternity of the town or district, and certainly very few, if any, amongst the business men. The Times will join in wishing him prosperity in his new home. In this case it may honestly be said, what's Peterborough's loss is London's gain.

PRETTY CHEEKS

A Food That Makes Girls Sweet to Look Upon

The right food for young ladies is of the greatest importance to their looks, to say nothing of the health. Thin, sallow girls don't get the right food you may be absolutely certain. A Brooklyn girl says: "For a long time in spite of all I could do I was thin, skinny and nervous. My cheeks were so sunken my friends used to remark on how bad I looked. I couldn't seem to get strength from my food—meat, potatoes, bread, &c. So I tried various medicines without help.

"I often read about Grape-Nuts, but never tried the food until one day something impressed me that perhaps if I would eat Grape-Nuts for my nerves and brain I could digest and get the good of my food. So I started in. The food with cream was fascinating to my taste and I went in for it regularly twice a day.

"Well I began to improve and now while on my third package I have changed so my friends congratulate me warmly, ask me what in the world I have taken, &c, &c.. My cheeks are plump and rosy and I feel so strong and well. I sleep sound and it seems as though I couldn't get enough to eat. Thank you sincerely for making Grape-Nuts." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason for Grape-Nuts.

DEATH OF JOHN AGNEW

Which Occurred at His Home in Ashburnham Saturday Afternoon

We regret to record the death of Mr. John Agnew a highly respected citizen of Ashburnham, which occurred on Saturday at his home on Monroe Avenue.

Deceased gentleman was 56 years of age and was born in Ireland. On coming to Canada in his twentieth year, he resided first at Cookstown, and then in Lakefield, where he was united in marriage to Miss Ann McClennan, sister of the late James McClennan, of town. About 25 years ago he came to Ashburnham, where he resided until his death.

The late Mr. Agnew was an active member of Mark street Methodist church and for many years was a member of the Quarterly Official Board.

Deceased leaves a wife and three sons, Joseph H., George A., of town and Frederick James, of Cavan, and two daughters, Mrs. T. J. Calvert, of Toronto, and Mrs. E. A. Jordon, of Brampton.

The funeral will be conducted by Court Peterborough, C.O.F., and will take place this afternoon at 2.30 from the family residence, Monroe Avenue, Ashburnham, to Little Lake Cemetery.

Our Competent Treasurer

The following extract from the report of Mr. J. B. Laing, Provincial Municipal Auditor to the Attorney-General for Ontario, will be of interest to Peterborough people:—

"This town has a thoroughly competent Treasurer, Mr. Felix Brownscombe, who has held office since 1896 His salary of $700. I understand, is to be increased, which is only fair to a man of his integrity and abilities. The receipts of the town for 1901 were $145,516.13, and the payments $150,147.69. For 1902 the receipts and payments are both much larger. The community seems to be a prosperous one and full of enterprise. Assessment roll for 1901 foots up $4,597,490. Tax rate, 18 mills on the dollar.

TWO YOUNG GIRLS LEAVE THEIR HOMES

And have Been Located in Buffalo With Two Young Men

THE MEN WILL BE ARRESTED

A Sensation in Berlin and Waterloo as Parties are well Known

Galt, May 4. — About two weeks ago two young men, whose names are withheld for the present, until they are arrested, met two young young Berlin girls named Annie Billechi and Mary White, each of whom is about 15 or 16 years of age, and whose parents live in the west ward, and persuaded them to leave their happy homes and accompany them to Buffalo, says the Berlin Telegraph. The young girls hesitated, but the attractions and other good things in Buffalo were painted in glowing word pictures by the young men, who were seven or eight years older than the girls, and they finally consented and left Berlin, and the quartette arrived in Buffalo.

The parents of the girls notified Constable Huber, who set the wheels of justice in motion to secure the wandering girls, and learning that tickets had been purchased for Buffalo, he communicated with the police authorities of that city.

No word of the quartette was received for some days, but this morning Constable Huber received a telegram which stated that the two girls had been found by the Buffalo police, and that Annie Billechi was willing to return home providing transportation costs were forwarded, but that Mary White positively refused to return to Berlin.

It is quite probable that the two young men will be arrested on the charge of abduction and will be returned to Berlin at an early date. The girls will be brought back at an any rate.

Weather Notes

Tuesday —Showery with a little higher temperature.

—The granolithic sidewalk in front of Mr. Dunn's store on Charlotte st., is being dug up and relaid on account of being too low at the south side, thereby holding back large quantities of water after a rain. Whose fault is this?

Will Command the Guides

Ottawa, May 5.—It is said that Lieut. A. C. Caldwell will command the company of guides to be established under Lord Dundonald's militia reform scheme.

Starting and Staying.

At the start in a long race, the advantage often appears to be with an outsider. But the race is won not in starting but in staying. The quality which wins is staying power. It is so in the race of life. Staying power wins, and as a rule the best stayer is the man with the best stomach. All physical strength is derived from food which is properly digested and assimilated. When the food eaten is only partly digested and assimilated there is a loss of nutrition which means a loss of strength and the general result is physical break-down.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery gives strength and staying power, because it cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It enables the perfect digestion and assimilation of the food eaten, and so strengthens the body naturally by the nutrition derived from food.

"I was troubled with indigestion for about two years," writes Wm. Bowker, Esq., of Juliaetta, Latah Co., Idaho. "I tried different doctors and remedies but to no avail, until I wrote to you and you told me what to do. I suffered with a pain in my stomach and left side and thought that it would kill me. Now I am glad to write this and let you know that I am all right. I can do my work now without pain and I don't have that tired feeling that I used to have. Five bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and two vials of his 'Pleasant Pellets' cured me."

Accept no substitute for Golden Medical Discovery. There is nothing "just as good" for diseases of the stomach, blood and lungs.

Dr. Pierce's Pellets are easy and pleasant to take. A most effective laxative.

CROSS-EXAMINATION OF HON. MR. STRATTON, DESCRIBES $3,000 CHECK

And Sullivan's Opportune Telegram as Such---No Knowledge of X. Y. Z. Letter---Campaign Fund Looked Into---Other Ministers of Crown to Testify

REPARTEE CHECKED BY THE CHANCELLOR AS NOT BEING EVIDENCE.

The cross-examination of Mr. Stratton was continued this morning by Mr. Blake and was more severe than any in which the famous counsel has indulged in during the present investigation. He was also in a humorous mood, and many flashes of irony fell from his lips as he played the inquisitor before the Provincial Secretary. The latter became irritated at times, but stood the ordeal, on the whole, fairly well, and insisted on answering the questions in his own way. One or two phases of the case, which Mr. Blake considered curious, he frankly declared were coincidences. Mr. Stratton's colleagues in the Cabinet are likely to follow him on the stand.

Decision as to Evidence.

When the court opened the commissioners delivered their decision on the question of the prosecution's right to examine into the campaign fund of the Liberal party. They announced that only such evidence as was reasonable relevant and pertinent to the issue would be admitted, in order to show whether the money was paid Gamey from the source referred to. In point of time the investigation would only cover from Last August until March. The enquiry would be private in character, excepting in so far as items directly pertinent to enquiry were concerned." It was also ordered that Mr. Johnston might examine the Conservative accounts if he wished.

Cross-Examination Resumed.

In cross-examination of Mr. Stratton, Mr. Blake took up the letter drawn by Mr. Stratton for Gamey on Sept. 10.

"Mr. Gamey can write?" queried he.

"I believe so," said Mr. Stratton.

"So it was the material, and not the printing that he wanted," said the cross-examiner.

Though severely cross-examined Mr Stratton swore that Gamey practically dictated the whole contents of the letter to him during his visit of Sept. 9. There were several angry passages between the witness and counsel. Once Mr. Stratton told Mr. Blake to "put his question properly."

"I am counsel in this case, sir," thundered Mr. Blake; "while you are here, you are merely J. R. Stratton, witness in the box."

Mr. Stratton again swore that the whole matter rested with Mr. Aylesworth to do what he pleased about it. Many times he insisted that Mr. Aylesworth was wholly responsible for the matter of the letter.

"Did you ever make any enquiry about the letter from that time on?"

"I did not," said the witness.

"Can you explain how what Mr. Aylesworth was to get and didn't get was afterwards gotten from Mr. Gamey?" was asked in allusion to Mr Gamey having taken the letter away from Mr. Aylesworth's office.

"I cannot," declared Mr. Stratton.

The Minister also declared that Gamey seemed to be out for everything in sight.

"There are some minds that are very suspicious!" commented Mr. Stratton on a question of Mr. Blake.

"Then, you should be able to take it in," said the counsel.

"You would comprehend it more easily!" retorted Mr. Stratton.

"No! That is not evidence, Mr. Stratton," said Mr. Blake, smilingly.

Mr. Blake wanted to know why a letter of Gamey's sent to Captain Sullivan, complaining that the Captain had revealed the "deal" at Ottawa, had not been produced.

Mr. Stratton said he didn't know.

Again Mr. Blake exacted from the witness the declaration that he had distrusted Gamey from the start.

Then he asked how it was that the correspondence immediately after the first interview read, "My Dear Gamey," and "My Dear Stratton." Mr. Stratton swore that at the time he had remonstrated with his secretary, Mr. Burrows, for commencing the letter in this familiar way.

"Did you speak to Mr. Gibson about Fleisher's appointment?" asked Mr. Blake.

"No!"

Counsel then read from a letter of Mr. Stratton's to Gamey: "I have seen Mr. Gibson and asked him to approve of your recommendation."

"Was there any recommendation made by Mr. Gamey from September 9 until March that was refused?" asked Mr. Blake several times.

Mr. Stratton refused to reply to this at first, declaring that he had made no appointments in his own department, and that Mr. Blake would have to ask the other Ministers on this point. Later, he declared that Gamey had recommended appointments of a license inspector, of a Board of License Comissioners, of an issuer of marriage licenses at Gore Bay, and of a lock-up keeper at Little Current, and that he (Stratton) had not complied with these recommendations.

Asked for names, the witness could give none but that of John McEachren, whom he thought had been mentioned for lock-up keepers.

Mr. Blake asked Mr. Stratton if he had suggested to Mr. Gamey to take "the honorable course of resigning." The witness insisted on explaining at some length his position on this point. He asserted that Gamey had run on in May would permit him to change his political allegiance.

Mr. Blake asked Mr. Stratton if he had seen Mr. Boyd's letter to Hon. Mr. Latchford, protesting against giving Gamey the colonization road patronage. Mr. Stratton declared that Mr. Latchford had not discussed the matter with him.

Asked about the telegram Frank Sullivan sent on January 27, urging Gamey to come to Toronto at once, when Gamey says he was wanted to give out the Globe interview, Mr. Stratton said that like the $3,000 cheque to a company of which he was president, it was a coincidence he could not help.

"It is a strange thing," commented Mr. Blake, "that everything was prepared in your office, the letter of September 10, the letter of October 27 and the Globe interview.

"Gamey can write," he added "were you teaching him composition?"

Mr. Stratton denied the soft impeachment.

Asked if he ever discussed the matter with the Premier, he said he had mentioned the fact that Gamey was going to support the Government, and that Mr. Ross said he had no confidence in him.

Mr. Blake then read Mr. Gamey's letter to Mr. Stratton of February 6, suggesting that he resign, and asked whether he had replied. The witness said he had not, and that he was not Gamey's political god-father. Counsel then produced the "X. Y. Z" letter, and enclosure, which are apparently in response to that communication. "I swear positively that I never saw it, dictated it, or suggested it, or heard of it," declared Mr. Stratton with regard to the enclosure. He knew of no means whereby Frank Sullivan would see the letter to himself.

Mr. Blake had some fun over the fact that Mr. Stratton "held out the lamp" to Gamey after his return from North Perth.

Asked how he knew when Gamey came to him of September 9th of the rumors that he would support the Government, he said that last summer both Mr. Conmee and Mr. Marter had told him so.

Mr. Blake wanted to know if the Provincial Secretary had written to Duncan Bole, of Sault Ste. Marie last summer, as to the conditions in the Algoma ridings, and asked that the letter be produced. Mr. Stratton said he might have written such a letter, but could not remember it. A search of the files of the Department had failed to reveal any trace of it.

"Did you ever state that, if the Attorney-General were placed on the came from?" asked Mr. Blake.

The cross-examination will go on this morning.

Report of the Delegates to the Educational Convention

AN INTERESTING REPORT.

Presented at the Board of Education Meeting on Monday Night

Mr. Wm. Pringle, principal of the Peterborough Business College, proves himself to be one of the most energetic and enthusiastic members of the School Board. He was very wisely chosen as one of the representatives to the annual Convention of the Ontario Educational Association. The report prepared by him and his colleagues, Messrs. Stevenson and Hartley, is exhaustive and comprehensive, and will be read with much interest by all who take an active interest in educational affairs. It was presented to the Board of Education on Monday evening and was as follows:

To the Chairman and members of the Board of Education:

Your delegates appointed to attend the 42nd annual Convention of the Ontario Educational Association, held in Toronto on April 14th, 15th and 16th, beg to report.

The Convention was held in the University buildings, and was a large and representative one. Tuesday, the first day of meeting, was taken up principally in registering delegates and receiving reports of Committees appointed in 1902. On Tuesday evening a most successful conversazione was held, and a very pleasant hour was spent by those present.

Wednesday morning was spent in the Trustees Department. Several matters of importance came up for discussion, such as—1st, When pupils attend a High School or Collegiate Institute, from outside the school District, to what extent is the county liable? The statutes on this matter were considered quite satisfactory. 2nd, Can the present scheme of apportioning the legislative grant to schools be improved, and is so, how? This evoked lively discussion, especially when a motion was made to apportion the grant according to equipment, salaries paid, certificates of teachers and average attendance. This would of course be decidedly in favor of the wealthy districts, and very properly was voted down. This matter was not finally disposed of.

cerned the delegates as a body more than any other, was the proposed changes in the Public and High School Courses and in the Departmental Examination System.

Realizing what these changes meant to School Boards, a large number were anxious to have the matter thoroughly discussed at that meeting, but owing principally to lack of time, this was not done. A Committee was appointed to carefully consider the proposed changes, and to confer with other committees appointed from other sections.

The changes proposed are the extension in the P.S. of nature studies, manual training, and Domestic Science; omitting from the High School Course the subject of Latin, which would not be required for non-professional examinations; to retain the system of examinations only when they were absolutely necessary, such as the High School Entrance and teachers non-professional; to separate the Teachers and the University Entrance examinations. Many other changes were proposed, but Principal Fessenden and Inspector Walker, can better explain these to your Board than we, who are less acquainted.

We might say here that in the evening the Hon., the Minister of Education, explained briefly these changes, and expressed himself as being most anxious that the Teachers and School Boards should aid him in the matter; that it was not his intention to make any change unless it had first been generally approved, and with that object he had submitted a draft for consideration. He asked the Association to appoint a thoroughly representative Committee who would discuss the whole subject, and make such modifications as they deemed desirable, and recommend for adoption.

On Wednesday afternoon no session was held in the Trustees section, so as to give that body an opportunity to visit other departments. Your delegates were much interested in an address delivered by Mr. Parkinson, of Toronto, on the "Consolidation of Rural Schools." The speaker evidently had given a good deal of time and thought to the subject, and appeared to be in full sympathy with the movement. The advantage is that, by consolidating rural schools, better buildings, better equipments, and better teachers could be had, as better salaries could be paid; on the other hand that when children were taken to and from school by public conveyance, increased and more regular attendance was insured, and in this way better and much more satisfactory results would be attained. The speaker showed by figures that the movement was rapidly gaining ground, in the United States, and gives the greatest satisfaction wherever introduced.

In the evening we listened to an eloquent address by Dr. Gordon, Principal of Queen's University Kingston. His subject was the "Goodly

KING GUARDED BY MANY DETECTIVES

Hundreds of Them Detailed to Protect Him While in Paris

FOLLOW ROYAL CARRIAGE

The Gutter Papers Make Some Attacks But Little Attention is Paid to Them

Paris, May 5.—Around the British Embassy, as well as at street corner and quarter block in each direction are posted detectives in plain clothes apparently loitering, but really keeping close watch for suspicious characters. Even King Edward's suite includes twenty French detectives chosen from among those members of the force most able to appear distinguished and to wear evening clothes gracefully. At the prefecture of police it is declared that not even the Czar's visit made such demands on the establishment. Besides cuirassiers, a number of detectives follow the Royal carriage everywhere riding on bicycles, while hundreds of others are scatttered through the crowds in all parts of the capital.

On Friday the Anglophobe papers appeared on the streets ahead of all others. They contained a bombastic statement of their reasons for opposing the King's visit and also printed pictures of ex-President Kruger, Major Marchand, of Fashoda fame, and others representing British soldiers bayoneting women and children in the Transvaal, whipping the female prisoners in the concentration camps, and shooting old and decrepit Boers. Although the Government seized the openly displayed, filthy cartoons directed against the King, and closed up a few kiosks where they were on sale, no attempt was made to suppress the equally insulting political diatribes filling the press. Many of these attacks, however, were amusing. For example, the Patrie tried to prove that no arts are able to flourish in England "as proved by the fact that both Raphael and Haydn died from the effects of English fog."

FORTY FARMERS LOST EVERYTHING

Disastrous Result of Forest Fires near Buckingham

WORKING TO SAVE VILLAGE

The Savings of Years Destroyed in an Hour---Rescue Fund Started

Buckingham, Que., May 5.—Bush fires have swept the country on the east side of the Lievre River. Last night's boat brings news of forty farmers who lost everything yesterday.

The village of Notre Dame de la Salette, 22 miles north of Buckingham, was only saved from destruction after a hard fight with the flames.

There were no buildings burned in the village, but there are at least thirty-five farmers in the Lacollete district, two on Priest Creek, and three in Derry, who have lost everything.

Wm. Regelin, at High Falls, loses buildings and machinery valued at six thousand dollars.

A movement is on foot here to do something for the unfortunate people who are utterly destitute, the savings of years having been destroyed in an hour.

Kaiser's Visit to Pope

The visit of Emperor William to the King of Italy and the Pope so quickly after King Edward's visit, suggests that the cordiality of the reception given to the King of England in Rome, has made as great an impression in Berlin as in London, Germans in Rome are said to be excessively annoyed at the magnificence of the King's reception. The haste with which the Emperor is following in his uncle's footsteps would seem to indicate that there is felt in Berlin to be urgent necessity to offset the effects of the King's visit. Otherwise it would call for considerable courage on the part of the Emperor to challenge so conspicuously a comparison between his own popularity in Italy with that of His Brittanic Majesty.

PANIC AT SALONICA

Ottoman Bank Wrecked and Street Fighting Follows

Constantinople, May 5.—The recent comparative quietude in the revolutionary movement has been suddenly broken by a daring outrage at Salonica. Last evening a party of five men attacked the sentries guarding the Ottoman Bank building, and while they were engaged another party threw dynamite bombs into the building, wrecking it and setting it on fire. Meanwhile a party of confederates of those attacking the bank drove in carriages through the streets, throwing bombs at the Turkish post office, the railway station and cafes. Several persons were killed or injured. The city is thrown into a state of panic.

An Ottawa Man's Thrilling Experience When the Mountain Fell Away

WAS A GUEST AT FRANK WHEN IT WAS DESTROYED

A Great Wave of Mud Engulfed Many—The Finding of the First Bodies—A Train Partly Pusded From the Track—Horses Left to Die in the Mine

Frank, N.W.T., May 5.—The best and most graphic description of the Frank disaster, by an actual eye witness, has been told by Geo. Bond, an Ottawa man, who was a guest in the Imperial hotel there.

His story is as follows:

"I was in bed at the time of the disaster. A terrific wind was blowing about four in the morning, which had partially awakened me.

"Directly afterward the house was violently shaken, and continued to shake with a twisting motion for the space of from three to five minutes.

"I became alarmed and endeavored to awaken a young Canadian Pacific Railway employe, who was asleep in another bed, in the same room. While in the act of awakening my room mate the hotel porter ran upstairs quickly, giving the alarm, and saying:

"'For God's sake boys, get out, the mine has blown up.' He also used the expression, 'It's all off now.'

"He then knocked at the doors west of our room, arousing Mr. McCarty, superintendent of the coal mine.

"We all dressed hurriedly, and rushed downstairs and out to the sidewalk. In the meantime, about the time the porter called us, we felt a violent crashing report, followed by a succession of noises, which I can only compare to the continuous bumping of freight cars being brought together. The report was accompanied by a loud roaring noise, which we at the time imagined was caused by an escape of a vast body of steam under great pressure, but which was actually caused by the noise of large rolling rocks and boulders tumbling down the mountain side.

DENSE WHITE CLOUD OVERHUNG THE TOWN.

"This all occupied but a minute and a half of time, being over by the time we reached the sidewalk. On reaching the street that thing I noticed first was a dense white cloud overhanging the east part of the town. Then I noticed a blaze starting about 200 yards distant, as the party of us started off in that direction to ascertain the cause of the fire.

"We crossed the street and ran between two buildings, but on reaching the rear of the buildings further progress was stopped by a bank of mud which the darkness of early morning had prevented us from seeing. Mixed with it were trees, logs, and large stones.

"We then returned to the street, and ran down some distance till we got opposite the fire. We ran straight in toward the fire, and were compelled to mount another bank, this being composed principally off mine timber, logs, parts of buildings, and a conglomerate mass of debris.

"On arriving at the scene of the fire we heard a man calling for help. Some of our party went to his assistance, finding that his house had been wrecked and that the man, his wife, and baby, and three other children, had been caught in the wreck. The man had released all but his wife, who was pinned down to the bed by a large beam which had been thrown across it.

"With the assistance of our party the woman was released. The children escaped with but slight bruises, but the woman was more seriously injured, although these were not considered fatal.

TWO GIRLS RESCUED FROM A RUINED HOME.

In the meantime we had arrived at the Leitch home. We found that what appeared to be the rear end of the house, which contained three rooms, had completely collapsed. We effected an entrance at the west side, where we found two girls, one of whom was extricated with little difficulty, and who was practically uninjured. The other, however, was pinned down by one leg. After considerable labor she was rescued. She was perfect conscious and spoke to the rescuers. We then started to locate the remaining members of the family. We came across the wreck of an iron bedstead, and after removing part of the partition, which had been thrown diagonally across the bedstead, removed a considerable amount of plaster, mud, splintered boards and other debris, discovered the remains of two boys of ages from six to nine who had evidently been crushed to death as they lay. We removed the partition, and on the other side, buried deeply among the ruins, after a great amount of labor, we discovered the remains of Mr. and Mrs. Leitch.

The damage to this house was apparently caused by a wave of mud, which had been forced ahead by the falling mass of rocks. The house had been pushed or carried over the grass a distance of a hundred feet.

Outside of the house, some twelve feet distant, a little infant child of the Leitch's family was found, apparently uninjured, and crying piteously. It was at once taken care of. My share of the morning's work con consumed about four hours when I returned to the hotel and partook of breakfast, after which I went up towards the railway station in order to get a better idea of the amount of damage done.

The immense wedge-shaped mass of rock must have measured at least 1,200 feet from top to bottom, and slid and dropped from the top down the almost perpendicular face of the mountain side.

The mass of rock that fell at the thickest part of the wedge must have been at least fully five hundred feet thick. This mass in falling struck the inclined base of the mountain. The force of the impact smashed the huge masses of rock into boulders of all sizes, down to pebbles and dust, throwing it with terrific force and speed clear across the valley, a distance of over two miles, and completely demolishing everything in its course. With the exception of the few houses already mentioned, in which we were engaged in the work of rescue, not a vestige remained of the part of the town east of a line a hundred feet from the main street.

Nothing remained but a vast field of white lime and limestone boulders, reaching high up on the north side of the valley, completely covering with boulders the Canadian Pacific Railway tracks, and those of the Frank and Grassy Mountain Railway, for a distance of a mile and a half.

The roadbed of the latter company runs up a steep height of 200 feet above the level of the valley. The track at this point is piled up to a height of about 75 feet with solid boulders.

The Canadian-American Mining Company's works were directly underneath the fall, and received the full force of the avalanche, and were completely buried, there being nothing in sight, after the disaster, to show that the works had ever existed there.

BODIES FOUND LYING IN THE MUD OF THE SLIDE.

Just as I arrived at the station the body of Alfred Dalt had been discovered lying in the mud. He was almost submerged and his limbs were badly twisted, and the body otherwise disfigured. About 25 feet from where his body was discovered, a man's thigh, from the groin to below the knee was found, but no trace of any further portions of the body could be found. Some distance away several carcasses of horses, dogs and pigs could be seen scattered about in the soft mud.

At the station the mud was very soft, and rescuing parties had considerable trouble in moving later on in the day. But in the earlier hours the mud had frozen to a sufficient thickness to support the weight of the rescuers. As one moved toward the mountain the mud became thicker and along the edge of the large field of immense boulders, the mud margin ended in a wall of boulders.

From the top of the hill east to the station some five hundred feet high, I obtained a magnificent panoramic view of the whole scene.

Directly in front, at a distance of about a mile, stands Turtle Mountain, which rears its magnificent proportions fully 4,000 feet into the air, at the east end of the mountain.

POSTUM COFFEE

THE BREAKFAST CUP

Can Bring Joy or Trouble

Change in food and drink will sometimes make over even elderly people and restore them to natural health.

A man of 70 writes that at the age of 60 he began to break down and was a partial invalid until 67, when he concluded that coffee was one of the prime causes of his sickness and began using Postum Food Coffee in its place with Grape-Nuts Breakfast food and some fruit at his meals.

He says: "Now, at the age of 70, I am as strong and hearty as I was at 50. I would not go back to my old mode of living for a hundred thousand dollars." This man was a pioneer in Illinois in 1837, later on was an early settler in North Dakota. He requests that his name shall not appear in print. Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

ANOTHER HARD JAR

Injunction Against Publishing of Warning Notices

An important injunction affecting labor unions has been granted by Mr. Justice Britton on the application of George A. Rudd & Co., and Adams Bros., harnessmakers, of Toronto. There is a strike on and some of the employees of these firms are out, and an advertisement was inserted in the Mail and Empire as follows:—"Harness and collar makers keep away from Toronto and Toronto Junction; trouble on." Acting for the two firms, Mr. Geo. H. Watson, K.C., applied for an injunction restraining the Mail and Empire from publishing this advertisement, and Mr. Justice Britton granted an injunction till Thursday next. The newspaper, it is understood, will not oppose the application, and it will remain therefore for the labor unions to oppose the granting of an injunction.

CATARRHOZONE

Physicians boldly state that every requirement of a perfect cure for Catarrhal diseases is fulfilled in Catarrhozone, and on this account it is prescribed by almost every intelligent doctor.

It is the most powerful antiseptic known. When the lungs are filled with its germ-killing vapor the microbes which cause and maintain the unhealthy condition of the mucous membrane die immediately. Disease germs cannot exist where Catarrhozone is used.

Although very penetrating, Catarrhozone is a soothing and healing treatment. It quickly heals raw spots and allays irritation and congestion of the mucous membrane.

When using Catarrhozone you don't have to wait all day for relief: it comes with every breath taken through the Inhaler. Head and throat are cleared and cleansed almost at once. Droppings in the throat, headache, coughing, and spitting, and all other disagreeable symptoms of catarrh are banished by a few days' use of this superior remedy.

Catarrhal diseases of every description yield without much difficulty to Catarrhozone. When used for Bronchitis, Lung Trouble and Colds, it affords not only instant relief, but cures in a very short time.

Croup, Whooping Cough and Winter Ills simply won't live any time if Catarrhozone is inhaled four times daily, and as a safeguard for Pneumonia, and Consumption it has no equal.

Better get a Catarrhozone Inhaler; use it occasionally, and you won't have a cough or cold in the head or catarrh. These afflictions can be prevented by Catarrhozone as well as cured. Complete outfit, full two months' treatment, costs $1. Small size, 25 cents. Sold by all druggists and N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

Buried Gold

By FRED WHISHAW.

Author of "A Boyar of the Terrible," etc.

Unfortunately he had not changed his methods in love-making; neither had former dismal experiences taught him anything in the matter of an acceptable attitude towards the fair sex. In a word, Keith was as awkward, silent and irritating a lover now as he had been two years ago. Hence the progress of his suit was slow and almost imperceptible—so much so, indeed, that poor Ruby Amright almost despaired of her man, and began to think that if progress were to be made at all, she must swallow her pride and alter her own methods, since it was clear that Keith was unable to change his.

Matters had reached this stage when one evening Keith received a visitor whose coming was like the proverbial bolt from the blue. An unexpected, blasting bomb that shattered hopes and prospects and the joy of life, so far as Keith himself was concerned, for many a long day. The lad Harry Beadon called to see him.

Keith knew him slightly, but could not imagine what the youth could possibly have to say to him.

Harry entered the room mysteriously, after the manner of the Adelphi villain, and asked whether anyone could possibly overhear him if he should make an important communication.

"What are you playing at, you young fool?" said Keith. "What's up with you? Is it me you want? If not, you can get out."

"It's a matter of life and death," said Harry. "You're sure no one can hear? Yes, it's you I want, and you'll thank me for coming, presently. Shall I go on?"

"Not if you're drunk, as you seem to be," replied Keith. "I've heard you've taken to liquor of late and have been a trouble to your poor mother. You want a d—— good thrashing, that's what you want, and if I find you're drunk in here, I'll give it you myself."

"I'm not drunk, Mr. Adams, so help me I ain't! Do let me speak. You'll thank me, I tell you! You're in danger of your life."

"Who, me? I suppose every sailor is, in a manner, when he's at sea."

"No, here, on land, in Seadown. There's a bloke now in Southampton, mad as a hare, what's going to murder you soon as he can git at you——"

He seized Beadon by the shoulders, swung him round and raised his foot to kick him towards the door.

"I swear I'm not drunk," said Beadon, wriggling himself round. "Don't you make such a noise, Mr. Adams, or they'll hear us and you'll be sorry after. Let me speak, I tell you. It's for your own good."

The lad seemed sober enough, though he smelt somewhat strongly of drink.

"Go on, then," said Keith. "Make it short, and mind—no lies, or you'll get into trouble. Who's this madman, and what does he want with me? Do I know him?"

"He was in Seadown years ago, he told me, and had friends, you bein' one. He wanted to know about all those he used to know, and I told him what I could. When I spoke of you, 'Ah,' said he, 'Mr. Adams and me used to walk out with the same young woman in the old days. Is he married?' And when I told him what I've heard spoken of in the town, that you might be marryin' soon for all I knew, he took me by the throat and all but strangled me——"

Keith Adams had sat down during this recital. He had grown so pale and old-looking in the two minutes during which Beadon had spun his yarn, that the lad, looking up at him as he now spoke, scarcely knew him for the same man.

"Stop!" muttered Keith, hoarsely. "Where is this man to be found?"

CHAPTER VIII.

Dick Suffers from a Like Cause.

Harry Beadon gave the desired information, mentioning the name of the public-house at which he had met Robinson.

"All right," said Keith. "Now you can go."

"Wait a bit, Mr. Adams," said the lad; "there's more to say yet. After I'd parted with this 'ere bloke I came across two more at the Halfway Inn on the Southampton road. These two chaps wanted news of Seadown folks just like the other. Oh! it made me laugh, I can tell you, all these strangers happenin' to come to me for news about Seadown. Well, I hadn't gone on far when it comes out that they're after this very chap what I told you of first—"

"Did he tell you his name?" interrupted Keith.

"I didn't ask him, like a fool. I didn't think of it, and he never told me. But they recognized him by my description, and said he'd bolted from 'Frisco, or some such place, with money of theirs and they'd come after him. I was to keep quiet about it and let them know when he came down to Seadown. They're at the 'Blue Dragon' at Southampton, that's their address, as I took it down. I'm to be paid well when they get hold of their man. I thought I'd tell you all about both lots, for the business is more'n I like to tackle by myself, and there's no doubt you're in danger besides. He's as mad as a hare, the first bloke, I tell you; I was pretty nervous coming along here and up these stairs in the dusk, not knowing but what he might be here already and goin' to jump out at me."

"All right," said Keith, hoarsely. "You needn't fear. He sha'n't hurt you. That's all, I suppose? You've no more to say?"

"Yes, that's all—except I'd like to know what I'd better do. I didn't tell the second lot of chaps where the first bloke was to be found in Southampton; p'r'aps I ought to 'ave, but it seemed like givin' him away too cheap."

"No, you should have told 'em," said Keith, rather savagely. "I wish to thunder you had. You'd have saved——"

Keith broke off at this point and walked up and down the room.

"No, you oughtn't," he said presently. "Don't mind what I said. I'm a fool and a coward, too, my lad, that's what I am."

"Anybody might be afraid of a madman and not be called a coward for it," said Harry. "There's nothing in that."

"Yes, there is; there's a lot in it. I'm afraid of him, as you say, my lad, and I wish to thunder these two chaps you spoke of had caught him and taken him to 'Frisco or to hell or anywhere else! That's what I feel, and I'm a silly, worthless coward for it, and that's the truth."

Keith was walking very fast up and down the room, his face white and haggard, his hands clenched, his eyes fixed. He was passing through an anguish more terrible than death. He scarcely knew what he was saying.

"Well, it's easy enough for me to go and tell these 'ere chaps where they can nab him," began the boy Beadon, but here Keith Adams provided him with a surprise. He suddenly turned and seized

(Organized under the laws of Oregon.)

CAPITAL STOCK, - - - $1,000,000.00

(Full Paid and Non-Assessable.

The property of this company consists of three full claims known as the "Fleur de lis," "Mayflower," and "Mistletoe" Group, embracing an area of sixty acres of highly mineralized ground, located in the famous Sumpter district, Baker county, Oregon, about 3¼ miles from McEwen on the Sumpter Valley Railroad.

The best evidence we have to offer as to our "being in good company" is to mention a few of those who are our immediate neighbors, viz: the North Pole, Bonanza, Red Boy, Eureka Columbia, Golconda, Cracker, Oregon, Golden Wizard, all of which are in this same district, producing from $40,000.00 to $100,000.00 per month each.

From the preliminary amount of development work already done on our property and from the assays of ore which is entirely free milling, running $18.00 to $150.00 per ton, we are confident that with the installation of modern machinery we have a proposition worthy of the most searching enquiry by those seeking a high grade investment.

Our board of directors consists of men who have a practical knowledge of mining, well known and of high standing, who have invested every available dollar of their own to acquire this valuable property and put it on a dividend paying basis.

To accomplish this it has been decided to place a limited amount of the treasury stock on sale at 15c per share for development purposes only until such time as the condition of the mine will enable it to take care of itself, when the sale of stock will be withdrawn.

Our prospectus will give you all particulars. Let us send it to you. We shall also be pleased to answer all enquiries whether by mail or in person at our office.

THE

TWO-TEN OIL CO.

of Boulder, Colorado.

Capital Stock, 1,500,000 shares. In Treasury, 500,000 shares

TRANSFER OFFICE, BRISTOL, CONN.

This Company has a perpetual lease on 20 acres of proven oil land in SECTION NINE (9) of the Boulder district, and this section and the immediate vicinity have the best and largest number of producing wells in the entire district.

Our Well No. 1 came in, in January and is now pumping and shipping Oil regularly to the Refinery.

The Directors have decided to put down well No. 2 at once, and they now offer a block of the Treasury stock for the next 30 days at

10 Cents per Share, after that price will be advanced.

It is a well known fact that a 15 barrel well will pay over 100 per cent. profit upon its cost.

This is no longer a speculation for we have proved that oil is on our ground and we now have oil in paying quantities, with two wells pumping we can soon pay dividends, and every well we put down increases our earning capacity.

This is a business proposition, managed by business men.

STOCK MARKETS

APROXING THE ADVANCE COMMENCEMENT

New York, May 5.—Each day now brings us nearer to the termination of the period of stagnation. Bears under cover anticipated continuation of higher prices, while the bull pools and shrewd stock buyers gather stocks, increasing their holdings. There can be no fears of money stringency; it has become as easy as an old shoe. A splendid investment demand for bonds and dividend paying stocks continue. Again, stocks do not decline on announcement of detriment news as heretofore. It has dawned upon some people that many stocks are selling below their real value at present. It is easier now to put the market up than to put it down. The upward area is again near and stocks will go higher. Call money will probably be in supply in a short time as low as for one and one half per cent. Once low prices create a demand and people commence to scan the security list, strong facts will be taken advantage of, and stocks taken up. Missouri Pacific is earning 12 per cent. and paying but 5 per cent. That Erie is earning its full requirements upon its two preferred stocks, and 4 per cent. upon its common; that R. I. earning nearly 9 per cent. upon its common, yet paying nothing; that B. O., N. & W. and C. & O. are all earning more than twice their dividend disbursements; that D. L. & W. and D. & H. are both earning over 20 per cent. upon their capitalization, That Illinois Central and L. N. are earning over 12 per cent. and 15 percent. respectively; that Manhattan earning 3 per cent. more upon its stock than its guarantee is called upon today, and so on practically through the stock list, both railways and industrials. The bond refunding scheme of the United States will add some thirty millions dollars to circulation for the end of the year. Earnings keep increasing business in sight is enormous, showing no visible signs of diminution while prices are low. We fail to see any reason for anticipating any further decline, and see every reason for higher prices.

Summary—Activity continues to increase in volume on dealings, and are considerably larger and more issues active. Market interest is growing and prices advanced further. St. Paul became active again, becoming a market leader and selling above 165. Good strength was discernable in St. Paul, Metropolitan, Manhattan, R. I., Missouri Pacific, L. N., B. O Pennsylvania, Pacifics and the coal stocks. Industrials were also in demand. We advise immediate purchase of stocks.

QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY

Medical College Affairs Will be Put on a Different Basis

Kingston, Ont., May 5. — Kingston University Board of Trustees intends at its special meeting this month to place the Medical College affairs on a more regular basis. For years past the medical department has been controlled almost wholly by that faculty which collected and disbursed its own fees, now amounting to close on $20,000. It is now proposed to transfer all clerical work to the University Registrar's Office, and the finances to that of the treasurer. The salaries of the medical professional staff also will be rearranged, as it is claimed that some of the doctors are not being paid in proportion to their positions and the work they do. The trustees will make a complete readjustment, and also make some changes in and additions to the staff.

A MAGNIFICENT INVESTMENT

THE GOLD TUNNEL COMPANY,

PRESCOTT, ARIZONA

The Company owns in SIX PARALLEL VEINS of GIGANTIC SIZE, one of the largest GOLD PROPOSITIONS in the country. Each of these six veins would make a mine by itself.

The Company, by purchase and consolidation, has succeeded in acquiring the entire length of these great GOLD BEARING ledges; covering an area six thousand feet in length and about two thousand feet wide. The Company owns this valuable property free of any incumbrance.

The ground included in this group of mines gives ample evidence of tremendous natural disturbances, and shows plainly on the surface the acid and mineral stains characteristic of a heavy mineralized gold lead of gigantic proportions.

Six Miles of Gold Bearing Veins

Through the length of four of the mining claims; forming a continuous line 6,000 feet long run THREE LEDGES so close together as to be economically worked from one opening; they aggregate from 85 to 200 feet in width.

The adjoining line of three mining claims shows a ledge 4,500 feet in length, varying in width from 7 to 200 feet, with the same character of ore.

Beginning at the south end of the "Eighty-Four" mining claim, is a fifth large ledge carrying good values in GOLD, and running in a northerly direction for a distance of fully forty-five hundred feet.

Two mining claims on the east side show GOLD BEARING CROPPINGS 40 to 50 feet wide through their entire length, a distance of three thousand feet.

All of the ledges are well mineralized, carrying at grass-root values in gold running from about $2.00 to $6.00 per ton.

NEURALGIA.

THIS DISTRESSING COMPLAINT IS DUE TO IMPOVERISHED BLOOD

When the blood becomes thin and watery, as a matter of course, you become weak, vitality gets down low, and there is but little power in the system to ward off disease and pain.

Neuralgia hunts out a weak spot, and makes a home there, so secure that it is hard to drive it out. But by using the proper remedies it can be driven from the system, never to return. To obtain immediate relief, first apply to the painful parts, a good quantity of Polson's Nerviline, and then bind on a hot flannel cloth.

This local treatment will be found very efficacious, but must be followed by a course of Ferrozone treatment. Ferrozone is a blood food, and a blood purifier, and quickly strengthens the system so that further attacks may never be feared. It makes the rich red kind of blood that gives strength and vigor to weak constitutions and puts them in good shape to resist neuralgia attacks.

This combined treatment of Nerviline and Ferrozone in Neuralgia, Sciatica, and Rheumatism, is marvelously effective and cures after all else has failed. Because of the unique success of these remedies we have no hesitancy in endorsing their use to our readers. All druggists sell them.

A Death Blow to Vertical Writing

Fellowship of Teachers." In the course of his address he showed that if a teacher had done nothing but develop the pupil intellectually, he had failed in his duty. He claimed that he had a duty towards the child's moral nature, that the personality of the teacher had an immense influence on the pupil, and would remain with him through life. He instanced the influence of a teacher over his pupils by referring to the late Dr. Tassie, when at his funeral, one of the finest tributes ever paid to a deceased teacher, was paid to him by his pupils, who assembled from far and near to do honor to his memory. He believed that in Canada we were inclined to put too much stress on the results of the examinations and too little on the development of the higher nature of our pupils. If we neglected this in our Public Schools we would find that the moral fibre of our nation had been seriously weakened. Dr. Gordon also addressed the Trustees on Thursday morning and referred particularly to the small salaries generally paid to teachers, and gave that as a reason why so small a percentage of Public School teachers were men. He advised paying more liberal salaries in order to keep men in the profession, and his remarks were well received by all present.

Thursday morning a paper on writing was read before the Public School Teachers and one of your delegates was present. The speaker gave it as his opinion that altogether too little time was given in our schools to this important subject. The blame could not be put upon the teachers as they, both in preparing for their position and filling it, complied with the requirements of the Department. Teachers should be required to attain as high a standard in writing as in any other subject, before receiving their certificates. At present writing is, to a large extent, taught from headlines which do not appeal to the pupil. The only way to teach writing effectively is from examples given by the teacher in charge. This acts as an inventive to the pupil, as he generally has sufficient ambition to make him believe he has at least a chance of doing what he sees another do. The vertical system was condemned on the ground that it was neither natural nor practical, and what seemed rather remarkable, not a word was said in its favor by any of the large number present. The variety of questions asked the speaker showed the great lack of knowledge on this important subject, by the majority of our Public School Teachers.

The last subject discussed on Thursday morning was "Free Text Books and Supplies." This system has been in use in the Toronto Schools for about ten years, and has given the greatest satisfaction. Kingston is introducing it, in fact has for some time supplied all stationery. Whilst the term "Free Text Books and Supplies" is generally used, the term is a wrong one, as the pupil pays at the beginning of each term, or each year, his or her share of the costs of these books and supplies. The pupil pays his own expense as independently this way as under the present system, but the cost is less for two reasons. First because the purchasing price is less, second because books and stationery last much longer—a statement was made that some text books had been in use ten years in Toronto—to say nothing of the advantage gained in the excellent training the pupils would receive.

In 1901 the cost to each pupil in Toronto was less than 12 cents each and this year they expect that 15 cents will cover the cost.

In Kingston it now costs 60 cents for each pupil and they expect to be down to 35 cents in a few years. They supply sewing material and wood-carving material, also text books up to the third and fourth classes for this price. Next year they expect to supply everything for all the classes at a lower fee.

The introductory cost would of course, be greater than that of any other year, and greater than either case mentioned, but your Committee is satisfied that there is an advantage in it to our people, and would recommend the subject to the favorable consideration of your Board.

We would also recommend, with the approval of the Inspector, that the present system of writing in our schools be changed to one more natural and practical.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

(Signed)

J. J. HARTLEY,
J. STEVENSON,
WM. PRINGLE.

in shape of a large lake which formed immediately in front of the entrance to the mine. This was the result of the damming of coal creek. [illegible] imprisoned miners were crowned with success. The imprisoned men were themselves working desperately to effect their escape with the result that they had found a small opening between several large boulders which allowed the passage of a man's body, and through this narrow opening 17 men had emerged from the mine, mostly in a weak state. They relate terrible experiences with falling boulders that had entered the mine higher up, and that were continually rolling down, imperilling the lives of the miners. Four men were killed in the mine. Three horses are still buried in the mine alive, and, according to later reports, the bodies of the dead miners and their dumb companions had not been removed.

The company had lately made large purchases of electrical machinery for lighting and power in the mine. This machinery, stored at the entrance to the mine, together with the engines, boilers, etc., was completely wiped out.

At the time of the accident a Canadian Pacific Railway locomotive and a crew were engaged in shunting cars on a siding leading to the mine. They heard a loud noise, and on boarding the engine and cars to make their escape, they observed some lights, and heard shouts, supposed to have come from men caught in an avalanche. The engine pulled out quickly on the main line, and backed up to the station. They found that the caboose they had left standing with the other cars, had been hove off the track, but not damaged. They coupled up and pulled the cars clear of the debris, and replaced the caboose on the track, using it during the day in making trips between Frank and Blairmore in carrying refugees.

LITTLE GIRL POISONED

Found Pills in a Drawer Eat Them and Died

St. John, N.B., May 5.—The two and a half year old daughter of Theodore Vandwart, of Metcalfe street, was poisoned and died in an hour, by swallowing four pills which she found in a bureau drawer at home. Medical opinion is that strychnine poisoning was the cause of death.

Mr. Vandwart is a lineman in the employ of R. G. Reid, the Newfoundland magnate, and is at present in Newfoundland.

THE TRYING TIME

In a young girl's life is reached when Nature leads her uncertain steps across the line which divides girlhood from womanhood. Ignorance and neglect at this critical period are largely responsible for much of the after misery of womanhood. Not only does Nature often need help in the regular establishment of the womanly function, but there is almost always need of some safe, strengthening tonic, to overcome the languor, nervousness and weakness, commonly experienced at this time.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription establishes regularity. It is a strengthening tonic, soothing the nerves, encouraging the appetite and inducing restful sleep. It contains no alcohol neither opium, cocaine or other narcotic.

"I wish to tell you the benefit we have received from using your remedies," writes Mrs. Dan Hall, of Brodhead, Green Co., Wis. "Two years ago my daughter's health began to fail. Everything that could be thought of was done to help her but it was of no use. When she began to complain she was quite stout; weighed 170, the picture of good health, until about the age of fourteen, then in six months she was so run down her weight was but 120. She kept failing and I gave up, thinking there was no use, she must die. Friends all said, 'You will lose your daughter.' I said I fear I shall. I must say, doctor, that only for your 'Favorite Prescription' my daughter would have been in her grave to-day. When she had taken one-half bottle the natural function was established and we bought another one, making only two bottles in all, and she completely recovered. Since then she is as well as can be."

BRITAIN TO RESIST INTRUSION BY POWERS

Foreign Secretary Lansdowne Declares That Any Attempt by Other Nations to Establish Naval Base in Persian Gulf Means War

London, May 6—Foreign Secretary Lansdowne has proclaimed a British Monroe Doctrine in the Persian Gulf, and has practically notified the competing powers that any attempt on their part to establish a naval base or fortified post in those waters means war with Great Britain.

"I say without hesitation," said the Foreign Secretary, dealing with the subject in the House of Lords yesterday evening, "that we should regard the establishment of a naval base or a fortified port in the Persian Gulf by any other power, as a very grave menace to British interests, and we should certainly resist it with all the means at our disposal."

Lord Lansdowne preceded this explicit enunciation of British policy by a review of the situation there, as it affects British interests, contending that so far as the navigation of the Persian Gulf is concerned Great Britain holds a position different to that of the other powers, both because it was owing to British enterprise and expenditure of life and money that the gulf is now open to the commerce of the world, and because the protection of the sea route to India necessitates British predominance in the gulf.

Lord Lansdowne's attitude in this matter generally meets with approval, although the answers thereto of the other powers interested in the gulf are awaited with some anxiety.

The newspapers here comment on the analogy of the present proceeding to the United States policy of Monroeism. The Westminster Gazette holds that the British motive, namely, the protection of the sea route to India, corresponds exactly with America's motive in excluding European powers from American waters, because their territory is thereby threatened.

CHINESE IN SOUTH AFRICA

The Proposal to Use Chinese to Work the Transvaal Mines

Vancouver, May 6.—H. Ross Skinner and H. H. Noyes, of Johannesburg, delegates appointed by the Transvaal Chamber of Mines, to investigate the feasibility of employing Chinese as mine laborers, are now here and will sail for China on the Empress of China on Monday next. While in this province they are gathering all possible information regarding the Chinese and have paid a visit to Nanaimo in order to obtain details regarding the work done by Chinese in the coal mines. They state that the proposal made to the Government is that if found suitable as miners, the Chinese shall be restricted to work in the mines, and at the expiry of their term of contract they will be deported to China.

A BOLD THIEF

A Novel Plan for Obtaining Dressed Hogs—Arrested

Sherbrooke, May 5.—A young man named Odillon Couture, was arrested here charged with the stealing of dressed hogs from Harvey Bros.' pork packing establishment. His plan was as bold as can be conceived, and until Wednesday night was successful. He would engage a carter, proceed to the factory in the evening, take the hogs out through a back door, and drive off, disposing of them at some of the city butchers. A watch was set and he was caught as the result of his last raid made about 8.30 p.m. Wednesday night. The carter employed states that it was the third time he had been employed in this connection.

ALASKAN BOUNDARY CASES NOW READY

Canada and the United States Exchange Their Documents

AMERICANS CLAIM A VERY STRONG CASE

But Canada Has a Much Stronger One if Reports be True

London, May 5.—The British Alaska boundary case has been worked up with scientific thoroughness by the Canadian staff under the general direction of Hon. Edward Blake and and Mr. F. C. Wade. The first portion of the evidence with maps, documents, correspondence, surveys, and other material, bound in scarlet morocco, was sent last evening to the United States Ambassador. It is now known whether any discoveries have been made in the archives of the foreign office, but Hon. C. Sifton, Mr. Jos. Pope and the eight experts who have been assisting the counsel, have been laboring assiduously for weeks in a critical examination of the evidence and the preparation of the entire case.

The Canadian commission admitted last night that the evidence was ready for the United States ambassador, but considered it undiplomatic to present a summary or to reveal the general line of argument. Hon. Mr. Sifton and a majority of the commission will return to Canada before the end of May, but Mr. Wade will remain until the general meeting of the International tribunal in September.

THE AMERICAN CASE.

Toronto, May 5.—A Washington special to The Globe says: "The case of the United States which is to be laid before the Alaskan Boundary Commission has been completed, and was today delivered at the British Embassy here. At the same time the British case was turned over in London to the American Embassy. The United States case made a volume of no less than 650 pages. The next step will be the preparation of the counter cases, and these must be delivered, one in Washington and one in London, July 3 next. All this is preparatory to the meeting of the Joint Commission which will take place in London, September 3, on which day printed arguments of counsel must be submitted. The brief of the United States, delivered by John W. Foster, agent of the American Commissioners, is regarded, of course, by Mr. Foster and his assistants as the strongest presentation of the American side of the boundary question that has yet been made. What is said to be a new feature of this brief is the presentation of a strong argument based on the long occupancy of the disputed strip of land on the Alaska coast by the United States. Mr. Foster makes some capital out of the fact that from the period of purchase from Russia up to comparatively recent years the United States Government held absolutely undisputed possession of the land the title to which is now in question. For several weeks Mr. Foster and his assistants have been engaged in gleaning from the archives of the War, Interior, Navy and State Departments documentary evidence that the United States controlled and governed without dispute all the lands within the American claimed boundary line.

THE MONTREAL STRIKE

Permanent Corps to Relieve the Militia—A Food Famine Probable

Montreal, May 5—The only new developments in the longshoremen's strike today was the advent of 50 regulars from St. John's to be followed, if necessary, by a similar number from Toronto.

About 500 mill workers have gone out on strike. They demand 22 1-2 cents an hour, recognition of the union and shorter hours.

The men of the Canadian Transfer Company have also struck, which will materially heighten the difficulty which the railways have experienced since yesterday in getting their trains started, owingt o the tardy fashion in which baggage has been delivered at the stations.

The Robert Redford Company are considering the advisability of having their ships come out here merely ballasted to procure cargoes here. Grain can be loaded here without any cartage or the intervention of 'longshoremen.

The order issued by the railway companies that no perishable freight ford elivery in Montreal is to be accepted by agents will materially affect the food supply of the city should the strike of the carters prove a protarcted one.

Will Return the Money

Montreal, May 4—At a meeting of the City Council to-night by a vote of eighteen to fourteen, it was decided to return to Mr. Carnegie the $150,000 that was accepted last year for a library. Montreal will now have no public library. The objection raised was maintenance and a suitable site.

PETERBORO' CHEESE BOARD

THE FIRST MEETING OF THE SEASON HELD YESTERDAY MORNING

Only a Few Transactions—The Montreal Strike May Prevent Shipment

The first sale of the season of the Peterborough Cheese Board was held Wednesday morning, there being only four hundred and thirty-five cheese boarded. The cheese sold was of April production and the price obtained, was 11 3-4 cents. There was only a small attendance of salesmen and the following were the buyers present: Messrs. Gillespie, Kerr, Fitzgerald, Cook, Whitton, Rollins and Wrighton.

The following factoreis boarded.—

Warsaw	56
Central Smith	60
North Dummer	25
Oakdale	15
Missing Link	15
Lakefield	16
Maple Leaf	15
Young's Point	25
Indian River	15
North Dummer	30
Treewern	40
Mount Pleasant	20
Darlington Union	75
Brickley	18
Shamrock	30

The bidding opened at 11c. by Mr. Whitton; Mr. Rollins went 11 1-16c; Mr. Cook 11 1-8; Mr. Whitton 3-8; Mr. Rollins 1-4; Mr. Fitagerald 1-2; Mr. Whitton 9-16; Mr. Cook 5-8, and closed with Mr. Whitton at 11 3-4.

He called the following factories—Brickley, Shamrock, Central Smith, North Smith, Lakefield, all of which accepted. Mr. Cook opened the second bidding at 11 5-8c., and there being no competition he picked up the following factories—Oakdale, Mount Pleasant, Maple Leaf, Indian River; North Dummer refused the offer and remained unsold.

A large number of factories through their representatives present or by communication to the secretary of the Board, signified their intention of engaging the services of Inspector Ward.

The Board then adjourned for two weeks.

Mr. E. M. Elliott, Vice-President of the Board, handled the chalk, and gives promise of developing into an expert in that line.

A COPPER INVESTMENT

Messrs. Thos. Paterson & Co. Appointed Canadian Fiscal Agents

LEADING COPPER COMPANY

And Are Now Ready to Sell Stock—A Splendid Investment—Safe and Exceeeingly Profitable

Never in the history of the United States has there been so much prosperity, nor such abundance of capital seeking investment. The natural result has been that the market is flooded with schemes of all characters and kinds, the business man finding circulars galore on his desk each mail. Hence, with scarcely a grudging passing glance, they find their way into the waste basket. If this follows a like fate, and the deserving fate of about 90 per cent of these so-called business propositions for investment, you have simply lost an opportunity to go in on the ground floor in a safe investment, and every dollar of your investment with 3 per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually, guaranteed to you by one by one of New York's soundest and strongest banking companies.

Life is too short, business too exacting, competition too strenuous for the successful business man to waste time in words. Read; and if you are investing little or much, this will not go to the waste basket, and you will investigate.

First—It is a fact, and you know it, that there are perfectlhy legitimate, honest, and absolute safe business investments in the market to-day, investments that will largely repay those who are in on the ground floor. Is this one—we say so and will prove it if you give us a hearing, not only such, but an extra-ordinary one.

SECOND—No prudent, careful business man will invest without the most thorough and careful investigation, satisfying himself as far as possible that his money is absolutely safe; knowing that in this day of business progress risk and loss of principal can and ought to be eliminated.

THIRD—The safest, largest and quickest returns are in oil and mining properties.

FOURTH—In the present day of geological and scientific accuracy the value of ore deposits are and can be pretty accurately ascertained beforehand at no very excessive expenditure. Where this has been done thoroughly, as in the present instance, and the management of the company is in good honest hands, risk is entirely eliminated.

FIFTH—We eliminate all risk by a gold bond certificate absolutely covering both principal and interest of a New York bank.

Ours are copper, lead and silver mines. They are in New Mexico. They are not prospects, but proved properties, where thousands upon thousands of dollars have already been invested by some of the sharpest and shrewdest business men there are in the United States.

The promoter of this company is a scientific man, and his authority has been used by some of these very capitalists, and the claims upon which this company now seeks investment for development are such as have been selected by him, and lie in the very heart of the property owned by these capitalists. In his (private) judgment there are none richer in that whole section.

The Estey Milling & Mining Company, the Boston and New Haven Copper Company, and the Dividend Mining and Milling Company have bought hundreds of acres of ore claims in and all around the property of this company. They have built a large smelter; built a small town; piped water for over five miles; have tramways, and everything else in active operation, and would have bought these claims, only they were not for sale.

Not a dollar's worth of stock of either of these companies is for sale. These men have sent on the ground, besides the author of this and others, such well-known mineralogists and experts as Mr. Turner, of California, Mr. Thomas Goodwin, of Colorado, Mr. Bryson, of Michigan, and Mr. Smith of Boston, mining experts who have examined and spent years in Colorado, Utah, Nevada, Arizona, and New Mexico, all of whom agree with a unanimity that is simply surprising that among the richest copper fields of the United States yet discovered are those occupied and now owned by these companies, including the acres which this company own and which are so far developed give promise to be among the richest in the United States.

The original investors in this district were principally Boston capitalists whose names are withheld from the public, as they are, withheld from their own capital and not seeking outside assistance, and treat theirs as a private investment and of no concern to the public. But to show how careful they were, they built a smelter on a small scale close by Boston, which was a perfect smelter in epitome costing a good many thousand dollars, and they brought ore from these fields and had it here ground (or crushed) and regularly smelted by a new process, and after thus proving at a great expense the richness of these fields, they bought up all the claims covering the entire territory (except those herein set out), and built at their own expense at two-storey smelter as stated above, the main room of which being 60 ft. by 120 ft. in length; machine-room 60 ft. by 80; ore-bins 60 ft. by 90, with a capacity of 8.00 to 10.000 tons; engine-room built of stone 80 ft. by 40; boiler-room of stone, 40 ft. by 80; 1 engine, 200 h.p., with high duty boilers weighing over 15.000 pounds each; there are three elegant engines all set in masonry; and four dynamos of the latest type; steam pumps, etc.; a 24-inch jaw crusher, weighing over 16,000 pounds; two large pulverizers, a scale-house with scales of 12,000 pounds capacity; a block-stone, three-room assay office, fully equipped, all lighted with electricity; a large, huge two-storey commissary general store, and in fact all the machinery necessary to make a complete plant, without regard to expense.

Besides these, they built a fine road for connection with the railway station about 14 miles distant, which railroad has only been recently built.

They built also a regular little town for their employees, a good business feature of which is that there no saloons are permitted, and no sale whatever of intoxicants.

The Dividend Mining and Milling Company alone own something like 23 miles of claims.

Four of our claims, which are known as the Bryan, Grey Fox, Key Stone, and Good Times, are situated on the vein in direct line from the smelter, and one of these, the "Good Times" is not over a quarter of a mile from the smelter; in fact, they have been selected and reserved as superior claims according to the best judgment and knowledge of the author of this. And one of these, the "Grey Fox," as developed so far, proves to be one of the richest in the wole section.

But there is so much to be said that it would be folly to attempt to place it in a circular, our purpose being merely to interest you and have you write direct to the office or visit us personally and investigate thoroughly for yourself.

We know we are offering you an investment coming in on the ground floor whereby you will profit very largely, much more so owing to the fact that this is a young enterprise, and the wealth of these mines in copper kept a profound secret by Boston and other interested capitalists. That hundreds of thousands of dollars have been invested here by shrewd Boston, New Haven and New York capitalists is a fact that can be proved conclusively, and that the writer has reserved for this company claims which he believes to be the richest among all these, is also a fact equally susceptible of proof.

This company is moderately capitalized, as you will see, it needs to build no smelter (nor to go to any expense for large machinery, as necessary in every other mining project—all this is already done and at our command) because one of the first steps the writer took was to get a binding contract from these gentlemen that all the copper mined upon his claims would be smelted upon demand at their mill. Hence, no great outlay is required, but with a small amount we can begin operations at once. But this small amount we want immediately, not that we can begin mining at once, and thereby be in receipt of immediate returns, and thus able in a very few months to proclaim a dividend on all our stock.

We are so situated that by merely the expense for labor and mining we can procure returns as fast as we can send our ore to the mill.

To raise this small amount at once, we propose forming a syndicate, and are sending to a few names given us of business men this circular, to whom special concessions in stock will be made, (pro rata) until the full sum of $40,000 is raised, which amount, as above, will be guaranteed, principal and interest (as above) by the New York Building Loan Banking Company.

Five of these business men will be selected by the syndicate as Directors, the total number being seven. All members of this syndicate will be treated alike, and be on the ground floor with the promoters.

We are thus offering you a rare opportunity to get a good block of stock in a perfectly legitimate enterprise, and an absolutely safe one, by a small investment.

The stock of this company will be sold at par as soon as we begin active operations at the mines, and in no other way.

CASE FOR DEFENCE HAS CLOSED, COMMISSION HAS ADJOURNED

Until Tuesday, When Argument by Counsel will Begin If No Further Evidence is Offered---Mr. Conmee Examined Regarding Protests and Conversation with Gamey

The last of the evidence in the Gamey-Stratton investigation was submitted yesterday afternoon. The defence had concluded its case when the court rose at one o'clock and it was agreed that after the examination of two or three witnesses for the prosecution at the afternoon session the enquiry would be adjourned until Tuesday next, when argument by counsel will proceed unless more evidence if forthcoming.

Mr. Conmee, the member for Algoma, was the only witness examined in the forenoon. His evidence related to conversations with Mr. Gamey in which he is alleged to have intimated his intention of giving the Government an independent support. Witness also gave interesting evidence regarding the Manitoulin and Soo protests.

The Gamey enquiry opened half an hour late in the morning, 30 minutes being occupied by a private conference between the Commissioners and the officials of the Ontario Bank. Those present beside the judges were: Messrs. Blake, Ritchie, and McPherson for the prosecution; Mr. Riddell, of the defence; Mr. Walter Barwick, solicitor for the bank, and several managing officials. The result of the conference was not immediately made public, and the hearing proceeded as the commissioners assumed the bench at 10.30 a.m.

The first witness was James Conmee, M.P.P. Examined by Mr. Riddell, he said that he had known Mr. Gamey for a long time and he remembered several conversations he had had with him, both before and after the elections. The witness continued:—In the spring of 1902, before the election, I remember having a conversation with Mr. Gamey in regard to the erection of a custom smelter at Sudbury. The question of Government support was brought up, but there was no definite plan proposed.

After the election, in June, between the 4th and 11th, I saw Mr. Gamey in the Rossin House, when the conversation again turned to the Sudbury smelter. I told him that I had advocated the building of a smelter at Sudbury and had impressed the matter upon the Government. Mr. Harcourt had expressed his willingness to assist.

I suggested that the appointment by the Government of an analyst, who would be independent of the company, would impart confidence on the part of those who brought their ores to be smelted. He also discussed the question of water-power near Sudbury. I offered to put in some capital, and he said he thought he could raise $10,000 to go on with the work. [illegible] of both parties was discussed on that occasion. I mentioned Mr. Whitney's Sudbury speech. He said it was ridiculous, and showed that Mr Whitney had only a slight knowledge of mining matters. I said the Government's policy was the better one for that section of the country. He agreed, and said that if it was carried out he would give the Government an independent support.

I next met him on the train between Sudbury and the Soo in the latter part of June or the early part of July. He said he had not gone into the smelter question. He told me of the protest against him. He said he had discussed his course with his friends and stated to them his intention of giving the government his support. He did not use the word, "independent" on that occasion. He seemed desirous of ascertaining my opinion as to whether the protest would be pressed against him if he was a Government supporter. I said I didn't think it would.

I said if that's so, you can give me some information about the Sault. I would like to see it opened. He said he had no personal information, but he had heard talk by some Conservatives in regard to the constituency to the effect that more effective work had been done with two gallons of whisky than in any other way. I went to the Sault and I advised that a detective be put ont o investigate the election.

Mr. Riddell asked what kind of evidence was being submitted in the Sault case, but withdrew the question on the Chancellor saying that he had no judicial knowledge of such a case, which is still before the courts.

Mr. Riddell then quoted from Gamey's evidence, showing that he had denied telling Mr. Conmee that he would give the Government an independent support, or that he had commented upon Mr. Whitney's Sudbury speech as ridiculous and absurd.

The witness directly contradicted Mr. Gamey's evidence on these points.

Mr. Ritchie cross-examined —Mr. Conmee said the first interview took place some time in March before Gamey was nominated, and any resident of the North, knowing his mining policy, might have spoken to him on mining matters.

The witness said that his policy was the development of mining, and, therefore, he favored the building of a custom smelter so that small holders of mining lands could bring their ore to the smelter and get a return just as a farmer brings his grist to the mill. He had advocated this policy for five or six years, but so far the Government had not adopted his views.

GOVERNMENT WAS SLOW.

Mr. Ritchie—After all your efforts is there any custom smelter in course of construction or operation? A—No.

Then the Government has been slow to adopt your views? A— A little slow.

Mr. Gamey was ready to adopt your views? A—He did to some extent.

You and he agreed in your policy? A—We agreed that it would be a good thing to have a custom smelter.

You agreed that the Government should bring this about? A—That it should encourage it.

You had discussed the matter with the Minister of Crown Lands? A—Yes.

And that subject was discussed with Mr. Gamey? A—Not altogether.

You both thought the Government a little slow? A—Yes, but I thought the Opposition a little worse.

You knew Mr. Gamey to be a Conservative? A—I did.

You knew he had denounced the Government's policy? — I don't know as I did. He told me at the Rossin House he was not an extreme party man.

What was said at the June interview? A—The elections were referred to and something was said as to the close result. I had certainly up to that time considered Gamey as a supporter of Mr. Whitney.

What was said about the smelter? A—Gamey gave me a more detailed estimate as to the cost of it. The building and machinery to cost about $10,000 and the lands and power about $30,000. I said that if the company could be formed, and it could be shown that nickel could be produced, the Government would likely be willing to aid the enterprise and appoint an analyst.

Neither of you had changed your views as to the proper mining policy of the Government? A—No.

Was the analyst appointed? A—There was no occasion. Neither the company nor the Government had gone on. Gamey asked if the fact that he was a Conservative would be any detriment to the enterprise, and then said that he was not an extreme party man. I said I did not think it would make any difference, as my experience was that if anything the Government gave the Conservatives the best of it. There were many things that puzzled the Liberals.

You believed that? A— it was probably said in the way of banter.

What was Mr. Ross' mining policy? A—To do all possible for the development of the northern country.

Mr. Ritchie—You said Mr. Gamey expressed his intention of supporting the Government's mining policy? A—I did.

You didn't think he would support bad measures? A—No. I wouldn't do that myself. I told him I had pursued the same course, and had given the Government an independent support, opposing it at times. Gamey said he had told his friends that he meant to pursue the same course.

Did you stipulate at your convention that you were to be free to follow your own judgment? A—I did.

Then the only difference between you was that you told your friends at your convention, and Gamey told his friends during his campaign? A

Gamey said something about a few gallons of whiskey. Have you heard of such a thing as an election inducement? A—I have heard of it used in the east of the Sault constituency, but not in the west.

A moral constituency. Was anything more said in the railway train? A—No. Gamey got off after the conversation about the Sault.

In view of what Gamey had said to you did you communicate with the Ministers? A—Not at that time. I think I told Mr. Stratton afterwards I told Mr. Grant also.

DEFENCE CONCLUDED.

After a few questions in re-examination by Mr. Riddell, Mr. Johnston said:

This, my Lords, closes our case. We do not see that any good end can be gained by going into side issues, more particularly, as these branches of the case will probably be gone into at some future time, so that unless your Lordships so direct, we have no further evidence to offer.

The Chancellor said that he had followed the evidence quite closely, and he thought there were two things that should be cleared up, first, the reference to D. A. Jones; and, second, the manner in which the letter of the 10th of September got from Mr. Aylesworth's office to the Premier's office. He trusted that these matters would be explained. So far as Jones was concerned their Lordships would call him themselves.

They did not think it necessary to call "Cap" Sullivan for the reason that Gamey had testified that at the visit to Gamey's house, the "Cap" proposed nothing, and after that he disappeared from the scene.

The Chancellor then suggested that an adjournment be made until Tuesday at 10 a.m. On reopening then any additional evidence desired could be put in and counsel could then go on with argument without making any further adjournment.

Mr. Blake stated that it had not yet been decided whether or not Mr. Gamey would be placed in the box to give rebuttal evidence.

It was decided to adjourn till 2 o'clock to enable the prosecution to put in a couple of witnesses, after which the adjournment till Tuesday would go into effect. The commission accordingly arose for an hour.

After adjournment counsel stated to the press that an arrangement had been made by which the Ontario Bank employes will examine their own books and report to counsel on both sides the existence of any entries which might be connected in any way with the case. Such matters, if any are found, are to be investigated in open court.

Thursday—Fair, and a little higher temperature.

A Wonderful Tonic and Strengthener. Said a druggist to-day. "No doubt about it, the tonic that gives best results is the biggest seller, and that is Ferrozone. It enriches and purifies the blood, restores strength and energy to the feeble, and is a scientific reconstructor that was always popular. In Chlorosis, Anaemia, Tiredness, Languor, Brain Fag, Indigestion and Dyspepsia its action is prompt, and satisfactory cures always follow. Yes, I recommend Ferrozone to my customers because I believe it is the best tonic and strengthening medicine that money can buy." Large boxes cost 50c.

A GOOD PLAN

The Finance committee of the Brantford City Council have been instructed to inspect the Assessment rolls before the same are accepted. The idea is to remove if possible any causes for complaint on the part of a property owner who doesn't care to fight the matter before the Court of Revision. It is felt that supervision is necessary, inasmuch as assessments are sometimes too low, the city losing by the mistakes of the assessors—there are two in Brantford, appointed every year. Further, it is declared necessary that the Council should understand the work that is being done and the proper committee to convey the information to the source of authority would seem to be that which handles the finances of the municipality.

We commend the action of the Brantford City Council to our Mayor and Aldermen. In the absence of printed Assessment rolls a thorough inspection by the Finance committee would accrue to the benefit of all taxpayers. Citizens are in the dark as to the actual results of the Assessor's rounds and an assurance from the Council that the work is not faulty, that the assessing has been done according to a system that will stand fair criticism, will be a most acceptable statement. We hazard the opinion that the public will approve of our suggestion, that the Peterborough Town Council give that attention to the business of assessment that in the interests of the municipality is considered necessary in Brantford, which will this year also have printed copies of the rolls available for inspection by those assessed.

THE TURN OF THE WORM

President Baer deserves credit for having effectively snubbed a lawyer who while examining him before the Interstate Commerce Commission took the opportunity to frame one of his questions in insulting terms.

"Is there anything in the contract," the lawyer asked, "that would degrade and incriminate you?"

Mr. Baer replied.

"I decline to answer that question because it is insolent. There is nothing in any contract I have ever made that makes me the criminal your client published me as being, and he cannot come into court and insult me."

The lawyer thereupon asked the court to rebuke the witness and the court, by declining to do anything of the kind, by implication, endorsed Mr. Baer's protest. The incident appears to have had a beneficial effect upon the learned counsel, for he was quite civil during the rest of the examination. It is only just to the legal profession to point out that the best and most successful lawyers at the bar do not cease to be gentlemen when they put their gowns on; nevertheless, the people of this continent are pretty badly lawyer-ridden, and the right of the lawyer to insult and bully a witness is almost established by usage.

THE GERMAN NAVY

The idea prevails in the United States that Germany's present activity in increasing her naval strength has some relation to what are alleged by some to be her designs on South America. But some Englishmen explains Germany's action in a very different way, representing that it is her purpose to rival or surpass Great Britain in sea-power. Karl Blind, in the May number of the North American Review, endeavors to explain "Why Germany Strengthens her Navy." Professor Blind points out that Germany is geographically wedged in between two great military and naval powers, which are now in close alliance, and that it might be necessary for Germany in conceivable circumstances to fight a defensive war on two fronts, east and west. In such a case it might be of extreme importance to her to have command of the sea upon her own shores. At the beginning of the last war with France, when France dominated the sea, Germany had to detach one hundred and sixty thousand men for the defence of her coasts and harbors; and the German army and population would run enormous risks, in reference to provisioning if, in any future war, the North Sea, into whose vast corner bay a mass of imports converges, were not properly protected by a strong naval force. Professor Blind negatives the idea that the naval aspirations of Germany are of recent, or of royal or imperial origin. One of the purposes that were closest to the hearts of the Liberals in 1848-49 was the restoration of the German power on the sea. Professor Blind says:

"As to the feeling of the nation at large, it may be taken for certain that, if a plebiscite in the Swiss style had been or were now taken, the verdict would have been and would be now in favor of proper naval preparations against the increasing contingency of risks, even though an additional burden of taxation had to be borne. Though thirty-two years have passed since the last war with France, the lesson of that time has not been lost upon the German people. The readiness with which military and naval budgets are always voted in the French Chamber of Deputies generally, with scarcely any discussion, and the great and rapid increase of the Russian and French fleets, are for Germany significant monitory signs.

"Along the North Sea and the Baltic, Germany possesses a good seafaring population. Year by year, the number of men who come from the south to enter the navy is steadily increasing. This is true even for Alsace-Lorraine, which now furnishes far more volunteers for the navy than might be expected, comparing its population with that of Germany as a whole."

Buried Gold

By FRED WHISHAW.

Author of "A Boyar of the Terrible," etc.

the lad roughly by the shoulders, shaking him to and fro as violently as Robinson had done but twenty-four hours since.

"No," roared Keith, "you don't. You don't go back neither to the two chaps nor yet to the first one. You don't say a word to them and you don't say a word to anyone else of all this. You've forgotten the whole business—d'you hear me? D'ye understand me? It didn't happen, that's what you've got to remember, and no more."

"All right, Mr. Adams," whimpered poor Harry. "I'll do anything you wish about it. That's why I came. I don't see why I should be bullied and shook to bits just because I've tried to do right by you." Keith let the lad go, and sat for a moment to think.

"You sha'n't lose by it, never fear," he said, "so long as you do what I say; but you go and give that chap away to the others and I'll kill you, or near it, I swear I will; so mind that."

"I promise you I won't," said the boy. "I'll not breathe a word about the whole business, not to nobody."

"Well, I'm sorry I was rough. You'd better go now. You were right to come and tell me. Don't fear, the mad chap you saw won't beat me, not now I know I've got to look out. I can take care of myself."

Keith passed a miserable night. Perhaps he had never until this evening quite realized how deeply he had rooted his hopes of winning Ruby, or how desperately he had allowed his affections to fix themselves upon that one object. And now—well, of course there was not a shadow of doubt that all was over for him. Dick Robinson was alive and had returned.

"Pretty sort of a pal I am!" he reflected bitterly. "I ought to be up and dancin' for joy that he's turned up alive, him as we thought drowned a year ago and more, and here am I actual sorry he ain't dead, and all because——." "So I am glad—poor old Dick!" his thoughts ran presently. "An' I'll be off and tell him the first thing in the morning. Ruby'll be glad, too."

But this line of reflection was something too painful, and poor Keith clenched his teeth and his hands and half choked himself trying to restrain the curses that came in volumes to his lips.

"She's got to know; of course she's got to know. I'm not such a darned blackguard as not to tell her—not quite so bad as that—and as soon as she knows, it's all up with me and my hopes, and she'll be glad of it."

That was the bitterest reflection of all.

"She'll be glad of it, and 'll think no more of me than if I'd never been born, and I wish to God I hadn't."

"Well, the thing to think of is," he reflected presently, having brought himself into a saner mood, "what's going to make her happiest, and it's no use pretendin' to think there's two ways of answerin' that question."

"A bloke what's returned from the grave, like," he continued grimly, "has a pull over us chaps that remained behind and wanted to stand in his shoes. Even if she's begun to forget him, he comes in again with such a to-do that a maid isn't likely to want anyone else and him come back!

"Besides, it'd be mean to try. Not a thing any pal worthy the name would do. Mean and mean again, that's what it'd be!"

And then, the conclusion arrived at, poor Keith would begin again at the beginning and cry for very anguish of heart, and so da capo until the morning, the splendid unselfishness of the man triumphing over the selfishness of the lover, only to collapse once more in the anguish of the miserable, disappointed heart.

It was still early morning when Keith started out on foot for Southampton. He must see Robinson without a moment's delay. He must know the worst, and so must Dick. Dick must be reassured and Ruby made happy, whatsoever the cost.

Dick was still in bed, recovering from the attack of fever into which his conversation with the lad Beadon had thrown him. Keith found the public-house without difficulty, and was directed up the dirty, rickety stairs by the lady of the house, whose early toilet had not included the removal from her hair of the curling papers within which it was wretchedly confined—like the chrysalis which will presently burst forth in all the glories of the butterfly.

"You'll find him in the room on the right as you get up," she said. "Mind the slop-pail what he puts outside his door, mornings."

If Keith cherished any faint hope that the mad stranger of Beadon's tale might even yet prove to be some other person and not Dick Robinson, his first glance at the sick man slightly flattered that hope, for so haggard and aged was the man that he at first scarcely recognized him.

The next moment he realized that the hope was a foolish one; it was Dick, of course. He knew it would be Dick long before he looked at him. The two men stared at one another for an instant without speaking. Keith was so suffocated by a flood of mixed feelings that he was unable to frame words. Robinson was startled, surprised and relieved in one and the same moment. The sound of footsteps upon the stair had filled him with deadly fear, for the spectre of pursuit and a sudden violent death was for ever at his shoulder. When Keith Adams opened the door his first feeling was intense relief, followed by one of insane anger.

"So it's you, is it?" he cried. "You're a nice one to call yourself a faithful pal you are! Get out of my sight, you rascal, or I'll strangle you, ill as I am, with my bare hands!"

Adams was glad of this kind of reception. He was going to stand down for this man; to do the right thing by him at great cost to himself. It would be more difficult to do it mildly, and a few hard words exchanged, or even a fight, would do him good.

"Stow it, you fool!" he cried angrily. "Me that's come all this way to see you, first moment I heard you'd returned! We thought you was drowned, and if that's the way you're going to treat old friends, maybe it'd be better you were."

"Thought I was drowned, did you? Not a bit of it, mate. It was convenient to think it, I don't doubt, seein' there was a woman to be stolen from me, a wench that wouldn't look at you, as you well know, while I was about!"

"Nobody hasn't robbed you of anything that I know of," said Keith. "Though you couldn't blame her if she had taken up with anyone, believin' you drowned, as she certainly did. Why don't you make sure of things before accusin' folks—only a born fool would talk like what you're talking."

"You're a liar," said Dick. "I've heard different."

"Then you've heard lies. And, what's

Capital Stock, 1,500,000 shares. In Treasury, 500,000 shares

TRANSFER OFFICE; BRISTOL, CONN.

This Company has a perpetual lease on 20 acres of proven oil land in SECTION NINE (9) of the Boulder district, and this section and the immediate vicinity have the best and largest number of producing wells in the entire district.

Our Well No. 1 came in, in January and is now pumping and shipping Oil regularly to the Refinery.

The Directors have decided to put down well No. 2 at once, and they now offer a block of the Treasury stock for the next 30 days at

10 Cents per Share, after that price will be advanced.

It is a well known fact that a 15 barrel well will pay over 100 per cent. profit upon its cost.

This is no longer a speculation for we have proved that oil is on our ground, and we now have oil in paying quantities, with two wells pumping we can soon pay dividends, and every well we put down increases our earning capacity.

This is a business proposition, managed by business men.

The Florence Oil Co.

has just been incorporated and organized by New York business men to operate on their property in the celebrated Green River District of Utah. By all reports this is the coming Oil Territory. The quality of the oil is of the very highest grade and experts say the Green River District gives evidence of being the greatest oil field in the United States.

The unsold part of the first allotment of Treasury Stock will be sold at 20c per share, par value $1.00. Purchasers of this allotment are in on the "ground floor" and are almost sure to get returns of $5.00 for $1.00 within a reasonable time. The management is honest and competent.

THE FLORENCE OIL COMPANY

being a New York Company is entitled to special consideration. The office is at

CAPITAL STOCK. - - $1,000,000.00

(Full Paid and Non-Assessable.

The property of this company consists of three full claims known as the "Fleur de lis," "Mayflower," and "Mistletoe" Group, embracing an area of sixty acres of highly mineralized ground, located in the famous Sumpter district, Baker county, Oregon, about [illegible] miles from McEwen on the Sumpter Valley Railroad.

The best evidence we have to offer as to our "being in good company" is to mention a few of those who are our immediate neighbors, viz: the North Pole, Bonanza, Red Boy, Eureka Columbia, Golconda, Cracker, Oregon, Golden Wizard, all of which are in this same district, producing from [illegible] to [illegible] per month each.

From the preliminary amount of development work already done on our property and from the assays of ore which is entirely free milling, running $18.00 to $750.00 per ton, we are confident that with the installation of modern machinery we have a proposition worthy of the most searching enquiry by those seeking a high grade investment.

Our board of directors consists of men who have a practical knowledge of mining, well known and of high standing, who have invested every available dollar of their own to acquire this valuable property and put it on a dividend paying basis.

To accomplish this it has been decided to place a limited amount of the treasury stock on sale at [illegible] per share for development purposes only until such time as the condition of the mine will enable it to take care of itself, when the sale of stock will be withdrawn.

Our prospectus will give you all particulars. Let us send it to you. We shall also be pleased to answer all enquiries whether by mail or in person at our office.

STOCK MARKETS

STOCK ENQUIRY STEADILY INCREASING

New York, May 6.—Slowly but surely inquiry for stocks and bonds appears to be on the increase; as is usually the case at the conception of a market movement in the opposite direction from the one directly before. Movement is slow labored. Like the rolling snowball, however, as it increases in size, it increases in momentum. Every point advance draws new supporters to the movement. As a result there are more people directly interested near the termination of the movement than at the beginning, yet at the beginning is the proper time for the trader to have the greatest supply of stocks. Those who follow such advices will be the ones to make money and not classified with the losers. The condition of the present market is healthy, it it is not overburdened with weak people loaded with stocks. This class are not at the moment interested. Pools and investment interests at present have the stocks. Declines of moment never occur where such is the case, but only when the public generally are loaded with stocks and their buying power consequently exhausted. When such is the case, declines cut into margins, causing many compulsory selling orders, which bring about further declines in prices. The bargain hunter has had a splendid field in Wall street for a month past. He has been availing himself, later in the summer he will probably have the opportunity to turn his stock into cash, thereby securing his profits, to await his next opportunity. When stocks are cheap, and they are right at the moment, it pays to buy the very best class of shares such as Pennsylvania, N. Y. C., Metropolitan, Manhattan, Illinois Central, St. Paul, etc. Such issues always give a good account for themselves in an upward movement. They usually lead a market movement in either direction, and are infinitely wider in their fluctuation. Again, such class of stocks always return at some time to their preceding high prices; so if the shareholder be caught "long" in a receding movement he can be certain of a recurring opportunity for the disposal of his holdings. Our constantly growing country make the above fact a positive certainty. We deem it specially advisable to buy stocks at the present time, being confident that materially higher prices will exist this summer. Every condition now existing is in favor of rising values. For three to six months past combinating conditions existed also; to-day they are gone. Those who buy now will, we believe be the ones who will make the largest profit upon the amounts of money they may invest. It is not only a good time to open an account, but buy something and carry it in your account.

Under the caption, "The Art of Putting Things," an English author has given some very amusing examples of saying things in a queer way. One of the most unfortunate recorded attempts to escape from a conversational difficulty was made by an East End curate, who cultivated the friendship of mechanics.

One day a carpenter came to him and said, "I have brought my boy's likeness, as you said you'd like to have it."

"How good of you to remember!" said the curate. "What a capital likeness! How is he?"

"Why, sir, don't you remember?" said the carpenter. "He's dead."

"Oh, yes, of course I know that," replied the curate. "I mean how's the man that took the photograph?"

A story is told of a young laborer who, on his way to his day's work, called at the registrar's office to register his father's death. When the official asked the date of the event, the son replied:

"He ain't dead yet, but he'll be dead before night, so I thought it would save me another journey if you would put it down now."

"Oh, but that won't do at all," said the registrar. "Perhaps your father will live till to-morrow."

"Well, I don't know, sir; the doctor says as he won't; and he knows what he has given him."

"Mr. Grimes," said the rector to the vestryman, "we had better take up the collection before the sermon." "Indeed?" "Yes. I'm going to preach on Economy."

A MAGNIFICENT INVESTMENT

THE GOLD TUNNEL COMPANY.
PRESCOTT, ARIZONA

The Company owns in SIX PARALLEL VEINS of GIGANTIC SIZE, one of the largest GOLD PROPOSITIONS in the country. Each of these six veins would make a mine by itself.

The Company, by purchase and consolidation, has succeeded in acquiring the entire length of these great GOLD BEARING ledges; covering an area six thousand feet in length and about two thousand feet wide. The Company owns this valuable property free of any incumbrance.

The ground included in this group of mines gives ample evidence of tremendous natural disturbances, and shows plainly on the surface the acid and mineral stains characteristic of a heavy mineralized gold lead of gigantic proportions.

Six Miles of Gold Bearing Veins

Through the length of four of the mining claims; forming a continuous line 6,000 feet long run THREE LEDGES so close together as to be economically worked from one opening; they aggregate from 85 to 200 feet in width.

The adjoining line of three mining claims shows a ledge 4,500 feet in length, varying in width from 7 to 200 feet, with the same character of ore.

Beginning at the south end of the "Eighty-Four" mining claim, is a fifth large ledge carrying good values in GOLD, and running in a northerly direction for a distance of fully forty-five hundred feet.

Two mining claims on the east side show GOLD BEARING CROPPINGS 40 to 50 feet wide through their entire length, a distance of three thousand feet.

All of the ledges are well mineralized, carrying at grass root values in gold running from about $2.00 to $6.00 per ton.

Cold in the Head

What's the sense in sneezing and Sniffling, dosing with purgatives or bothering with atomizers?

Catarrhozone

A convenient inhaler treatment is the proper remedy to cure quickly and pleasantly

Sensible people long ago abandoned the idea of "working off" a cold by means of laxatives and purgatives for the simple reason that the cure is as bad as the disease itself.

To cure a cold in about ten minutes' time use Catarrhozone. It is aromatic delightful to inhale, clean and very simple to use.

Catarrhozone is a vegetable antiseptic, and perfectly safe and harmless. Even children and infants can use it. The vapor is inhaled at the mouth, and after passing through the respiratory organs is exhaled slowly through the nostrils.

Catarrhozone never disappoints, it stops sneezing, coughing and running at the eyes, by a few inhalations. Inflammation, congestion and all irritation disappear under the influence of Catarrhozone more quickly than can be told.

C. B. College, of Clarence Street, London, says: "I had a continuous cold in the head for years, and never used anything with such quick results as I derived from five minutes' use of Catarrhozone. I am delighted to find a remedy that cures colds in a few minutes. Catarrhozone cures every time."

To carry a Catarrhozone Inhaler in the pocket means you won't have colds, catarrh or any lung trouble. It keeps these diseases away and is warranted to protect you against all the ills of winter. Complete outfit, with Hard Rubber Pocket Inhaler costs $1.00. Small size, 25 cents. Druggists or N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

FOOD IN NEED

Is a Friend Indeed

Many times a school teacher in the middle of a heavy session requires exactly the right kind of food to rebuild the wasted brain and nerve tissues, as well as to keep up the muscular energy. This is the business of Grape-Nuts in which the starchy part of the pure cereals is turned to grape sugar and where the phosphates predominate, making it rich in food value and ready for the weakest stomach to assimilate immediately. A lady teacher of Minneapolis says:

"About four years ago I realized that I was breaking down nervously in the middle of a school year. To a school teacher this means not only loss of health but inability to go on with her work. Nothing appeared to help me and I was just about discouraged when a friend recommended that I look into Grape-Nuts. On reading what this brain food does toward rebuilding brain and nerve centers I made up my mind to give it a fair trial.

"I ate Grape-Nuts Food dry with cream for breakfast and enjoyed it greatly; my improvement began immediately and was so steady that I did not realize how fully I had been benefited until an extra strain came on me in my school work through which I was able to go, continuing to improve all the time. Looking back on the trial now, I realize how this wonderful food saved me from a certain break-down.

"I have kept up the daily use of Grape-Nuts ever since and have never had a return of the trouble. I always take a package with me when traveling and I look upon the food as essential to my health as fresh air or exercise." Name furnished by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

MR. STONE HONORED

PRESENTED WITH AN ADDRESS AND A CANE

By the Members of the Albany Club—On the Eve of His Departure for London

Last night the members of the Albany Club presented Mr. E. B. Stone one of the Board of Directors, with an address, accompanied by a gold head walking stick, which was handsomely engraved. Mr. Stone's departure from Peterborough is regretted by very many, all of whom will be pleased to hear of his future success.

Mr. Gliddon's large orchestra of about twenty pieces was present, and enlivened the proceedings with some fine music.

Shortly after nine o'clock Mr. W. H. Meldrum, President of the Club, took his seat and called for order. In a few well chosen words he referred feelingly to Mr. Stone's departure from Peterborough. He would carry with him to his new home the hearty good wishes of the members of the Albany Club, of which he was an honored member and largely through whose efforts the Club had risen to prominence and usefulness. The President then read the address as follows.

Dear Mr. Stone:

We, your fellow members of the Albany Club, are desirous that you should not leave us without a word of farewell.

We are sorry that the official circle has been broken so soon after its organization, particularly when the break is caused by the departure of one who has done so much for its rapid rise to success as you have.

A short three months of social intercourse and you are gone! But still 'twere better to have come and gone than never to have come at all. We hope that your change of habitation will be for the better, and that your future will be as bright as your fancy paints it. We hope to hear of your success in the legal fights and forensic battles around London and its suburbs.

In conclusion allow us to express the hope that you will always have a tender feeling for the bantling you are leaving behind—the tender infant you are deserting. In order to keep a lien on you we herewith hand you something on which you are to lean.

Signed on behalf of the Albany Club of Peterborough.

W. H. MELDRUM,
President.
W. SAILSBURY,
Secretary

The Secretary, Mr. Sailsbury, presented Mr. Stone with the cane which was a very handsome and valuable one, and on which was engraved, "To Mr. E. B. Stone, from the Albany Club, Peterborough, 1903."

Mr. Stone in reply said that he was sincerely grateful to the members of the Club for their flattering address and beautiful present. He would dearly cherish them as mementoes of the happy days spent in the society of the members of the Club, of which he was proud to be a member. He regretted leaving Peterborough where 18 years of his life had been spent, and where he had many true friends. He could not express his feelings and the members would have to accept his feebly uttered thanks.

After the presentation short speeches of an eulogistic character were made by Judge Weller, W. H. Robertson, W. Sailsbury, John Green, W. Bunton, T. Brightman, Geo. Elliott, G. K. Martin, W. K. Hall, Geo. A. Cox and others, after which the proceedings of the evening terminated.

PUNISHMENT.

Social progress has done away with a great many forms of punishment once administered under the laws of enlightened people. But nature never changes or modifies her penalties. She still has the same punishment for the man who neglects or abuses his stomach as she had in the far off days "when Adam delved and Eve span."

The physical discomfort, dullness, sluggishness, irritability, nervousness and sleeplessness which are visited upon the man who eats carelessly or irregularly have been from the beginning the evidences of disease of the stomach and its associated organs of digestion and nutrition.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures the diseased stomach and enables the perfect digestion and assimilation of food, so that the sluggishness, irritability, nervousness and sleeplessness which result from innutrition are cured also.

"I was taken sick nine years ago with fever," writes Mr. M. M. Wardwell, of Linwood, Leavenworth Co., Kansas. "Had the doctor and he broke up the fever all right, but I took diarrhœa right away; he couldn't cure it and it became chronic, and then he gave up the case. I got so weak with it and had piles so badly I couldn't lie down, nor hardly sit up. Was that way two or three months, thought I would 'never be well again,' but picked up one of Dr. Pierce's Memorandum Books one day and saw your description of catarrh of the stomach. I thought it hit my case. We had a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in the house that was got for mother. You recommend it for catarrh of the stomach, so I went to taking it. The one bottle nearly cured me. I got two bottles next time and took one and one-half and was well. I haven't been bothered with diarrhœa since."

TWO LINES TO THE PACIFIC COAST

Grand Trunk Pacific Has Outlined Route---Winnipeg to be on the Main Line

Montreal, May 6— According to a plan issued by the Grand Trunk Railway Company, the Grand Trunk Pacific will pass straight through the City of Winnipeg, and from the latter point the line will run in a north-westerly direction through the Saskatoon district to Battleford. From the latter point a line will be constructed to Calgary, while the main line will continue on to Edmonton. From this point there will be two lines to the coast, one passing through Yellow Head Pass to Butte Inlet, and the second through the Peace River Pass to Port Simpson. An extension from the latter line will be run north to Dawson.

The eastern end of the line will extend from North Bay to Quebec. This portion will be carried north of the St. Lawrence with a mileage of about 625 miles of new road. The new bridge just above Quebec will be used for crossing the St. Lawrence to Levis, the present eastern terminus of the Grand Trunk system, and from Levis, the line will be built to the winter port.

The distance from Quebec to Port Simpson, by the Grand Trunk Pacific will be 3,205 miles, or about 50 miles shorter than the distance from Quebec to Vancouver over the Canadian Pacific. Port Simpson is nearer the Yukon by about 500 miles than Vancouver.

TURKISH TROOPS ARE ADVANCING

Effort will be Made to Free Imprisoned Commission---Situation Growing Acute

Constantinople, May 6.—The situation in Ottoman official circles against Bulgaria is constantly growing more acute, and the Government of that principality has been formally notified in vigorous language that the Porte holds it responsible for the outrages arising from the freedom of action which the Macedonian agitators living in Bulgaria have been allowed.

It is reported that the Porte has decided to mobilize the whole of the Second, and Third Army Corps, stationed at Adrianople and Salonica, respectively.

The police of Constantinople have arrested about 60 Bulgarians, and have made numerous domiciliary visits, including one to the residence of the secretary of the Bulgarian Diplomatic Agency, whose papers were seized. They were, however, subsequently restored, as nothing compromising was discovered therein.

Alarming reports are in circulation regarding outrages, which are said to be projected here for today. The military and police guards in this city, and its suburbs, have been considerably strengthened.

In the district of Prisrend, Albania twenty-two Albanian chiefs, leaders of the opposition to the reforms, have been arrested.

The Sultan's Reform Commission still is at Ipek, Albania, on which place Turkish troops are advancing, with the object of dispersing the hostile Albanains in that vicinity.

MUNICIPAL ELECTRICITY

Councils to be Given Wide Powers in the New Bill

The Municipal Council of Toronto are anxious to get the co-operation of the towns and cities to secure the following amendment to the bill now before the Ontario Legislature:

The principal amendments suggested are as follows:—To authorize all cities, towns and incorporated villages to go thoroughly into the business of providing steam, water, compressed air or electric power, and to install the necessary plants, either inside or outside the municipality desiring to go into the business, to contract with any other municipality to supply or purchase such power, and to rent expropriated lands or other other property for the purpose of carrying out the scheme. Authority is to be sought to secure for municipalities the right to carry wires, erect poles and make conduits on any road or street necessary. It is proposed that none of the powers sought shall be exercised until a proper estimate of the cost has been prepared, and made public and a by-law authorizing the works has been favorably voted upon by the electors, entitled to vote on money by-laws. It is desired to have power to pay part of the cost out of money not otherwise set apart for specific objects and without submitting a by-law; to provide that the charges for power, light or heat shall be such as will cover cost of operating and provide a sinking fund to wipe out the original cost. Provision is made for punishing anyone who may steal power, light or heat, for collecting accounts and operating a telephone service exclusively in connection with the works.

The Day of Miracles Not Past

This proves that where Catarrhozone treatment is employed, impaired hearing and deafness can be cured. Catarrhozone always brings quick relief, and is warranted to give lasting satisfaction. All sufferers from Impaired Hearing, Deafness, Head Noises and Ringing in the Ears are advised to inhale Catarrhozone and derive the great benefit it is capable of affording. UNIVERSAL PEACE IS DRAWING NEAR

Reduction of Armaments and of Expenditure on the World's Navies

AN ADVANCE STEP NOW BEING TAKEN

It is Rapidly Becoming Economically Impossible to Increase Europeann Military Preparedness

London, May 8.—William Randall Cremer, M.P., Secretary of the British group of the Inter-Parliamentary Union, stated to a newspaper correspondent to-day that the Rt. Hon. Arthur Balfour, the British Prime Minister, and the other members of the Cabinet have signified their sympathetic interest in the movement now actively in progress for an Anglo-French treaty of arbitration and disarmament.

This is one of a number of indications that some of the foremost statesmen of Europe are considering this possibility in the light of Britain's isolation.

Baron d'Estournelles de Constant will be invited to address the British Parliament on the subject of arbitration and disarmament. Prominent British advocates will also address the French Chambers. Such an achievement is much nearer the domain of practical politics now that the sentimental alliance between Great Britain, France and Italy is an accomplished fact. Before this combination had been effected some of the European powers, especially Russia, might have hesitated to consider the reduction of armaments, hoping ultimately to score great victories in Asia. Such an undertaking, however, would cause great popular distress, and would drive the Finance Minister to despair.

If the rumors that King Edward will visit St. Petersburg and Vienna in the near future are true, it is likely that His Majesty hopes to stimulate the formation of a state opinion and sentiment in Europe that will make possible a general halt in army and navy augmentation, and may check the mad rivalry of the nations to outstrip each other in military strength. That these ideas will sooner or later come to something is rendered probable by the fact that further increases in European armies and navies are almost an economic possibility

Even now the burden of the fighting machine on land and sea is opan economic possibility.

The Real Storm Centre

London, May 6.—The English Foreign Office knows that the real danger point is not in Manchuria, but Albania. We might add Crete. Affairs in that island have been assuming a critical aspect, the agitation for union with Greece having latterly become prominent. What else but such incorporation the powers could have expected when they sent a Greek Prince to govern Crete, it is difficult to see. When Prince George made his recent tour of the island, he was everywhere most enthusiastically received, and the Greek flag was prominently displayed. The latest elections revealed a strong popular aversion to the continuance of Crete as a separate principality, the Minister who openly favors that plan having been able to elect only six out of the total of seventy-four Deputies. There is even a rumor that an understanding has been reached with Turkey, and that she will no longer oppose the annexation of Crete by Greece. This does not seem credible, but the stars in their courses are fighting for that union ultimately.

CHINESE VISITORS

Men of Note Interested in the Upbuilding of Celestial Empire

Ottawa, May 7—A deputation of Chinese gentlemen, accompanied by five of the leading Chinamen resident in Ottawa, attracted attention while making a tour of the house of commons on Monday. Their first inquiry was for that friend of fair play to Chinamen, Mr. J. H. MacLeod, who took charge of the party and led them through the various departments of the house and senate. Those direct from China were Mr. Pow Chee, secretary to the Chinese Empire Reform Association, with headquarters at Yokohama; Mr. Leong Kai Chew, at one time a tutor in the royal family at Pekin and now principal as well as founder of a Chinese college and two schools at Tokio Japan, also vice-president of the C.E.R.A., and Mr. Wong Chee, merchant Yokohama. These were accompanied by Mr. C. Yip Yen, merchant and Chinese custom house interpreter at Vancouver, B.C. They are all Christians.

The travelers were introduced to several members and other gentlemen of the house, all of whom admired the correctness with which they spoke English. The library was their admiration of all the sights in the Parliament buildings. All were dressed in correct English style and three out of the four have discarded the cue. The orientals were guests at the Russell. The object of their present westward tour is to visit the leading cities of Canada and the United States in which Chinamen are residents to endeavor to interest their brethren in North America in the cause espoused by the Chinese Empire Reform Association. They have commenced their tour in Canada and will proceed from Montreal to New York.

Hanton, wife of a prominent Frankville farmer, who was brought to the Brockville General Hospital a few weeks ago for treatment. She was progressing favorably, and after dinner was given the privege of taking a walk. She must have proceeded directly to the river and committed the rash act in a fit of temporary insanity.

A SPLENDID PROPOSITION

The [illegible] Gold Mining and Milling Company

We call the special attention of Canadian investors to the advertisement elsewhere in this issue of the above company, of which Mr. R. J. Kidd is the fiscal agent.

The proposition is one that is deserving of the special attention of investors. It is an opportunity to place money where it will not only be safe, but where big profits are sure to accrue. The company is ably officered by men of high integrity, and who have a practical knowledge of mining.

Mr. Kidd will be pleased to furnish fuller information to those who are looking for a good investment.

The Whitaker Wright Case

London, May 7—The Prime Minister, Mr. Balfour, in the House of Commons Monday discountenanced the suggestion that the attitude of the law officers of the Crown towards the prosecution of Whittaker Wright the company promoter under arrest in New York, on extradition proceedings, could be usefully discussed on the vote for their salaries. He expressed the opinion that the manner in which the Attorney-General has exercised his responsibilities should not be debated in the House while Wright's prosecution is pending.

A POLITICAL ACT OF COWARDICE

How Imperialists of British Politics Regard the Repeal of the Duty on Cereals

GREAT DISASTER, SAYS THE DUKE OF RUTLAND

There is Some Thought from Balfour's Speech That Duty May be Reimposed

London, May 8— Canada's disappointment at the repeal of the duty on cereals was constantly referred to at yesterday's meeting of the Council of the Central Associated Chambers of Agriculture. The Duke of Rutland, an old pillar of the Conservative party, wrote declaring that the abandonment of the duty must be regarded as a great disaster by those in England and Canada, who anticipated a happier fiscal relation with the colonies.

Lord Henage and other speakers declared the repeal of the duties an act of political cowardice.

The Pall Mall Gazette warns the Ministers that they have imperiled their own prestige and have shaken the loyalty of an important section of their followers. Nevertheless, the Government had better stick to the repeal for the present year at least.

The Rt. Hon. Mr. Balfour's recent speech seems to suggest that the Government might possibly be led to contemplate the reinstatement of the duty next year, under the stimulus of definite Colonial proposals.

HON. MR. SIFTON ON THE FUTURE OF THE COLONIES

British Government Should Not Force Contribution

THE DUTY ON CEREALS

Colonists of Future will Add Greatly to Empire in Strength, Wealth and Influence

London, May 8.—Hon. Clifford Sifton, the Canadian Minister of the Interior, and his colleagues, although engaged daily in conjunction with the Foreign Office in the preparation of the Alaska boundary case have found, however, several opportunities of impressing on British public men the extreme unwisdom of an attempt to push Canada, at the present moment, into any paper constitution for the Empire, or any schemes for money contributions to the navy from Canada or other parts of the Empire.

The time is not yet ripe for an Imperial administrative responsibility which would be the inevitable sequel to a money contribution.

Hon. Mr. Sifton has pointed out Canada's trouble with Germany in illustration. He says: "Germany has not treated Canada well, and we are doing what we think right under the circumstances, but we do not know that the British Government care to have us say that what we are doing is in the exercise of the judgment of the King, it being done in the exercise of the judgment of the Canadian Parliament. We are taking the responsibility, and that is an illustration of a thousand things that may arise from the closer legislative union in connection with the affairs of the self-governing colonies. Whatever be the nature of the constitution binding Canada to the Empire, as she becomes stronger, developing in wealth, strength and population, she will become a stronger bulwark of British ideas of supremacy."

In a word, Hon. Mr. Sifton urged the British Ministers to go slow in imperialism and to understand that the Canadian Government has taken no step whatever. He also represents Canada's disappointment at the repeal of the cereals duty.

AYLESWORTH LETTER POINT CLEARED UP

Reached the Premier Through the Post---Prosecution May Submit Evidence in Rebuttal Tuesday

Judges Seek More Light—One Witness' Refusal to Contribute to the "Corruption Fund."—Chief Counsel on Each Side to Carry on Argument.

The case for the defence in the Gamey enquiry was closed Wednesday afternoon and, on the suggestion of the commissioners an adjournment until Tuesday morning next was taken, in order to allow counsel to prepare argument and decide upon what rebuttal evidence, if any, shall be submitted to the court.

Judges Call D. A. Jones.

It is not expected that the rebuttal evidence to be put in by the prosecution will be very heavy in volume. It will, however, take up a considerable portion of Tuesday's session, and perhaps run over into next day. By the wishes of the commissioners, D. A. Jones will also be called to go upon the stand to tell who was "the acting manager," and explain his own connection with Mr Gamey.

With the conclusion of the evidence, argument will be at once entered upon. It has been arranged that only the chief counsel on each side are to carry on the argument. It is not likely that either will finish his heavy task inside the limit of a day's session, and it therefore appears that the case will not be laid finally in the hands of the commissioners before Friday of next week.

In the afternoon Miss Carrie Jeffreys, who acted temporarily as the Premier's private secretary last September was called to explain the means by which the Premier received the letter signed by Mr. Gamey in Mr. Aylesworth's office on September 10th. Her mind was not extraordinarily illuminative on the subject, as she could only state that it had come in as a part of the ordinary mail, and had been placed in a special drawer by the Premier's orders.

Refused to Contribute.

The concluding evidence of the day took an unexpected and rather interesting turn. It was the result of evidence given to the prosecution with regard to the alleged statement made by an Eastern Ontario Lumberman to the effect that some money which he had in his hand was the last of his "pile" after putting up the $3,000 which Gamey received. As the lumberman in question had been concerned in a dispute with the Government which might have led to the payment of money by him in settlement of the Government's claim, some color was lent to his remark. On the stand he said that he had merely jokingly said that Gamey had got some money like that which he had received, but he also made the further surprising statement that his [illegible] contribute to a 'corruption fund.' His refusal, he said, was based on the ground that the Government already was pressing an unjust claim against him, leaving the inference that it was the same Government, which was rejecting funds from him. The matter was not gone into further, but it lays a foundation for much speculation.

Mr. Ritchie then called Mr. A. A. Campbell, Registrar of Deeds for the County of Renfrew and formerly member of the Legislative Assembly for South Renfrew. He said that he knew Mr. Alex. Barnet and Mr. James E. H. Barnet, both lumbermen, of Renfrew. He knew that some claim had been made by the Government for trespass in cutting timber on the limit owned by Mr. Barnet, at Pangamassing, near Straight Lake Station, on the C.P.R., and the witness had assisted Mr. Barnet in trying to find the boundary line. There had never been any settlement made in regard to the claim.

No Money Transactions.

No sum from Mr. Barnet had ever passed through the witness' hands, nor did he know of either of the Barnets transmitting any money to the Government in settlement of the claim.

Witness came to Toronto in Aug. or September, meeting Mr. Barnet at Peterborough and had an interview at the Parliament Buildings with Hon. E. J. Davis to discuss the location of the boundary line in dispute.

Why did Mr. Barnet go to Peterborough? A—To see his son-in-law, Mr. McAllister.

Did he see Mr. Stratton? A—I don't know.

Was the question of money mentioned between you, Mr. Barnet, and Hon. Mr. Davis with regard to the alleged trespass? A—Not a word was said about money in either of the two interviews we had with Mr. Davis.

Did you see any other Minister when you were in Toronto? A—I saw the Attorney-General for a few minutes on personal business.

Did you see Mr. Stratton? A—I did not.

And you swear, without mental reservation or equivocation, that you heard no discussion as to the payment of money in respect to this claim? A—I do.

This ended Mr. Campbell's evidence. He was followed on the stand by Mr. James Barnet, of Renfrew. Mr. Barnet said that he was engaged in lumbering and other enterprises, but not to any large extent in connection with his father. He was interested in the Renfrew Rolling Mills and a cattle ranch but his father was not.

He Refused to Subscribe.

[illegible] ment to anybody, when you produced a roll of fifty dollar bills, that they were the last bills in connection with a settlement with the Government, and that you guessed Gamey was the one who got the others? A—I made a statement that those were the kind of bills Gamey is supposed to have received.

Why did you make that statement? A—Because I was approached and asked for money for what is supposed to be, what I have heard spoken of as a corruption fund, and I did not wish to subscribe any money to that. I thought I could use my money to suit myself better.

You say that you made the statement that these were the same kind of bills, bills similar to that which Gamey had got? A—That I guessed these were the kind of bills Gamey had got.

Did you say you guessed that was the last of your little pile after giving three thousand dollars to the Government? A—I don't remember saying anything like that.

Will you swear you did not? A—I am telling you.

These were the last you had left after paying over to the Government? A—I won't swear, I do not remember saying it.

Will you contradict it; I am instructed you did it in the presence of two people? A—I won't swear, because I don't remember exactly what I said.

Strike Sphere Enlarging

St. John, N.B., May 6.—The rumour that some of the steamboat lines now running to Montreal, would send their boats to St. John, owing to the labour troubles in the former place, has caused quite a little talk here.

There are two ship labourers unions in St. John. One is associated with the International American Federation, while the other is independent.

In talking to the leaders to-day, it seems quite apparent that the men who belonged to the Federation would refuse to work on the boats withdrawn from Montreal for the purpose of breaking the strikers there. The members of the other union, however, would, doubtless handle everything that comes along. Their schedule is 30 cents per hour for regular lines and 35 cents for tramp steamers.

The federated union would look upon steamers withdrawn from Montreal as tramps, and if they did work the members would demand 35 cents per hour. It is altogether likely, too, that the teamsters who belong to the Federation would refuse to handle any goods.

Mr. Chaplin, who is leading the agitation against the repeal, makes no reference in his manifesto in The Times yesterday to the colonial aspect of the case.

ENGLISH OFFICE 30 Fleet St., London, E. C.

PETERBOROUGH, MAY 4, 1903.

TITLES IN THE STATES

Every American devotes himself with a single eye to being as good as every other American and a little better—to be distinguished—unequal. Real military and naval rank is quite lost in the sea of titles acquired in the militia, bestowed by secret and fraternal orders, by colleges and universities, or derived from some political station. So many men have so many handles, says a writer in the Atlantic Magazine, that if we meet an untitled friend we feel as Talleyrand did when he was the English Ambassador at the Congress of Vienna, the only diplomat not wearing an order in the crowd of bestarred and beribboned continentals, and remarked, "Ma foi, c'est tres distingue!" We are bar enough in the Northern States; our New England towns dub many an apothecary "Doctor," many an attorney "Judge," and—absurdity of absurdities—many a schoolmaster "Professor;" but in others, such honorary titles are a mere civility, meaning not more than "Mr." on an envelope. Every decent citizen is there addressed as "Cap'n"; every keen, alert, well-to-do civilian as "Judge."

IS SPECULATION GAMBLING?

This question is generally answered in the affirmative without hesitation. When a man buys what he does not want, or sells what he has not got, and then watches a tape [illegible] the transaction at a profit by selling or buying the same thing, his attitude is that of a gambler, and so far as he is concerned, he is gambling. Not only is he gambling, but he is gambling against very heavy odds. He is subject to the unscrupulous and dishonest manipulation of stocks by powerful cliques. Such cliques now circulate false stories designed to cause a bidding up by the public of securities the manipulators have to sell; they now issue injurious statements to induce a general selling of securities they want to buy. Further, to hoist up prices for their own ends great allied speculative interests will make quite a display of buying while they are secretly unloading ten times as much on the confiding public; or, to depress prices for their own ends, they will sell "short," covering at the lower values at which they have scared holders into parting with the securities. But even great financial combinations cannot always make a success of such tactics. It is true they are seldom beaten by the public, but they have to yield to more power league. The late "pool" in Southern Pacific, strong as it was with James R. Keene and associated capitalists at its head, found its brilliant scheme for making a few dozen millions thwarted by the magnates of the Union Pacific, who controlled Southern Pacific stock. But the fact that speculation, by which we mean buying and selling on margin, and buying and selling "futures" can readily be used for gambling purposes, by no means proves that that speculation is in itself gambling. A man may gamble heavily on marine insurance. That does not prove that marine insurance is itself a gambling business. It is not a gambling business, because it performs a very useful economic function, that of distributing the loss over a ship that is wrecked, over the profits of the ships which are not wrecked. Any business which in itself performs a useful economic function in adjusting values, or in assisting production or distribution, is not gambling, no matter to what extent it may be used for the purpose of gambling, and therefore it is by no means so easy to answer this question raised in respect to stock exchange transactions, as at first sight it seems. The question is somewhat similar to the popular moral indignation in which corn speculators were held in times when periodical scarcities of bread were commoner than now. The popular view was that the man who purchased corn when it was cheap in anticipation of a period of scarcity, and hoarded it to sell when corn was dear, was an inhuman monster, lost to all considerations of morality. Was he not making money out of the people's bread? Quite so. But pass over the question of motive, and look at the effects of his action. The motive of making money must be quite legitimate in itself, and if the effects of the method pursued to make money are beneficial, then the whole transaction is not blameworthy. The first effect of the corn speculator's action was immediately to send the price of corn upward, and thereby limit the consumption, a most excellent precaution with a time of scarcity ahead. His action then had this effect to cause economy in the use of corn and spread the pinching effects of scarcity over a longer time, making them, therefore, less biting at one time. Surely it is better to eat half a loaf a day for twenty days and live, than to eat a whole loaf every day for ten days and then die. The second effect of the corn speculator's action was that his hoards were released gradually, and precisely at the time they were most essential to the people. It is obvious that if he over-hoarded by a day he suffered loss himself, which would presuppose a different motive from that which he was accused, and that motive one of such purposeless malignity that no human being, unless he was a fiend or a madman, could ever be actuated by it. In these days things are very much better organized. The mechanism or economy of the control of supplies is infinitely better. What we call "hard times" now, involved actual starvation, and unheard of misery in past ages. The percentage of human beings for whom hard times spell starvation now, is very small, while the percentage for whom they spell discomfort and endurable privation only, is very large. The improvement is entirely due to the sensitiveness of prices to future happenings, which sensitiveness is expressed through trading in margins and in futures. Some anticipated scarcity of prejudicial occurrence in November is already discounted in May, and its adverse effects distributed by mechanical, but most delicate adjustment over the intervening months. The converse economic effect is equally, perhaps more, important. Some entirely unexpected and unforeseen catastrophe takes place. Its immediate effects are much mitigated by the possibility of discounting future improvement. It cannot be reasonably held that the process which accomplishes this adjustment, and so confers a tremendous boon upon humanity, is in itself immoral. That it is made use of in an immoral way is unfortunately true. But only persons of feeble intelligence refuse to discriminate between the corruptions with which imperfect human nature clogs the operation of institutions which are beneficial in themselves, and necessarily propagate corruption. The gaming table is one of the latter because it performs no useful function. The stock exchange and the produce market belong to the former class.

Chronic Biliousness

IN ITS TRIAL FOLLOW HORRIBLE DREAMS, DESPONDENCY MELANCHOLY AND GENERAL WEAKNESS.

The proper elements needed to promote good digestion, regularity of the bowels, correct action of the kidneys and liver, must be supplied when a bilious condition of the system is once established.

Ferrozone can't help but do this. It gives the stomach perfect rest, and allows you to partake of and enjoy the variety of food that is necessary for maintaining health. One Ferrozone tablet taken after each meal will separate the nutritious portions of the food from the waste, which is carried off, thus preventing and curing constipation and its attendant evil, piles.

Being a potent blood purifier, Ferrozone cleanses the crimson flood of all bile and impurities, and as a result the complexion is restored to a rosy, healthy hue, and the dark circles under the eyes and the deathly pallor of the cheeks, go away never to return.

Taken for disorders of the stomach, commencing with biliousness and ending with derangements of the liver and kidneys, Ferrozone achieves marvelous results. It is at the same time a tonic and stimulant, and a regulator of all bodily functions, and chronic sufferers should not fail to give it a fair trial. It will do them good without doubt, and if the malady is curable it will yield to Ferrozone.

With the use of Ferrozone appetite will be better, the blood made rich and pure, sleep will be dreamless and sound. Your muddy complexion will be cleared and beautified, your eyes will acquire a new brightness, and as your spirits rise and good health returns, you will bless the day you learned the secret of Ferrozone's power.

If you think you need Ferrozone go to the nearest drug store and procure a supply. Refuse a substitute and insist on having the genuine Ferrozone, which costs 50 cts. per box, or 6 boxes for $2.50. By mail from N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

Buried Gold

By FRED WHISHAW.

Author of "A Boyar of the Terrible," etc.

more, Dick Robinson, if you wasn't lyin' sick in that there bed, I'd give you the darndest hidin' ever you had for saying what you've just said, so help me I would. No one hasn't interfered with Ruby Amright, if it's her you mean, nor isn't going to. You'll find things where they was. You'd better stop being a blitherin' fool and look at things straight. Come down to Seadown and see for yourself."

"Well, if that's it and you're speaking truth, I'm sorry I spoke as I did. It was a lying young fool of a boy what deceived me. Give me a hand, pal. I may've been wrong from the beginning."

"Well, you were, and I'd rather wring your neck, as I feel now, than shake hands; but I ain't going to bear a grudge and you returned from the grave. You'd better come to Seadown at once for more than one reason."

"What's the other?" cried Dick, starting up in bed. "Do you know of anything, mate? There's no one looking for me in these parts, is there?"

"Well, since you've mentioned it, there is—two chaps—and that's the truth. Hold up, man! Why, whatever is the matter?"

CHAPTER IX.

Ruby Amright.

The anguish of great terror had taken hold of Dick Robinson, and for a few moments he could do no more than lie back upon his bed writhing like one in a fit, clenching his hands and unclenching them, trying to speak but failing to form words, his eyes rolling, his frame heaving as he gasped for breath. The sight was horrible, and filled Keith Adams with pity and some wonder.

Presently Robinson began to recover slightly. He raised himself upon his elbow to breathe more comfortably, and a great sweat broke out upon his face.

"Come, buck up a bit, man," said Keith cheerfully. "There's nothing to be afraid of in two chaps looking for you. Looking for you isn't finding you. What have you done that these chaps want you so bad?"

"Who says they want me? Have you seen any chaps that want me, or spoken to any?" Dick gasped.

"I haven't; it was the boy Beadon, same as you spoke to. After leaving you he came upon them, accidental like, and found, by chance, they was looking for you. Said you'd robbed them and absconded with the cash. You'd better tell me straight what's up and we'll see what can be done. Don't you fret, we ain't going to let these or any other chaps hustle a Seadown man without knowing the reason why."

"It's all a lie," said Robinson. "Money! I haven't had a penny from them, and they know it. That was all a blasted lie, faked up for an excuse. Those two chaps is going to murder me, Keith Adams, that's what's the matter. So 'elp me, it's the truth. If they catches me they'll murder me at sight; and all for no harm done but comin' home when I liked instead of waitin' to get their leave. It sounds a fool's tale, I know, but it's true. They was two of our crew in the 'Hecuba.'"

"Why shouldn't you go home when you liked?" asked Keith. "It ain't a good tale, mate. You'll have to find one that sounds more like truth before I can believe it, and unless I know where I am, how'm I going to help you?"

"Good tale or bad tale, it's true," said Dick. "See here now, you thought we was drowned, so you said. Well, we wasn't drowned, but we was wrecked on an island in the South Pacific or North Pacific. Anyway, we was out of our course, blown south of it by the wickedest gale that ever killed a sailor. We landed on that island safe and sound and there wouldn't have been no trouble but for six boxes of gold what was being taken to London to a bank there. We saved that gold, and that was all the trouble, for old Jake Foster and the rest made laws that no one shouldn't leave the island, for fear he'd give away the secret of the gold we'd got there and they'd come and take it from us. His game is to stay a bit till it's all forgotten enough for him and the rest to slink home, when they get a chance, each taking his share of the swag. Well, a ship came by and I escaped and got away, and while I lay sick at San Francisco another ship was sent to make enquiries, and in her came back two chaps bound for England from our island. What have they come for? Why, to murder me and nothin' else. They're sent to do it. It's like havin' two devils from hell on one's track; small wonder I was frightened! Well, thank the Lord I've found someone to speak out to; it's done me good and I'm obliged to you, so 'elp me, heaven, I am."

"Now you're talkin' so's a man can understand," said Keith. "Lord, that's a tale, that is, and something like one, too! And what for did you want to risk your life by coming back?"

"Well, if you'll believe me and won't be wild with me for saying of it, I was mad jealous. I was afraid you'd get thinkin' I was dead, both you and Ruby, and you'd be tryin' to get on with the maid, 'stead of me. I didn't think you'd have behaved so square as you have. That there young Beadon, he's a liar. It was he made me mad with you. He said you was married, you and she, or next thing to it. How was I to know he was lyin'?"

"He wasn't altogether," said Keith, "for I tell you square, mate, after I'd given you two years to come back in I was goin' to do my best to shoot my bolt with her, and that's the plain truth. She don't take on with me much, and I don't think I should have done much good. But don't you get thinkin' I was squarer than I was. Now you're here, I'm off with her, of course. That's enough of that! As to these two chaps. Don't you get thinkin' they can do as they like. They aren't on their island here. People can't go about murderin' as they please in these 'ere civilised parts. They find themselves danglin' at the end of a rope if they do. You come down quietly to Seadown, and let them come after you if they please. Aren't we good enough to take care of ourselves down home?"

"I'd give them in charge, but I don't want the story of that there gold to get about. I've an idea of my own about that stuff, about gettin' hold of it, me and you and a few others, in a right and proper way. You shall hear all about it when the proper time comes—yes, and have a good share in it, too. Only let's get rid of these darned bloodhounds first. I can't rest for 'em. They're a nightmare to me, night and day."

"If you're well enough, all you've got to do is to come straight back to Seadown with me. Come and stay along with me where I hang out, down at Mrs. Benton's, and there'll be two of us to deal with if they come along."

THE
TWO-TEN OIL CO.
of Boulder, Colorado.
Capital Stock, 1,500,000 shares. In Treasury, 500,000 shares
TRANSFER OFFICE; BRISTOL, CONN.

This Company has a perpetual lease on 20 acres of proven oil land in SECTION NINE (9) of the Boulder district, and this section and the immediate vicinity have the best and largest number of producing wells in the entire district.

Our Well No. 1 came in in January and is now pumping and shipping Oil regularly to the Refinery.

The Directors have decided to put down well No. 2 at once, and they now offer a block of the Treasury stock for the next 30 days at

10 Cents per Share, after that price will be advanced.

It is a well known fact that a 15 barrel well will pay over 100 per cent. profit upon its cost.

This is no longer a speculation for we have proved that oil is on our ground, and we now have oil in paying quantities, with two wells pumping we can soon pay dividends, and every well we put down increases our earning capacity.

This is a business proposition, managed by business men.

All this has been invested quietly within the last two years, without any appeal to the public. CAPITAL STOCK, - - $1,000,000.00

(Full Paid and Non-Assessable.

The property of this company consists of three full claims known as the "Fleur de lis," "Mayflower," and "Minnetonka" Group, embracing an area of sixty acres of highly mineralized ground, seated in the famous Sumpter district, Baker county, Oregon, about 3½ miles from McEwen on the Sumpter Valley Railroad.

The best evidence we have to offer as to our "being in good company" is to mention a few of those who are our immediate neighbors, viz: the North Pole, Bonanza, Red Boy, Eureka Columbia, Golconda, Cracker, Oregon, Golden Wizard, all of which are in the same district, producing from [illegible] to [illegible] per month each.

From the preliminary amount of development work already done on our property and from the assays of ore which is entirely free milling, running $40.00 to [illegible] per ton, we are confident that with the installation of modern machinery we have a proposition worthy of the most searching enquiry by those seeking a high grade investment.

Our board of directors consists of men who have a practical knowledge of mining, well known and of high standing, who have invested every available dollar of their own to acquire this valuable property and put it on a dividend paying basis.

To accomplish this it has been decided to place a limited amount of the treasury stock on sale at 15c per share for development purposes only until such time as the condition of the mine will enable it to take care of itself, when the sale of stock will be withdrawn.

Our prospectus will give you all particulars. Let us send it to you. We shall also be pleased to answer all enquiries whether by mail or in person at our office.

STOCK MARKETS

MARKET ELEMENTS ALL POINT TO RISING VALUES

New York, Mar 7.—Belief in material damage to the crops has been about materially dissipated and consequently gossip as to the price future of railway shares is of a thoroughly optimistic nature. It is conceded that the yield of winter wheat will surpass every former record, and the various grain carrying roads are already distributing to their shareholders dividends far smaller than their earnings and in cases like the Rock Island Co., earning large profits and paying no dividends on its common stock will, this year, be in a position whereby the vast sums are pouring out for betterments and can still be charged to operating expenses, and leave surplus sufficiently large to increase distribution to stockholders. Prices are gradually hardening. This movement is almost imperceptible to the ordinary public element, and they will not awaken to the full realization of the situation until the advancing movement has gained full headway. For a long time the market has lacked bull leadership, but at present the tendency to manoeuver for a rise is generally evident. Bear effort has lost its vim. It is fully realized that liquidation has run its course, and the Keen and Calculation floor element will view the situation in a dispassionate way. The feeling toward Missouri Pacific, Union Pacific, Atchison, Rock Island, B. O., Erie, Reading, St. Paul and similar securities is one of the hopeful kind. The earnings of the great railway system for the last week in April reflect the general condition of affairs in the railway world and among the noteworthy gains in gross earnings may be cited M. K. & T., $55,606, S. R., $116,650, Norfolk, $113,569, Missouri Pacific, $320,000. The tape and general conditions everywhere reflect a sound and healthy state of affairs, and leave no doubt as to the immediate course of securities values. With a market displaying only rising tendency there is but one course to pursue. It requires but a minimum risk and only moderate margins to take on stocks now, and the opportunity for more than ordinary profits seems unusually positive.

Summary—The market was apathetic most of the day, opening slightly lower, and selling off fractionally through London influences. [illegible] ous, advancing to 66 1-4, and gave encouragement for a further rise. Erie was well taken, and Gould interests bought Missouri Pacific freely, running the price up to 112 1-4. There was some profit taking through out the list, but it was not of an important character, and did not diminish the bulls.

The ranks of strikers now total nearly 2,800 men, representing eight crafts and promise to be further swelled tomorrow by a strike of the railway teamsters and later possibly by the bakers.

A MAGNIFICENT INVESTMENT
THE GOLD TUNNEL COMPANY,
PRESCOTT, ARIZONA

The Company owns in SIX PARALLEL VEINS of GIGANTIC SIZE, one of the largest GOLD PROPOSITIONS in the country. Each of these six veins would make a mine by itself.

The Company, by purchase and consolidation, has succeeded in acquiring the entire length of these great GOLD BEARING ledges; covering an area six thousand feet in length and about two thousand feet wide. The Company owns this valuable property free of any incumbrance.

The ground included in this group of mines gives ample evidence of tremendous natural disturbances, and shows plainly on the surface the acid and mineral stains characteristic of a heavy mineralized gold lead of gigantic proportions.

Six Miles of Gold Bearing Veins

Through the length of four of the mining claims; forming a continuous line 6,000 feet long run THREE LEDGES so close together as to be economically worked from one opening; they aggregate from 85 to 200 feet in width.

The adjoining line of three mining claims shows a ledge 4,500 feet in length, varying in width from 7 to 200 feet, with the same character of ore.

Beginning at the south end of the "Eighty-Four" mining claim, is a fifth large ledge carrying good values in GOLD, and running in a northerly direction for a distance of fully forty-five hundred feet.

Two mining claims on the east side show GOLD BEARING CROPPINGS 40 to 50 feet wide through their entire length, a distance of three thousand feet.

All of the ledges are well mineralized, carrying at grass root values in gold running from about $2.00 to $6.00 per ton.

Graveyard Coughs and Colds

Cured Quickly by Catarrhozone

A cough or cold this season of the year paves the way for pneumonia or consumption. The best remedy is "Catarrhozone." It eases a cough in five minutes, and colds cannot exist but a few hours where it is used. Mrs. H. L. Chenowith, residing at Glendive, Montana, was worried by a "graveyard" cough. In the following letter she tells how Catarrhozone cured her in one week;

"I had a bad cough for several months last fall that settled on my lungs. I was worried very much to think that nothing I used could shake it off, but reading in the Halifax "Presbyterian Witness" of the wonderful cures Catarrhozone was effecting, I decided to try it. The irritability and soreness was taken out of my throat in a few days, and in less than one week it entirely cured my cough.

"It is with great gratitude and pleasure that I recommend Catarrhozone. I am sure it will benefit and cure all who use it."

(Signed) Mrs. H. L. Chenowith.

The reason Catarrhozone always cures is that it goes right to the sore spot, which it heals and makes well quickly. It is antiseptic and destroys disease germs in every part of the system. For Coughs, Colds and Bronchitis, nothing compares with Catarrhozone. It is very simple to use, contains no injurious drugs, and is warranted perfectly safe to use. Catarrhozone Inhaler is suitable to use in a street car, theatre, church any place at any time. Complete outfit costs but $1.00 and is guaranteed to cure or your money back. Trial size, 25c., sold by druggists, or by mail, from N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

YESTERDAY'S POLICE COURT

A Man Sent to Jail for 15 Days for Abusive Conduct

At the Police Court yesterday a man was charged with being drunk and causing a disturbance near the corner of George and Dublin streets on Wednesday last. A number of witnesses were called who stated that the defendant has used very violent and abusive language to his family, who, owing to his abusive conduct, were moving to another house. In defence, the defendant claimed that the family had no right to take away the furniture from the house which belonged to him and he also accused his wife of taking his money at different times.

The magistrate after hearing all the evidence decided against the defendant who was sent to jail for 15 days.

PROVED FATAL

Warren Noyes Dies of His Injuries at Nicholl's Hospital

The people of Peterborough will learn with much regret that young Warren Noyes died of his injuries yesterday morning at the hospital, where everything which medical aid could possibly do for the little sufferer, was of no avail. The plucky lad put up a tremendous fight for life against fearful odds, till the white winged angel of death came down between him and his sufferings and he left great sorrow in his late home, and in fact throughout the entire community.

Mr. Noyes and family came to town last fall, and he is foreman in the cordage works, and although a comparative stranger, has made many friends. We join with many others in extending sympathy to the bereaved family.

The funeral will take place from the late home, 145 Rubidge street this afternoon at three o'clock to St. Peter's Cathedral and thence to the Roman Catholic Cemetery.

All Saints' Guild

A very pleasing entertainment, being the closing event of the season in connection with the Girl's Guild of All Saints' Church, took place in the school room of the church on Wednesday evening, and was a very successful affair. The following assisted with the programme:—Edna Boyce, Freddie Hooper, Helen Rush, Hazel Moore, Olivia Cuffe, Mabel Hooper, Gertrude McClellan, Geraldine Hooper, Helen Motheral, Percy Hooper, Gladys Ross and Ida Mulholland, Ethel Shepherd, Stella Cuffe, Tilly Brownlee. Mr. George Dryland was chairman. After the programme Rev. W. L. Armitage gave a short address in which he congratulated the guild upon the success of [illegible] tainment and of their past work. The serving of refreshments brought a very enjoyable evening to a close. The accompanistes were Misses Rush and Richey.

Visiting Their Cottage

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Meldrum, and Mrs. John Nugent went up to Stony Lake yesterday morning, to fix up their cottages and lawns for the season. They will return this evening. We understand several other cottagers also took advantage of the special trip of the steamer Alert to look over their summer homes.

HEAVILY INVOLVED

A Failure Impending

Improper feeding brings on disease. The use of coffee for instance is almost certain to cause organic ills. The whole system of health becomes involved and the physical failure known as collapse is always impending. No financial trouble can cause half the suffering that follows disease and most disease comes from what we eat and drink.

It is not guess work but solid, scientific fact that coffee hurts about 9 of every 10 that drink it. It attacks the vital organs directly, and indirectly its ill results are frequently seen in the remotest corners of the body. All the while serious organic diseases may be growing that will be hard to cure and the coffee drinker is subject to such suffering as headaches, biliousness, flatulence, insomnia, nervousness and a hundred, and one other ills.

"Once upon a time, as they say in fairy tales, when I was controlled by the coffee fiend" writes a lady of St. John, Canada, "life was a weary burden to me on account of the wretched headaches, utter weariness of both mind and body and general biliousness, all due as I afterwards found out to the use of coffee. Acting upon an old friend's advice I quit coffee and drank Postum and presto, in a week I was transformed into a different being.

"In a month I was gifted with bounding energy in place of my former lassitude and a general uplifting of my formerly dormant ambitions was plainly evident. I benefited so greatly that I constituted myself a missionary among my friends to spread the truth about Postum and I can tell you of many of my friends who have used it with wonderful good results."

MR. STONE BANQUETTED

HE IS HONORED BY THE PETERBOROUGH LAW SOCIETY

Pleasant Evening Spent at the Crown Hotel —Mr. Stone's Departure Generally Regretted

Last night a very pleasant time was spent at the Crown Hotel, where a banquet was tendered to Mr. E. B. Stone by the Peterborough Law Association, of which the guest was a valuable member.

Mr. John Green, president, occupied the chair and performed the duties which fell to him in his usual felicitous manner.

The dining room was handsomely decorated and a splendid menu was presented with a prodigal hand by mine host, Jackson, who has no superior as a caterer.

The chairman proposed the health of the King in a splendid eulogistic speech, after which "God Save the King" was sung with much enthusiasm.

Mr. A. P. Poussette had the honor of proposing the health of Mr. Stone. He paid the guest of the evening very many compliments respecting his ability as a lawyer and politician and said that no one who was intimately acquainted with him, could help loving and respecting so good a fellow. He expressed his sincere regret at his departure from their midst.

The toast was responded to first by singing, "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow," and then by Mr. Stone, who, in a happy speech, said that he hoped to continue in his profession, as well as adding another to the one he had practiced all his life. He expressed his sorrow at parting from his colleagues, and all with whom he had associated in the practice of his profession. He thanked the members present for their kindness, sympathy, and for their expressions of goodwill.

Colonel E. B. Edwards proposed the health of the Bench, and in his speech referred to the guest in very flattering terms.

Mr. D. W. Dumble responded and said that instead of referring to the Bench he would like to say a few words with reference to the departure of his friend. He took occasion to say that the relationship between him, as Police Magistrate, and the guest of honor was one of the greatest harmony, and he joined with the others in wishing Mr. Stone prosperity in his new home.

Judge Edmison was called on and said that his acquaintance of nearly 20 years with Mr. Stone had increased the friendship existing between them. He hoped that only happiness, prosperity and good will might go with him to London, one of the brightest and best of Canadian cities; and was happy to congratulate his colleague in his new field of labor and wished him great success.

Mr. R. M. Dennistoun said that he always found Mr. Stone a just, honorable and manly lawyer. He wished him long life and success and proposed the health of our municipality, coupling the names of Mayor Roger, Alderman O'Connell and Mr. F. Bell.

Mayor Roger wished to express his good will towards the departing guest. He said that although we were losing a good citizen and better lawyer, he felt that we were sending forth a splendid advocate of our town.

Alderman O'Connell, in a very humorous speech referred briefly to municipal affairs, and like his predecessors poured forth his heartfelt regret at the departure of his sincere friend and dear companion.

Many more speeches were delivered by the associates of Mr. Stone, expressing regret at his departure and wishing him success in his new home.

Pogue Sent Up for Trial

Charles Pogue was tried at the Police Court, Hamilton, yesterday, for misappropriating to his own use $86 belonging to Mrs. Benjamin Cammel, and stealing two horses. The case arose over a horse deal, and the evidence was contradictory, the magistrate decided to let the county judge dispose of it, and he committed Pogue to trial.

A New Ear.

Surgeons at the Presbyterian Hospital, Philadelphia, are much gratified over the success of the operation performed on Alexander Hammond, by which the latter was provided with a new ear. The man has just returned to his home in Malvern, Penn., well satisfied with modern surgery.

Hammond had his left ear frozen about four years ago. A cancerous growth developed, and three weeks ago he was sent by his family physician, Dr. Curts, to the Presbyterian Hospital. The ear was amputated, leaving only a stump.

Dr. Henry Wharton of the hospital staff then made an incision back of the ear stump and lifted up a flap of skin in the shape of a peninsula, with the connection just at the root of the ear. The flap was then moulded in to the shape of an ear and sewed up to place. The place where the flap had been was covered by pulling the skin up over it. The operation is called in surgical parlance a "plastic operation."

The man was able to leave the hospital in a little over two weeks. The hospital surgeons say that the operation is a rare one, and in this case resulted very successfully.

A Quart Baby.

Now and again there is an item in the newspapers concerning the birth of a puny baby so small that a quart cup holds it comfortably. If the article told all the facts it would probably tell also of a mother who in weakness and misery had looked forward to the baby's advent with shrinking and fear.

To have fine, healthy children the mother must be healthy, and it is the common testimony of mothers that the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription not only promotes the mother's health but also gives her strength to give to her child.

"Favorite Prescription" accomplishes these results by tranquilizing the nerves, promoting a healthy appetite, and giving refreshing sleep. It increases physical vigor and gives great muscular elasticity, so that the baby's advent is practically painless. It is the best of tonics for nursing mothers.

"I gladly recommend Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription," writes Mrs. J. W. G. Stephens, of Mila, Northumberland County, Va. "Before my third little boy was born I took six bottles. He is the finest child and has been from birth, and I suffered very much less than I ever did before. I unhesitatingly advise expectant mothers to use the 'Favorite Prescription.'"

The dealer who offers a substitute for "Favorite Prescription" does so to gain the little more profit paid on the sale of less meritorious medicines.

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, containing 1008 pages, is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of customs and mailing only. Send 50 one-cent stamps for the cloth-bound volume, or only 31 stamps for the book in paper covers. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

G. T. P. R. MAY BUY TRANS-CANADA

'In Any Case the Charter Will Be Granted---Mr. Hays Made a Very Favorable Impression at Ottawa Yesterday

Ottawa, May 8—There may be a vote in the Commons Railway Committee on the Grand Trunk Pacific bill, but no one around the Commons seems to seriously anticipate that the charter will be refused. The trans-Canada scheme may muster ten or fifteen votes against the bill, and there is opposition to the incorporation among some members from the Eastern Provinces, who want a clause inserted compelling the Grand Trunk Pacific to deliver all its export business to Canadian ports. The promoters promised yesterday that Canadian ports would be given a preference for this trade, but say that any absolute bond would be unfair to themselves. Some of the Maritime members recognize this stand of the company as nothing more than reason. But it is safe to say that the Government will be advised to obtain some very definite understanding with the G.T.R. before any subsidy is granted that the company will not give St. John and Halifax the go-by.

There is talk about Mr. Hays quieting the trans-Canadian opposition by purchasing the charter. The Western members will vote for the Grand Trunk Pacific probably to a man, regarding it as the most serious proposition before the country, to relieve the congestion of Western traffic.

The Canadian Northern and Canadian Pacific are both here to see that the Grand Trunk Pacific does not cover practically the same territory as served by them in the West. But friends of Mr. Hays say that in his own interests the new road will be located as far as possible through a district of its own. There is not the least question but Mr. Hays made a very favorable impression yesterday on the committee, in spite of the repeated interrogations of opponents. It will take a couple more meetings of the Railway Committee, at least, to complete the consideration of the bill, but, as said above, his supporters have no fear but it will pass. Liberals say the Government wants to see the charter granted.

PROTEST AGAINST "MASS FOR DEAD"

Objections to Form of Services in St. Paul's London

MEMORIAL FOR SOLDIERS

Low Church Party However Have Made Strongh Objections to the Ritual

London, May 8.—A great outcry is raised against the form of a service to be held St. Paul's Cathedral this month in memory of soldiers who fell in the South African war.

The service has been arranged by the Army Guild, and is alleged to have the approval of Lord Roberts and several church dignitaries.

Certain of its features are objected to as being contrary to the teaching and practice of the Church of England, and a number of Protestants [illegible] that it is illegal, and should be abandoned or revised.

According to the Record, a feature of the service will be "a celebration of the Holy Communion for the repose of the souls of soldiers who died in the South African war." This, however, was denied by Dean Gregory.

The council of the Church Association passed the following resolution, and copies have been sent to the Dean, the Bishop, the Archbishop, the Chaplain-General, and Lord Roberts:

"That the public announcement that in the cathedral of the metropolis, on May 6, prayers for the dead will be offered in connection with the celebration of the Holy Communion and in the presence of a congregation mainly composed of persons who do not intend to communicate, calls for the active intervention of the Bishop of London as visitor of that cathedral,' and for the 'stern and drastic' action promised by the Archbishop of Canterbury, inasmuch as such a service constitutes a grave outrage upon loyal members of the Church, by reintroducing into public worship a colourable imitation of the lucrative superstition of 'Masses for the dead,' to gain for them 'remission of pain or guilt,' which was decisively rejected and formally condemned by the Church of England at the Reformation."

"AN APPEAL."

The following remarkable notice—by whom issued is not stated—has been distributed through London;

"Traitors to the Protestant Church of England have planned a Mass for the dead, to be held in St. Paul's Cathedral, on May 6, 1903.

"Protestants see to it, and let there be such a mass meeting of the living as shall make it impossible to hold this illegal service for the dead.

"Assemble at 10 a.m. in your thousands. It is your national cathedral. Don't let Rome capture it."

In connection with the same service, Mr. John Kensit addressed a letter of protest to Dean Gregory. Mr. Kensit says he believes it is undenied that not only will the service as now arranged, contain a public prayer for the dead, but that "the Epistle and Gospel are two of those appointed by the Roman Church for Masses for the dead, as the Benedictus and Qui Venit will be sung before the prayer of consecration, and the Agnus Dei after it."

"HONEST, BUT ILL-CONSIDERED"

He urges the Dean to have the service revised, so as to avoid a great public scandal, and says that should the attempt be made to conduct the service in the way at present contemplated, he will be present with others to raise a public protest.

It should be added that the organizers of the service deny this interpretation of their intentions, and say that the service is quite in conformity with the ritual of the English Church.

An authority of St. Paul's stated that so far as he knew Dean Gregory had no intention of having the service revised.

"The outcry," he continued, "is raised with perfectly honest intentions, I have no doubt; but it is ill-considered.

"There is a great difference of opinion of what prayers for the dead consist. Then it should be remembered that in our own burial [illegible] doubted prayer for the dead;

"We * * beseech Thee * * that we with all those departed in the true faith of Thy holy name may have our perfect consummation and bliss, body and soul, in Thy eternal and everlasting glory."

"As for the statement of Mr. Kensit that 'the Epistle and Gospel are two of those appointed by the Roman Church for Masses for the dead,' the only reply is that they are taken from the Bible, and are read repeatedly in every church of the English Church."

CHARGED WITH PERJURY

Two Men Charged with Perjury at Yesterday's Police Court

At the police court yesterday morning Jas. A. Freeman and H. Freeman were charged with committing perjury on January 14, 1902. The charge was laid by Wm. McCamus, Bobcaygeon, who was a defendant in a case on the above date and the two Freemans were witnesses for the defendants and it appears that they swore that a certain receipt of $50 dated June 1st, 1892, was written by Jas. A. Freeman and signed by Wm. Freeman, and which it is alleged was not the case. The prisoners were remanded for one week.

MAKING SUNSHINE

It is Often Found in Pure Food

The improper selection of food drives many a healthy person into the depth of despairing illness. Indeed most sickness comes from the wrong food and just so surely as that is the case right food will make the sun shine once more.

An old veteran of Newburyport, Mass, says: "In October, 1900, I was taken sick and went to bed, losing 47 pounds in about 60 days. I had doctor after doctor but all food hurt me so I had to live on magnesia and soda. All solid food distressed me so water would run out of my mouth in little streams.

"I had terrible night sweats and my doctor finally said I had consumption and must die. My good wife gave up all hope. We were at Old Orchard, Me., at that time and my wife saw some Grape-Nuts in a grocery store there. She bought some and persuaded me to try it. I had no faith in it but took it to please her. To my surprise it did not distress me as all other food had done and before I had taken the fifth package I was well on the mend.

"The pains left my head; my mind became clearer; I gained weight rapidly. I went back to my work again and now after six weeks use of the food I am stronger than ever before in my life. Grape-Nuts surely saved my life and made me a strong hearty man, 15 pounds heavier than before I was taken sick.

"Both my good wife and I are willing to make affidavit to the truth of this." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Winnipeg, Man., May 9—It is given out that the Canadian Pacific has already arranged to transport in May and June 24,000 head of cattle which will be all brought from the West. During the same month last year the total number of cattle shipped from Montreal was 4900.

WOULD ENHANCE TURKEY

An Easy Victory Over Bulgaria Would Increase Her Prestige

London, May 9—The Times' Vienna correspondent says there would be an obvious advantage to Turkey in a war with Bulgaria, which by giving her facile victory would enhance her military prestige, and which would dispose of the obnoxious reform scheme. Turkey's German friends might also gain a prolonged lease of the Ottoman Empire, and would escape the effect of disquieting schemes for veiled Macedonian partition which, it is understood, are brewing on the banks of the Neva.

WILL HELP CANADIAN TRADE

Argentine Cattle Strictly Barred on Account of Disease

London, May 9—Canadian shipping circles are greatly interested in to-days news that an Argentine steamer has arrived at Cape Town from Buenos Ayres with the foot and mouth disease rampant on board. Some 2,000 sheep and 250 cattle are affected. As a consequence African ports are expected to be closed to Argentine stock. Also Argentine will likely be removed from the position of equality that country now enjoys with Canada in the British ports. Any such prohibition will tend to increase Canada's cattle trade.

THE KAISER'S DECREE

Lord Strathcona's Remarks Humorously Received in London

London, March 9.—The Provincial News grows merry to-day over Lord Strathcona's reminder to the departing emigrants that they are not going to a foreign country, but only to another part of Britain.

The News says; "This frankly is 'lese majeste' against the Kaiser Wilhelm, for has not the German Government declared in unmistakeable language that Canada is not to be regarded in any sense as a part of Britain. Seeing it was Canada which brought, by its action, this imperial German decree, really Lord Strathcona should restrain himself. Who knows what new reprisal Germany may be compelled to make in order to teach us our place?"

CANADIANS WERE LOYAL TO KING

But They were Also a Self-Governing People and Would Not Abate a Single One of Their Rights

London, May 8—The Canada Club's dinner last night proved to be a most important gathering, not only in the point of attendance, which exceeded 300, but also in the quality of the speeches.

Sir Gilbert Parker, M.P., presided, and during the course of the evening presented Mr. J. G. Colmer, C.M.G., the ex-secretary of the High Commissioner's Office, with a silver tea service from his former colleagues on the Canadian staff, as well as a diamond pendant to Mrs. Colmer.

Canada and the Empire.

Sir Gilbert Parker, proposing the toast of "The Dominion of Canada" said that Canada had grown from a colony to a nation in recent years. She might be a third-rate power, in point of population and a second rate one as regards commerce, but she was first in the illimitable possibilities which lay before her. Her prosperity was founded upon her agri[illegible] a sure foundation.

Hon. Clifford Sifton, the Canadian Minister of the Interior, made a most important speech in reply, a speech which has attracted widespread attention because of the boldness of his language. At the outset he complained of the tendency of British politicians and newspapers to boom South Africa to the disadvantage of the other colonies, and reminded his hearers that the whole of the British Colonial Empire did not lay behind Table Mountain. Discussing the question of colonial contributions to Imperial defence, Mr. Sifton asserted that Canadians were loyal to their King, but they were also a self-governing people and would not abate a single one of their rights. Canada was warmly attached to the Mother Land, but while a loyal colony they would not swerve for one instant from the principle of self-government. He laid stress upon the argument, which is too often overlooked there, that by developing the Dominion, Canadians were a [illegible] in the Motherland. The whole keynote of the Minister's speech was: "Leave well enough alone."

AUSTRO-HUNGARY MAY SOON RETURN TO ABSOLUTISM

GAMEY GOES HOME

And Hopes Newspapermen will Let Him Rest for a Few Days

Toronto, May 9.—R. R. Gamey, M.P.P., is now en route to his home in Gore Bay. The member for Manitoulin left Toronto last night going by way of North Bay and Sudbury.

Mr. Gamey said to a reporter last night that he was glad of the opportunity to get home once more.

"The only thing I hope," he said, "is that you newspaper men don't close me up in the same way that you did on my Buffalo trip. I want to spend a day or two at home quietly and without interruption." Mr. Gamey was escorted to the train by R. N. Smith and a little crowd of friends.

May be Named Judges

Toronto, May 8.—It is understood here that the two vacancies on the High Court Bench of Ontario will be filled by the appointment of R. C. Clute, K.C., and G. F. Shepley, K.C., both well known and able Toronto barristers. Mr. Clute formerly practiced in Belleville and once contested West Hastings against his brother-in-law, Mr. Harry Corby.

Present Political Situation is Not Satisfactory

A STRONG APPEAL

Made by the Son of a Former Statesman

Vienna, May 9.—Count Julius Andrassy, a son of the famous Austro-Hungarian statesman, one of the chief supporters of the Szell Cabinet, addressed an open letter to his constituents, which intensifies the uneasiness of all lovers of Parliamentary government and the dual monarchy.

Count Andrassy declares that the budgetless condition of Hungary, which is the result of the opposition of the minority to the Government's military proposals, overshadows the nation with the greatest danger since 1867. He appeals to the obstructionists to forego a policy which does not promise to benefit them, while it is undermining Hungary's 1,000-year-old constitution, and inviting imperial calamities of the gravest character.

Count Andrassy's manifesto does not in the least exaggerate the situation, as viewed by competent observers. That the Parliamentary system is in the balance is beyond question. The Emperor-King and loyal officials of both divisions of the Monarchy are determined, if driven to it, to resist federal disintegration by a resort to absolutism. Such a course, in their opinion, is dictated by elementary considerations of prudence. They know that Russia is gradually increasing its troops at Ruth, and ceaselessly intriguing, in a quiet way, not only to strengthen its hold on Bulgaria, but also to trench on Austria's sphere in Servia.

They also know that despite the renewal of the triple alliance an influential party in Germany, which enjoys the countenance of the Kaiser himself, openly talks of the day when Trieste will be a German port, and the Adriatic a German lake. Hence the determination of Austro-Hungarian statesmen to risk any political adventure rather than see the Empire weakened by disunion.

A GUILD AND AUXILIARY

Formed in Connection with Warsaw Presbyterian Church

On Tuesday last the Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Potter visited Warsaw and assisted in organizing two church societies. On invitation Mrs. Potter accompanied Mrs. (Rev.) Atkinson, to Cottesloe, when a very encouraging Women's Foreign Missionary Auxiliary was formed with Mrs. Atkinson as president and Mrs. Robson as secretary. In the evening a strong and promising Mission Band was organized in the Manse at Warsaw, of which Miss Maggie Middleton will prove an efficient secretary.

Rev. Mr. Atkinson and Mr. Potter organized a Young Men's Guild. The Rev. W. L. Atkinson is hon-president, and the representative elder, Mr. Jno. Ross and Mr. Donald McIntosh Hon. vice-presidents, Mr. Roland Kidd is the president, Mr. Chas. Calder, vice-president; Mr. Bert Kidd secretary, and Mr. Richard Smith treasurer. By a unanimous vote the following were elected on the Executive—William Bell, Geo. Forsyth and Charles Peters, representing the South Church. It was decided to make definite arrangements for a programme of meetings to begin early in the fall.

A Good Work

The Times is in receipt of the annual report sent to us by the Lake St. John Colonization Society, which is exceedingly well gotten up. The cover is in five different colors, and is most artistic, representing a girl at the spinning wheel. The interior is profusely interspersed with agricultural scenes of that great fertile region of Lake St. John which render this report one of the most interesting of its kind. The text is full of valuable information, particularly interesting those who keep in touch with the movement which is making our country greater and more prosperous every day. Altogether this report is a great credit to that powerful and popular society, which works so energetically for the prosperity of our country.

RUSSIA PREPARES FOR WAR, HAVE RE-OCCUPIED NEW CHWANG

And Have Put Garrisons in the Forts at the Mouth of the Liao River

Are Further Reported to be Making Extensive Preparations

Pekin, May 8—The Russians, it is announced, have reoccupied New Chwang with a large force, and also have put garrisons in the forts at the mouth of the Liao River. They are further reported to be making extensive preparations.

The news of Russian activity, which comes from a most trustworthy source at New Chwang adds that on their return to New Chwang, the Russian troops brought with them several large guns. A large force has been ordered to reoccupy Tien-Chwang-Tai. The Russians have 14,000 troops between the mouth of the Liao River and Port Arthur.

The Russians are reported to be constructing forts on the hills near Liao-Yung, commanding the road between there and the Yalu River, and they have arranged to have a large quantity of provisions delivered at New Chwang. A dispatch from an official at New Chwang says indications point strongly to these active preparations being intended to forefend operations against the Russians in Manchuria.

London, May 8—The announcement from Pekin that the Russians have "reoccupied" New Chwang must not be understood as implying that they ever fully evacuated the place. The news is taken here to mean that the town has been reoccupied by the force the withdrawal of which was announced in April, when the Russians said that all the troops except the men necessary for the police guard had been removed.

Agonizing Pains of Rheumatism

Swollen, aching joints, muscles are stiff and sore, every movement accompanied by pain. The most potent remedy is Polson's Nerviline, which has five times the pain-subduing power of any other preparation. Apply the Nerviline copiously rub it on well, and then bind in a hot flannel bandage. This will cure the worst case in a short time. Try Nerviline for Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica or Lumbago—it's all right and only costs a quarter.

STRIKERS ARE FIRM, COST OF THE MILITIA

No Sign of a Settlement of Montreal Troubles---Will Not Agree to the Men's Terms

Montreal May 8—The representatives of the steamship companies, by a large majority, at noon to-day decided not to accept the terms submitted to them as a result of the conference which Sir William Mulock Minister of Labor, had with the 'longshoremen. It was expected that the terms would be accepted and Mr G. M. Boswell, of the Canadian Pacific Railway, together with Mr. Thomas Harling and Mr. C. McLean representing McLean, Kennedy & Co., of the Head Steamship Company stated that they would agree to them. Messrs. A. Allan, Robert Redford, and representatives of independent lines voted against the acceptance of the terms.

OTHER CONFRENCES.

Sir William Mulock and Mayor Cochrane decided at once to hold another conference with the 'longshoremen, and will meet the representatives of the steamship companies again at a late hour this afternoon. The teamsters and coal drivers are still out.

Sir William Mulock, Minister of Labor, and Hon. Raymond Prefontaine, Minister of Marine and fisheries, arrived here from Ottawa last evening to act as intermediaries between the shippers and striking 'longshoremen. Mr. J. G. O'Neil, leader of the strikers, had already been to the capital, so the representatives of the Government were informed as to the stand taken by the men.

At ten o'clock a committee representing the shippers held a conference with the Ministers, which lasted nearly two hours. A committee from the 'longshoremen, with power to act, were then received, but the meeting lasted only two minutes. The Ministers had a brief consultation, and at midnight Sir William made the following statement: "We have made certain proposals to the committee of shippers, and they are to submit them to a general meeting to-morrow morning and to notify us of their decision. Then, if they approve of these proposals, or any of them, or have any modifications to suggest, the same will be submitted in a like manner to the committee of 'longshoremen for their decision."

STRIKERS IN A DILEMMA.

The persistence of the strikers in endeavoring to win their point is a result of the situation in which they are now placed. Since the strike began three weeks ago, hundreds of men have been imported, and have taken the places of the strikers, who now feel that unless they can win their positions they are lost forever. They claim that if the shippers had made their present concessions at first, the trouble would have been averted. The shippers say that the imported men are not nearly equal to the strikers in experience and skill, and if the strike were over, experienced men would get the preference.

COST OF THE MILITIA.

Mayor Cochrane announces that he has been requested by Col. Gordon, D.O.C., to advance the sum of $5,000 towards paying the militia who have been guarding the wharves for the last ten days. The presentation of this account has forcibly brought to the minds of the aldermen what the strike is costing the city. During the first few days of the strike 1,100 men were on duty. This number was subsequently reduced to about 600 men. Yesterday the number of local militia on duty was 390.

A deputation, representing the city, trade bodies, and harbor board will go to Ottawa to see the Minister of Militia and make another effort to have the militia on duty at the docks replaced by regulars. This was the outcome of a couple of conferences yesterday. The first was between the commanding officer of the militia and the Council of the Board of Trade, when the officers complained that their men were being dismissed for being absent from their work, and asked the Board to secure the men from such treatment. Afterwards a committee of the Board of Trade interviewed Mayor Cochrane, who called in Lt. Col. Gordon, D.O.C., who explained that the order calling for the regulars had been countermanded from a higher source.

STRIKERS FIRM.

J. C. O'Neill, leader of the 'longshoremen's strike, indignantly denies statements alleged to have been made in at Ottawa interview with Hon. Mr. Prefontaine. The strikers were there represented as willing to accede to the shippers' demands, regarding non-recognition of the union, and were ready to give up the struggle. Mr. O'Neill states that instead of being about ended, the strike is only commencing, and that the men are determined to hold out for recognition.

Millbrook Cement Walks

The Reporter says: Mr. A. J. Cameron, Surveyor of Peterborough came out on Saturday to take levels and make the necessary specifications for the proposed granolithic walks on both sides of our business part of the town streets. We may say at this early stage of the proceedings that the ratepayers interested need not get panicy over the cost. From present date the cost will be so light when spread over a term of years that it will not be felt. About 3 cents a foot will cover the frontage tax, which surely will not bring anyone to poverty. The man with twenty feet frontage having to pay 60 cents per year extra, can see just how it will affect him. Then the council do not expect that the town's part of the cost will increase the rate any, as the saving will be effected in other ways. It's a case for careful consideration before being condemned.

First Outing

The members of the Trent Valley Canoe Club held their first outing on the Little Lake last evening when it was expected that a full list of entries from the club would be present to participate, but the expected entries failed to materialize with the exception of Messrs. Bert Stock and Norman Bell. Secretary Charles Whiten, to his credit, not to disappoint the friends of the club arranged with a couple of the "habitants" of the river front to make up a race. Messrs. Stock and Bell with their up-to-date canoe and hard practice all spring, had the advantage over their opponents, who had not paddled together before, and who used an ordinary 16 foot open hunting canoe, were a close second at the finish, and to even matters up suggested changing canoes for the second heat but without avail, the result being that the race was declared off. To make up a second event Messrs. Bell and Beaugor paddled a single canoe race over the same course, after exchanging canoes, Bell winning handily.

The Number of Wanderers Has Been Reduced to Sixty

Rosthern, N.W.T., May 9.—Reports from the Mounted Police engaged in escorting the wandering Doukhobors to their homes again show they are encountering difficulties. The number of fanatics is reduced to about sixty, mostly women, and these refuse to settle down on their farms. A band has succeeded in passing the Saskatchewan River en route south. Local members of the Doukhobors' General Council met to discuss means of punishing the leader of the pilgrimage, Serapaiken. It was decided to await the arrival of Peter Veregin, the Doukhobor leader, when a mass meeting of the people will be held to decide the best method of dealing with the pilgrims, against whose acts there is a strong feeling in the communities.

MUNICIPAL OWNERSHIP AT ORILLIA

The municipal enterprises at Orillia furnish the theme of Mayor Smallfield's latest investigation, as reported in the Renfrew Mercury. The town has owned its waterworks since 1883 and an electric light plant since 1887. A while ago the town council found itself confronted by two problems. The demand for water and light was growing so rapidly that it was necessary to enlarge the capacity of the plant by at least 50 per cent. Further, the price of fuel was rising. From $1,800 a year it had gone up to $3,000. If the existing plant were enlarged the fuel would cost from $4,500 to $4,800. At Ragged Rapids, nineteen miles up the Severn in an inaccessible spot, there was a fine waterfall. Engineers estimated that for $75,000 about 800 horse-power could be generated, and that the horse-power of this could be delivered at the town. The interest charge would be about $4,200, or less than the probable cost of the fuel necessary to supply much less power. The ratepayers sanctioned the enterprise. Owing largely to the inaccessibility of the spot, the cost of building the dam, excavating the flumes, building a new electric pump for the waterworks, installing generating and transmission plants, and other necessary works was much more than the estimate. The total outlay has been about $125,000, in addition to the $100,000 which had been invested in the old plants. The annual expenditure on account of the debt is about $13,600. About 600 horse power is available for sale, and of this about 450 has been disposed of at a very low price, about $16 per horse-power. A good deal of this has been taken by industries previously existing, but two of the factories have been started recently, and owe their inception to the cheap electric power available. By further expenditure as much as 3,000 horse-power can be developed.

The balance stands somewhat as follows:

Probable Expense.
Annual payment on debentures and interest...	$13,600
Maintenance (oil, repairs, etc.) and salaries.....	6,000
	$19,600

Revenue.
From water services..	$ 5,000
From private users of electric light...	9,000
From power users.....	7,000
	$21,000

Showing a cash profit of about $1,400. In addition the town has its street lights free, fire protection free and free light for all municipal buildings. Altogether, Mayor Smallfield figures the profits to Orillia at about $7,000 a year.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

The Turks are getting ready to kill a [illegible] more Christians. As soon as they get through the Sultan will receive another warning.

Several years ago the 'longshoremen of Quebec went on strike, with the result that shipping was driven from that port. The rotting wharves in that splendid harbor should be a warning to other strikers to-day.

The spirit of fanatic piety dies hard in the Doukhobors, but it is dying nevertheless. The number of "spirit-wrestlers" who felt themselves impelled to wander forth on a preaching tour the other day was greatly reduced since the pilgrimage of last fall.

Rarely is greater self-denial shown than in the case of an humble cobbler who gave up the society of his wife and daughter and isolated himself, while struggling hard to give them support, because he was a hopeless consumptive. At length the burden of disease and loneliness became too heavy and the other morning his body was found in the little shop, with his throat cut from ear to ear, by his own act.

John Charlton's refusal to vote on a divorce bill concerning the merits of which he knew nothing brings into strong light the absurdity of our present divorce system. Such bills are not discussed at all; no member takes the trouble to find out whether any divorce bill is just or not; the house accepts the bill from the senate committee and votes on them blindly. The wonder is that intelligent and reasonable men favor the perpetuation of such a system.

The King seems to have mapped out a very impartial programme for his foreign visits. The Czar and the Kaiser are now to be honored. They will have no reason to feel slighted, therefore, at the compliment paid the King of Italy and the President of the French Republic. It is to be hoped the St. Petersburg and Berlin visits will have as happy an effect on international relations as the Rome and Paris visits.

Gilded Gluttony.

Commenting on the tremendous amount of food consumed on the average Atlantic liner nowadays, a writer in the Springfield "Republican" says: "At eight comes the monumental breakfast; at eleven the deck steward fills up the comatose figures in the morgue with their beef-tea from those thick, obese English cups; at one, the magnanimous luncheon; at five, the sleepers assaulted by the deck steward again; at seven, the awesome English dinner; at nine-thirty, a trifling lunch to ballast you for bed. Besides this, barbaric mounds of sandwiches, olives, cheese, crackers, perpetually stare you in the face in the smoking-room. Food, food, food; the sight and smell of it pursue the unwilling stomach in every corner of the place; food, tasted, wasted, thrown away. There is one porthole on the steerage deck, from the galley, apparently, which belches it forth in a continuous stream—half-loaves of bread, great remnants of meat; we have left a trail of it across the Atlantic. If someone would only estimate the tons of wasted food which are annually thrown into the Atlantic, or could calculate how much cheaper these steamship companies could give us our travel, if they substituted plain, self-respecting fare for this gilded gluttony, it would certainly be interesting and worth while."

Womanly Troubles

SHOULD NOT BE ALLOWED TO UNDERMINE HEALTH AND BEAUTY, BUT SHOULD BE TREATED AT ONCE BY FERROZONE

It is impossible to go into details on this subject, but the experience of many a poor woman who is crippled for life, just because she didn't use a good remedy in time, should be a warning to others.

When the first stages of womanhood appear in a young girl, a great deal depends upon getting her over this critical stage, so that in years to come she will not develop green sickness or consumption.

Of Powley's Liquified Ozone—The Only Way to Kill Inside Germs

If you suffer from germs, and don't know that Powley's Liquified Ozone kills them, let us give you a bottle. Not a mere sample, but a full size bottle—enough to prove what Ozone can do. We will send you an order on your druggist for it, and instruct him to charge it to us.

This very offer must indicate to you that Ozone does what we claim.

Kills Inside Germs

Powley's Liquified Ozone is the only way to kill germs in the body without killing the tissues too—and you can't cure a germ trouble without killing the germs. Some of you have taken medicines until you are discouraged, for drugs never kill germs. Some of you believe your trouble incurable—simply for lack of a germ-killer. You are the ones to whom we want to give Ozone. We want you to know that Ozone ends these germ troubles—at once and forever. A cure is inevitable.

Not a Medicine

There are no drugs in Powley's Liquified Ozone—no alcohol—nothing but oxygen, the vital part of air.

Ozone is the discovery of a chemist who spent 20 years in learning how to get an excess of oxygen, in liquid form, into the blood. This product alone solves the problem of an internal germ-killer—a problem to which many scientists, including Koch and Pasteur, have devoted their lives.

Ozone gives to the world the only way known to kill germs in the body, and to cure the diseases they cause. It does that with oxygen—nature's greatest tonic—the very source of your vitality. It kills them because germs are vegetable, and an excess of oxygen, while life to an animal, is deadly to vegetable matter.

To-day the world's best physicians, and the largest hospitals everywhere, are using Ozone alone for germ troubles. And every person who suffers from a germ disease must employ it. We spend 14 days in making every bottle.

Germ Diseases

These are some of the known germ diseases. Powley's Liquified Ozone has cured each of these diseases—completely and forever, in at least several hundreds of the most difficult cases that physicians ever meet. Ozone is the proper treatment for all of them—the only quick, direct and certain way to remove the cause of the trouble. Medicine may palliate, stimulate, help nature overcome the germs, but Ozone alone can directly kill those germs, and that is what must be done.

Results That Astonished Relatives and Friends

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND

In the month of May, it is an absolute necessity that the body should be furnished with a richer supply of blood for the establishment of a health than can successfully cope with the enervating effects of hot summer weather. Poor blood in May produces listless, ambitionless, sleepless and sallow-faced men and women, who quickly become victims of some organic diseases that ends life.

Intelligent people recognize the necessity of cleansing and fortifying the system in May by using Paine's Celery Compound, which speedily removes all the poisons from the system, gives to the thin, watery blood a large proportion of red corpuscles, and arouses all the organs of the body to healthy action. Paine's Celery Compound does a work for victims of impure, watery and stagnant blood that commands the attention of the most eminent medical men in the world. Miss Barbara M. Stanfold, Hamilton, Ont., says:

"For over a year my health was in bad condition, and I became very weak, and much depressed in spirits. My troubles arose from poor and watery blood and imperfect circulation. My appetite was almost gone, and I was afflicted with insomnia. After several doctors had done all they could for me, I was weaker than when they first began to treat me, and my family became anxious about my condition. A neighbor advised my mother to have me use Paine's Celery Compound. Before I finished the second bottle, my appetite was better, I felt stronger and could sleep soundly five or six hours each night. I had so much faith in the wonderful compound that I continued with it until I was perfectly cured. To-day, after using six bottles, I am as well and strong as ever before. I thank you with all my heart for such a medicine; it saved my life when other medicines failed. All my friends are astonished at my happy cure."

The Minersville Gold Mining
—and Milling Company—

(Organized under the laws of Oregon.)

CAPITAL STOCK, - - $1,000,000.00
PAR VALUE SHARES, - - $1.00

Well Paid and Non-Assessable.

The property of this company consists of three full claims known as the "Fleur de lis," "Mayflower," and "Mistletoe" Group, embracing an area of sixty acres of highly mineralized ground, located in the famous Sumpter district, Baker county, Oregon, about 3½ miles from McEwen on the Sumpter Valley Railroad.

The best evidence we have to offer as to our "being in good company" is to mention a few of those who are our immediate neighbors, viz: the North Pole, Bonanza, Red Boy, Eureka Columbia, Golconda, Cracker, Oregon, Golden Wizard, all of which made this same district, producing from $[illegible] to $[illegible] per month each.

From the preliminary amount of development work already done on our property and from the assays of ore which is entirely free milling, running $[illegible] to $[illegible] per ton, we are confident that with the installation of modern machinery we have a proposition worthy of the most searching enquiry by those seeking a high grade investment.

Our board of directors consists of men who have a practical knowledge of mining, well known and of high standing, who have invested every available dollar of their own to acquire this valuable property and put it on a dividend paying basis.

To accomplish this it has been decided to place a limited amount of the treasury stock on sale at [illegible] per share for development purposes only until such time as the condition of the mine will enable it to take care of itself, when the sale of stock will be withdrawn.

Our prospectus will give you all particulars. Let us send it to you. We shall also be pleased to answer all enquiries whether by mail or in person at our office.

THE
TWO-TEN OIL CO.
of Boulder, Colorado.
Capital Stock, 1,500,000 shares. In Treasury, 500,000 shares
TRANSFER OFFICE, BRISTOL, CONN.

The Company has a perpetual lease on 20 acres of proven oil land in SECTION NINE (9) of the Boulder district, and this section and the immediate vicinity have the best and largest number of producing wells in the entire district.

Our Well No. 1 came in, in January and is now pumping and shipping Oil regularly to the Refinery.

The Directors have decided to put down well No. 2 at once, and they now offer a block of the Treasury stock for the next 30 days at

10 Cents per Share, after that price will be advanced.

It is a well known fact that a 15 barrel well will pay over 100 per cent. profit upon its cost.

This is no longer a speculation for we have proved that oil is on our ground, and we now have oil in paying quantities, with two wells pumping we can soon pay dividends, and every well we put down increases our earning capacity.

This is a business proposition, managed by business men.

Buried Gold

By FRED WHISHAW.

Author of "A Boyar of the Terrible," etc.

"I'm too bad to move to-day, or maybe to-morrow. It's fever, mind you, and makes me weak as a cat. When I'm well enough I'll come, and thank you kindly. You're a better chap than I am, Keith, and that's the truth. Here's me abusin' you like a pickpocket, and you've played the square game all through——"

"I tell you I didn't," Keith snapped out. "What's the good of talkin' about it? I know what I'd have done if I could. If you and I's to be pals there's one subject as isn't to be spoken of."

"Very well, that's a bargain. Come and see me in two days, mate, and maybe I'll be able to come back with you. How long are you for shore this time?"

"Till I take another berth, which isn't going to happen while my pay lasts."

"Then don't sign on till you've consulted me. I shall want a crew presently for a trip what's going to pay us all most handsome."

"Is old Foster, Jessie's father, alive and well?" asked Keith, before leaving.

"Well and hearty, darn his skin! He's boss on the island and my worst enemy," said Dick.

"And young Drake? Lord, I shall be able to make Jess happy to-day, anyway."

"Drake's all right. He'd have been here if he'd had the pluck of a titmouse, but he dursn't come."

"Well, I'll tell them all the good news, and I'll tell—I'll tell Ruby you're comin' down in two days."

"Yes, tell her that," said Dick, flushing a little. "Tell her I've gone through all this danger I spoke of on purpose for to get back to her. Say I couldn't wait."

"I think you can tell her all that yourself. I'll say you're coming. That'll be enough for the present."

When Keith went to tell Ruby that Dick Robinson was not only alive but within a few miles of her, he found he had undertaken a very hard task. It would be, he felt, nothing more nor less than signing his own death warrant.

"Well, it's got to be done," he sighed. "And the sooner the better for me. It'll make her happy, anyway."

"Whatever is the matter with you, Mr. Adams?" asked Ruby, in some consternation, the moment poor Keith entered the room. "You look as if you'd come to your own funeral." Keith felt that Ruby was much nearer the mark than she guessed when she used this figure of speech.

"I oughtn't to look that, anyway," said Keith, "for I'm bringing news that'll make all Seadown happy, and you among them."

"Oh, dear me," laughed Ruby. "Is the town goin' to be given a holiday on full pay, or what's up?"

"It's about the 'Hecuba,'" said Keith, with his heart feeling like lead. "She was supposed to 've gone down, you remember, a year ago and more. Well, she was wrecked; but all the crew were saved. They're alive."

"The 'Hecuba?'" said Ruby, as though trying to recollect. "The 'Hecuba?'" she repeated, loudly and joyously. "Why then, Jessie Foster's lad—young Drake—Oh! Keith, that's splendid news! Is it true! Is it really true?"

"It's quite true," said Keith. "Denys Drake's alive, and old Foster; and Dick Robinson's alive, and coming, too, in a day or so."

Ruby had been clapping her hands, with exclamations of delight, as Keith mentioned each name. At Dick Robinson's she suddenly stopped and started. "Dick Robinson?" she repeated slowly—"why, of course."

"Dick's alive and comin' down day after to-morrow," said Keith; "an' I've come to tell you, Ruby, that I sha'n't be toddlin' round much more just now. [illegible] voice wavered a little, and as he finished he turned slightly aside from her. To his infinite surprise and consternation Ruby Amright burst into tears.

"Yes, I do understand. I do understand, Keith," she sobbed. "I understand what a brute I have been to you and what a heart of gold yours is. Shall I tell you all I think of you? I should like to tell you before—before Dick comes back."

"I think I'll go now," said poor Keith, who felt like collapsing and dared not stay. What comfort was there in hearing her praise? Better end the pain of this scene and take care to keep away in future.

"Don't go yet, Keith," she pleaded. "I have so much to say."

But Keith could withstand no more of it, and left the house hurriedly.

CHAPTER X.

Joy and Terror.

"I'd give my soul to be loved as she loves him," thought poor Keith, as he hastened away. "That burst of tears, soon as she realised he was alive and coming down—ah, well, thank the Lord she's happy!"

Keith's next mission was an easy and pleasant one, but it was plain that he had not recovered from the sting of his interview with Ruby, for no sooner did he enter the Fosters' house than Tom Foster laughed and asked whether he'd come to borrow a white shirt to be buried in.

"I'm not well," said Keith, "and that's a fact; but I've come to say something that may make me feel better before I've done, and others, too! Is Jessie in?"

"Lord!" exclaimed Tom. "You've never come to offer yourself in young Drake's place? We was talkin' of a new man for her only yesterday."

"No need for that. Is she in?"

"Jess!" roared Tom Foster, and down came pretty Jessie in her black frock, looking sweet and dainty, though with a suspicion of sadness about her blue eyes.

"I've a secret for you, Jess, and you shall guess it if you can!" said Keith. "Come—it's a pleasant surprise for you. I'll tell you that much. Something you'll like more'n most things. Come, guess."

"Oh, I can't guess!" laughed Jessie. "Never could. Is it a present?"

"Better than a present. Guess again!"

"I can't," said Jessie. "I really can't. I'm only a fool at guessing."

"Have you lost anything?" suggested Keith. "Somethin', maybe, you'd give a lot to find again?"

"I ain't got much to lose," laughed Jessie. "No, I don't think I have."

"Nothing dropped into the sea, now, a trinket might be, or p'r'aps a sweetheart?"

Jessie suddenly uttered a cry and rushed across to him, seizing him by both shoulders, looking into his eyes, her own wild and dazed.

"Oh," she cried, "you wouldn't, you wouldn't joke about it! You've heard something, you have! You've heard something of my Denys—he's alive! Denys is alive—and father?"

"Yes, you've guessed. They're alive, both of 'em—leastways they were half a year ago."

Jessie did not allow him to finish; she flung her arms about the embarrassed man's neck and kissed him. She danced up to Tom and hugged him also. She laughed and burst into tears and laughed again.

"You'd better take her upstairs and let her lie down a bit," said Keith.

"Not yet—not yet. I must know more first," cried Jessie. "Where is he—where are they—are they coming—are they here?—oh, Tom, what did I say? I said he was alive! I knew it! Oh! hasn't the Lord been good to me? Where is he, Keith? Tell me—I'll be good and listen quiet, only tell me."

"Don't you expect to see him yet a bit," said Keith, "or you'll be disappointed. He's alive and well, but at present they're at the end of the world on a island—wrecked."

"Oh, they'll starve, they'll starve," cried Jessie, wringing her hands. "Can't I go to him, Mr. Adams?"

"You'd better swim over and take him a packet of sandwiches and a cup of tea!" roared Tom Foster. "Don't be a fool, Jess! Thank God they're alive. Where are they, Keith, and how've you heard about 'em?"

"Dick Robinson's home," said Keith, looking graver suddenly. "As for the others they're on a small island in the Pacific, living comfortable, Dick says, and sittin' tight on a lot of gold what they've saved, Lord knows how, in the ship's boats. They won't leave it for fear someone should come and take it while they're away. Your Denys wants to come ho[illegible]ch, Jess, and father, too. Maybe they will."

"I'd rather have Denys than the island full and full of gold," said Jessie. "Can I see Dick Robinson, Mr. Adams, and hear all about him?"

"Shut up, Jess, and go'n lie down and don't be a fool," said her brother Tom bracingly. "You'll see Dick Robinson, I don't doubt, in good time. Now you go away and let me have a word with Adams."

"You shall see Dick presently, Jess," added Keith, reassuringly. "He ain't come down to Seadown yet. I saw him up in Southampton."

Jessie left the room and went upstairs, to live in a little heaven of her own until such time as further light should be shed upon these matters. For the present, as Tom had said, the fact that Denys was alive ought to be, and was, enough for her.

"It's about this 'ere gold you mentioned I want to hear about," said Tom, when the girl had departed. "Was you speaking serious?"

"I don't know much about it, only that Dick said they'd got some and wouldn't leave till they could take it with them. Dick hinted he had some idea of his own about it, and said I was to keep myself disengaged in case of a cruise."

"Well, think of me, old man, if there's a crew to be got together. If it's going to be a good thing I'd like to have a hand in it."

"All right, I won't forget," laughed Keith. "There's a lot to happen before Dick can fit out a ship on his own."

Keith thought long and earnestly when he reached his room after paying these two visits. The problem of Dick Robinson and how to rid him of his shadowers was on his mind. Since seeing Ruby he was doubly anxious that no harm should happen to Dick. What would become of the girl if now, in this moment of supreme happiness, some hideous chance should rob her of its full fruition? Her face had become transfigured with joy when he had told her of Dick's safety. Perhaps he had been a fool to tell her of it before he should have thought of some way of ridding the poor chap of this terror that hung over him.

How her face had changed when she heard, he reflected again and again. At first she could not realize, and her earliest thought had been for Jessie and her happiness—how sweet and unselfish of the maid! As for herself, she had so long given up thinking of Dick as alive, that even when he had spoken of the "Hecuba's" crew being saved she couldn't grasp the idea that Dick was one of them. Then she suddenly remembered, [illegible]

Thus Keith represented the matter to himself. How utterly and hopelessly wrong he was in his conclusions none but Ruby could tell. Perhaps even she could scarcely have explained the sudden rush of tenderness which had made her face look "like heaven." She could, however, have spoken with certainty as to one point at any rate, namely that the transfiguration had nothing to do with joy at the news of Dick's escape from drowning.

Meanwhile events of a different kind were taking place in Southampton, where Dick Robinson lay recovering from his attack of fever, and recovering the quicker for Keith's visit and his encouraging words. Once he reached Seadown in safety, he now told himself, and had put himself under Keith's protection, he wouldn't mind if the whole darned island came to fetch him, he wouldn't be afraid. "It's the bein' all alone and in the dark with the devil about; that's what kills a man!" so his thoughts ran.

Down in the bar there were men talking, laughing, swearing, quarreling, after their daily fashion.

"When they clear out at dinner time, blow me if I won't go down and get a drink myself!" thought Dick. He must have felt better indeed to come to this decision. Keith had been a better doctor for his complaint than could have been provided from among all the names in the medical directory.

But things were different at the dinner-hour, for though all but a very few of the loafers and tipplers cleared out, a couple of men came in—strangers to the place—and called for bread and cheese and pints of beer, with which they were duly served and which they consumed in silence.

At this hour the bar was a decorous and exemplary place. It smelt unpleasantly, indeed, of stale beer and of woodwork soaked through and through with various strong drinks, but the pandemonium which raged here for the greater part of each day was stilled for one happy, peaceful hour, and those who usually presided behind the bar were at their dinner on the other side of the open parlor door, whence one would issue, from time to time, when some customer demanded attention, hurriedly swallowing, and wiping his mouth.

Someone in a room upstairs knocked with a stick upon the floor, but the presiding authorities went on with their dinners. The knock was repeated.

"There's someone upstairs knocking on the floor," said one of the strangers eating bread and cheese at a drink-sodden table. He went close to the parlor door to say it.

AFTER THE UNIONS

Montreal Board of Trade Would Strike Another at Internationalism

Montreal, May 7—The Board of Trade is preparing a bill which will be introduced in Parliament making it a criminal offence for any man to belong to a labor union which has not secured incorporation from the Dominion Government.

CHINESE VISITORS

Men of Note Interested in the Upbuilding of Celestial Empire

Ottawa, May 7—A deputation of Chinese gentlemen, accompanied by five of the leading Chinamen resident in Ottawa, attracted attention while making a tour of the house of commons on Monday. Their first inquiry was for that friend of fair play to Chinamen, Mr. J. H. Macleod, who took charge of the party and led them through the various departments of the house and senate. Those direct from China were Mr. Pow Chee, secretary to the Chinese Empire Reform Association, with headquarters at Yokohama; Mr. Leong Kai Chew, at one time a tutor in the royal family at Pekin and now principal as well as founder of a Chinese college and two schools at Tokio Japan, also vice-president of the C.E.R. A., and Mr. Wong Chee, merchant Yokohama. These were accompanied by Mr. C. Yip Yeu, merchant and Chinese custom house interpreter at Vancouver, B.C. They are all Christians. [illegible]

The travelers were introduced to several members and other gentlemen of the house, all of whom admired the correctness with which they spoke English. The library was their admiration of all the sights in the Parliament buildings. All were dressed in correct English style and three out of the four have discarded the cue. The orientals were guests at the Russell. The object of their present westward tour is to visit the leading cities of Canada and the United States in which Chinamen are residents to endeavor to interest their brethren in North America in the cause espoused by the Chinese Empire Reform Association. They have commenced their tour in Canada and will proceed from Montreal to New York.

On Giving and Taking Advice.

It is wonderful how often analysis proves our intuitive likes and dislikes to be correct. Now I have always disliked philanthropists and altruists without knowing why, and yet the reason is one that should be instantly obvious to any thoughtful man. The trouble is that they lack subtlety, and that there is no excuse for their "I am holier than thou" attitude. Their altruism is all back end foremost, and that is why so many of them are regarded by a large section of the public as men who have not learned the difficult art of minding their own business. Instead of elevating those to whom they devote their attention, they make them feel mean and worthless, or else fill them with unholy wrath. Feeling that this was wrong, I investigated carefully and made the startling discovery that the true altruist helps his superiors rather than his inferiors.

Having a large and assorted collection of friends and acquaintances, I studied my relations with them, and found that when I felt called upon to advise a struggling brother, and elevate him to my own high moral and intellectual plane, I always felt personally uplifted and more inclined to reverence myself as a man, as Goldsmith so wisely advises. On the other hand, when circumstances made me realize that I was only a "poor weak sister," and my superiors came to comfort me after the manner of Eliphaz the Temanite, and Elihu the son of Barachel the Buzite, of the kindred of Ram, whose name was no worse than he deserved, I noticed that they immediately began to swell out their chests and to feel better. Having observed this, it was not long until I discovered the great truth I am now doing my utmost to apply in conduct. I found that I could get as fine a philanthropic glow from permitting myself to be advised, and watching the beneficial effect on my adviser, as ever I did from giving advice myself. Of course I found it hard at first to give up the luxury of advising my inferiors, and still harder to submit to being constantly advised, but the subtlety of the scheme appeals to my artistic sense, and I look forward confidently to a time when I can meekly submit to having my finer feelings clawed over by such of my superior friends as I wish to help, and get all the strength I need myself from the consciousness of good work well and secretly done. Indeed I have accomplished enough in this line already to spur me on to greater achievements. One superior friend, to whom I have often listened meekly when he felt that I needed moral homilies, already feels so uplifted that he is about to take orders; another who devoted himself to my financial affairs is looking forward to a successful career in Wall street; and a third who has favored me with exhaustive literary criticisms has secured such a grasp on his art, and such confidence in himself, that he has already broken ground for what is to be The Great American Novel. If these men succeed, just think what a source of secret joy it will be to me to know that I am the cause of it all, and if they fail—well, I shall at least have revenge for all they have made me endure.

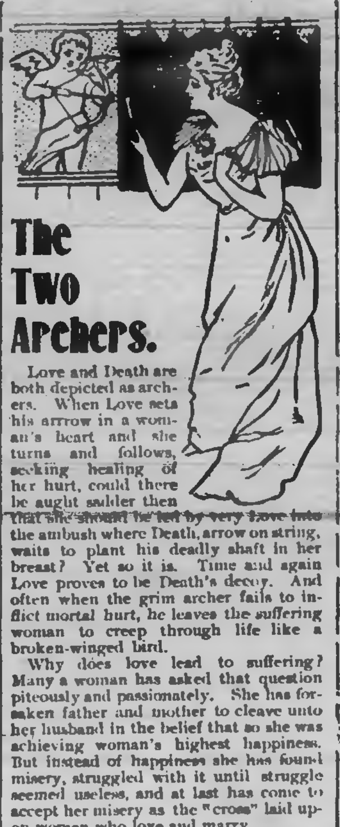
As for my inferiors, I by no means neglect them, as a hasty consideration of my scheme might lead the reader to suppose. No, indeed. I am gradually getting them all to consider themselves my superiors, an easy thing to do, by the way, and many of them are now uplifting themselves by lavishing advice on me.

But besides my inferiors and rapidly growing list of superiors, I have a few friends who are so comfortably self-centered that I have been able to discuss my altruistic scheme with them, and they seem to fear that I shall get into trouble. They hold that unless I take the advice that is tendered, I shall offend and discourage my beneficiaries, while if I take one-tenth of it I shall land in a sanitarium, and have trustees appointed to administer my liabilities. That shows their lack of insight. The man that has once contracted the advice habit simply advises for the self confidence and pleasure it gives him, and then goes forth and straightway forgets what he advised. Knowing this, I feel privileged to do the same. Of course that is probably what I would do in any case, but it is a great satisfaction to feel that I have a philosophical reason for doing it.

Having explained briefly the scope and effects of my altruistic methods, I would like in conclusion to offer some advice to such readers as feel tempted to give them a trial, but to do so would imply that I consider them inferiors, and for that reason I must refrain. If any readers, however, feel moved to advise me as to how I might improve and amplify my scheme I shall be meekly delighted, and I feel that I may depend upon the courteous editor to forward their letters.—From the "Contributors' Club."

Boy Dragged to Death

Winnipeg, May 5.—Jos. Lahin, a lad of 16 came to a terrible end at Eagle Hills, near Battleford. He was riding a stallion that had a rope on his neck and when running away the boy was caught in its coils, and dragged a considerable distance. When the body was found life was extinct.



The Two Archers.

Love and Death are both depicted as archers. When Love sets his arrow in a woman's heart and she turns and follows, seeking healing of her hurt, could there be aught sadder then that she should be led by very Love into the ambush where Death, arrow on string, waits to plant his deadly shaft in her breast? Yet so it is. Time and again Love proves to be Death's decoy. And often when the grim archer fails to inflict mortal hurt, he leaves the suffering woman to creep through life like a broken-winged bird.

Why does love lead to suffering? Many a woman has asked that question piteously and passionately. She has forsaken father and mother to cleave unto her husband in the belief that so she was achieving woman's highest happiness. But instead of happiness she has found misery, struggled with it until struggle seemed useless, and at last has come to accept her misery as the "cross" laid upon women who love and marry.

There is no real reason why almost every wife and mother should not enjoy sound health. The causes of her misery lie in diseases which affect the delicate, womanly organism. Disagreeable drains are carrying away the vital force. Inflammation has lighted its fire for slow torment. Ulceration is eating into the tender tissues. Female weakness is making life a daily martyrdom. Is it any wonder that the nerves are racked, that appetite fails, and night, which should bring rest, brings only restless and troubled dreams?

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription cures the womanly diseases which undermine the general health. It dries the drains, puts out the fire of inflammation, heals the ulcerated tissues and cures female weakness. In a word, it makes weak women strong and sick women well.

"Favorite Prescription" is a true temperance medicine. It contains no alcohol, neither opium, cocaine, or other narcotic.

Sick and ailing women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter, free of charge. All correspondence strictly private and sacredly confidential. In a little more than thirty years Dr. Pierce, assisted by his staff of nearly a score of physicians, has treated and cured over half a million women. Write, without fear or fee, to Dr. R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician to the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y.

HAD GIVEN UP HOPE.

"It is with feelings of sincere gratitude that I again write to you," says Mrs. Harry A. Brown, of Orono, Penobscot County, Maine. "I wrote to you concerning my health last Spring (I think it was in June), and you advised me to take your 'Favorite Prescription' and 'Golden Medical Discovery,' which I did according to directions, and continued taking them for five months. I took nine bottles of 'Favorite Prescription,' six of 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and four vials of Dr. Pierce's Pellets. My disease was displacement and ulceration of the uterus, and I was in a terrible condition with pain and weakness, and had given up all hopes of ever being well again. Had doctored with four different doctors within four months, and instead of getting better was growing weaker all the time. I decided to try your medicines, as I had heard of the many cures resulting from their use. I bought five bottles and felt so much better after using them that I kept on until I am as well as ever in my life, and to Dr. Pierce all the praise is due.

"Before I began taking your medicine I only weighed 120 pounds. I now weigh 160 pounds. I gained forty pounds in six months. I shall doctor no more with doctors, as it is only a waste of money. No matter what my trouble is, I shall write to Dr. Pierce every time. I am now in perfect health, thanks to Dr. Pierce."

THEY PROCLAIM THE MERITS

To the World of Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills.

To the Editor of The Times—

Sir,—That the world may know of the merits of Dr. Clarke's wonderful Little Red Pills, I ask the newspapers to publish the following: I was, for years, a martyr to stomach trouble, and had no hope whatever of being cured; but on seeing a testimonial from a friend in Ontario, in one of the Toronto papers, I resolved to write to her and found that she had actually been cured of the same trouble by Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills. I at once bought three boxes and took them according to directions, and they almost cured me., I purchased three more boxes, and am thankful to say that I am entirely cured. I have no splitting headaches now, no burning pain in my stomach; in fact, have a new lease of life.

MRS. JAMES HUNTER,
Miama, Man.

A Remarkable Offer.

Sir,—We make the following proposal to readers of The Times. To any one who is a subject of rheumatism, (no matter how long standing), or any blood disease, enumerated below, and will give Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills a fair trial, and are not fully and completely cured, we will refund the money paid for the pills. If no good results follow we will forfeit the cash.

We have yet to know of a single case where this wonderful medicine has not been almost entirely successful in its work of relieving suffering humanity.

Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills are a positive and certain cure for rheumatism, asthma, paralysis, coughs, lame back, indigestion, all stomach and liver troubles, female complaints, even when the diseases have been standing for many years; the most stubborn cases will yield. For sale by Ormond & Walsh, Peterborough. Price 50c. per box, or 3 boxes for $1,00.

Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Catarrh and Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Eczema, same price. $500 will be paid for any case that it will not permanently cure.

The Royal Family as Anglers.

Among the mass of anecdotal matter recalled by the coronation of King Edward VII., Canadian sportsmen are interesting themselves in reminiscences of the lack of skill as an angler displayed by the King when, in the course of his progress through the Dominion in 1860 as Prince of Wales, he visited some of the best fishing waters of Canada.

The late Senator Price took the Prince on a trip up the Saguenay to the St. Marguerite River, the present preserve of the St. Marguerite Salmon Club, and then, as now, noted for the abundance of its salmon and trout. A few small trout were, however, all that the whole party could boast of. Mr. Price hooked a large salmon for the Prince and gave it to him to land, but his attempt was not successful. The Prince had not had sufficient practice in salmon fishing to enable him to kill a large fish.

The official historian of the tour notes that "it was not for the want of advice; there was plenty of that. Everyone called out what to do, and, as a matter of course, everyone suggested a different mode from everybody else, so that His Royal Highness was bewildered, and the salmon proved the truth of the old proverb, that 'in a multitude of counsellors there is safety'; and, breaking the line, got clear away."

Many Canadian fishermen can testify from personal observation on the Restigouche and Cascopedia rivers to the clever angling of the present Prince of Wales and of his aunt, the Princess Louise, now Duchess of Argyll. The cottage built for her on the banks of the Cascopedia is still standing, and the pool in which she killed her largest salmon still bears her name. It was while visiting her in Canada that the present Prince of Wales and his late brother, the Duke of Clarence, proved to Canadian anglers their skill with the fly rod. The Prince of Wales has, indeed, been called the angler-in-chief of the Royal family, and both in dexterity and luck he recalls his late uncle, the Duke of Edinburgh.

Queen Alexandra is well known as a keen disciple of Izaak Walton. The Alexandra fly, which has been called after her, is so deadly a killer on some of the Old Country streams that its use on many of them has been absolutely forbidden. This remarkable fly was not, as sometimes supposed, invented by the Queen, but by Dr. Hobbs. It was originally known as the Lady of the Lake, and this name was abandoned for its present one because of the success obtained with it by the then Princess Alexandra. In America it is less known as a salmon fly than as a successful lure for large trout.

In fact, it may not properly be called an artificial fly at all, being intended as a vague imitation of a minnow, and it was originally intended to be cast and played minnow fashion just below the surface of the water. Its coarse green hackles partly enclose a bright silvery body, glimpses of which are given to the fish by allowing the line to run with the current and then drawing it back up stream by short, sudden jerks, which open and close the hackles.

King Edward's daughter, the Duchess of Fife, is devoted to angling, and spends much of her time at the sport, accompanied by her daughters, while the Duke is away deer-stalking. Fishing is the favorite amusement, too, of the little sons of the Prince of Wales, and they were recently quite proud of their ability to send a brace of trout of their own killing to the King, and another brace to their own parents.

Youth and Crabbed Age.

Our respect for age dwells in us side by side with enthusiasm for youth. Nothing gives one more of a glow than when a young man deservedly beats a man of an older generation. It is that glow which has made a familiar quotation of Pitt's famous retort to Walpole, that crushing sentence beginning, "The atrocious crime of being a young man."

A judge named Robinson was noted for his peevish, sneering manner. Hoare, the Irish lawyer, was once arguing in a case before him. The judge was unusually stern, and finally roused the young barrister by accusing him of intending to bring the King's commission into contempt.

"No, my lord," said Hoare; "I have read in a book that when a peasant, during the troubles of Charles I., found the crown in a bush, he showed it all reverence. In like manner I shall respect the King's commission, though I find it on a bramble."

Robinson was reported to have risen to his rank by the publication of some slavish and scurrilous pamphlets. Once in the days when Curran was poor and unknown, struggling against great adversity, he appeared before Robinson. The judge tried to extinguish him. When Curran declared that he had consulted all his law-books, and could not find a case that did not support his position, Robinson answered:

"I suspect your law library is rather contracted."

This brutal and unnecessary remark stung Curran's pride and roused him at once.

"It is true, my lord," he said, after a moment's contemptuous silence, "that I am poor, and the circumstance has curtailed my library. My books are not numerous, but they are select, and I hope I have perused them well. I have prepared myself for this high profession rather by the study of a few good books than by the composition of a great many bad ones."

He—Do you think it's right for a man to call his wife down? She—It isn't a question of right; it's a question of courage.

TWENTY NEW ENGINES

The C.P.R. Have Added Twenty Additional Engines

London, May 8.—The Locomotive Company at Chemnitz has secured the contract after a competition of American and European firms for 20 engines for the Canadian Pacific Railway. They are of a powerful type, and will be used on transcontinental trains.

"Livable."

"Yes," said Mrs. Farren, decidedly, "Milly Morris is a nice girl clear through, and if anybody ought to get along easy with a tryin' mother-in-law, she ought. A more livable person I never knew."

"Livable?" repeated her listener. "Livable? That must be a local word. I don't think I ever heard it before."

"It may be local," rejoined Mrs. Farren, a trifle loftily, "and it may be bad, and it may be good; but anyway it's just what I mean. Milly's livable. She's been brought up in a big family, and she's had to be, if she meant to be comfortable herself and let other folks be comfortable, too. There were more livable folks when I was a girl than there are now, and I think the big families had a good deal to do with it, though of course not everything.

"There were plenty of people then who never got their corners worn down, no matter how many brothers and sisters they had; but even when they rasped, those days, they got along together after a fashion. Nowadays, land! Sometimes it stumps me fair and square why the nice people I know in nice families can't seem to stand each other's little ways.

"Oh, I don't say it isn't so; when the doctors say they can't—and it generally ends in doctors—why, I suppose they truly can't. It's nerves, and nobody understands nerves unless the doctors, and I'm a long way from being sure that they do. But just you count up some time the families where there's always one member mysteriously off visiting, and then the number of folks you know that separate when they'd naturally stay together, if only they could hit it off—lone sisters and only-surviving bachelor brothers, and mothers and only daughters, and all sorts of family remnants that ought to be each other's best comfort. But as soon as they try living together, one of 'em gets nervous prostration, or has hysteric spells, or is ordered off quick to travel somewhere where the climate doesn't agree with the other one. They're fond enough of each other, generally, and they aren't generally ugly-tempered; they just aren't livable.

"It can't be endured, always, and it can't be cured, sometimes; but I'm firm in believing it could be prevented most times. If, when folks first began to harden in their own little crankums, and fret over the cranks of the folks they care most for, they'd stop and think where they were getting to, why, nine times out of ten they'd pull up in time, and get their nerves and feelings and foolish frettings tight in hand before they run away with 'em!

"Yes, that's what I surely do believe. And outside the great, big, deep foundation virtues, if I had a daughter, the little virtue—if it is a little virtue—I'd rather have her have than any other would be just that—being livable. It's an all-round, lifelong blessing to whomsoever it concerns."

"It may be good or it may be bad or it may be local," assented the listener, thoughtfully, "but whatever it is as a word, livable is a good thing to be. I'll own that."

An "American" Duel.

A Heidelberg student has just recovered from the effects of his own foolishness, after lying for weeks at death's door. The story is so disgraceful that it deserves to be made known. Last July some Heidelberg students—all mere lads—had a violent altercation about a girl. It ended in the usual manner, with a challenge, only the duel was to be more original than the ordinary run of German students' duels. It was to be a so-called "American duel," although it is an insult to American common sense to call it such. The duellists drew lots as to who should kill himself, and the lot fell upon a young idiot of nineteen, a student of medicine and son of a high government official at Karlsruhe. He had his choice of three modes of suicide, and selected cutting open his arteries. His fellow-students drew a picture of his "death-mask," placed a couple of skulls on the table by the side of it, solemnly said farewell to the doomed one, and left him in his room. The landlord, suspecting something [illegible] found the student lying in a pool of blood unconscious. He had done his best to comply with the terms of the duel, but was not quite dead. While medical aid was being summoned the other students returned to see if the sentence had been carried out. In disgust at the result, one of them kicked the body of the almost lifeless youth, saying, "Why, the fellow's alive! He's only disfigured himself!" And this is the much-vaunted German university life!

Those Bill Boards!

Humor is hardly the quality one expects to find on the editorial page of the London "Times," yet it gives a most effective turn to a plea for the restriction of the advertising bill-board nuisance. "Let us think," says the "Times," "of the opening of Gray's 'Elegy:'

The curfew tolls the knell of parting day;
The lowing herd winds slowly o'er the lea,
The plowman homeward plods his weary way,
And leaves the world to darkness and to me, and consider whether such lines could ever have been written if the poet, musing in Stoke Pogis churchyard, had looked in one direction and seen the lowing herd winding past somebody's advertisement of a patent oil cake; in another, and seen the weary plowman considering whether he should buy some gaudily flaunted nostrum warranted to ease his weariness; in a third, and spied some garish board offering him an oil to illuminate the glimmering landscape as it faded on his sight."

What a Jealous Wife Found.

A Fayette woman suspected that her husband was in the habit of kissing the hired girl, and resolved to detect him in the act. Saturday night she saw him pass quietly into the kitchen. The hired girl was out, and the kitchen was dark. The jealous wife took a few matches in her hand, and, hastily placing a shawl over her head, as the hired girl often did, entered the back door, and immediately she was seized and kissed and embraced in an ardent manner. With heart almost bursting, the wife prepared to administer a terrible rebuke to the faithless spouse, and, tearing herself away from his fond embrace, she struck a match and stood face to face with—the hired man.—Salisbury "Press-Spectator."

Having One's Skin Removed.

After describing some of the up-to-date methods employed by modern beauty doctors, the "Strand" says that all these operations appear pale and commonplace by the side of the heroism displayed two years ago by a celebrated actress, to whom truly belongs the martyr's crown. Driven to desperation by seeing her beauty compromised by a series of superficial alterations in her complexion, she decided to have the skin of her face completely changed! She found doctors who undertook the performance of this strange operation, which extended over seven weeks — seven weeks of uninterrupted suffering. All the skin of her face was chemically burned, then detached bit by bit. At the end of two months of suffering the old epidermis had entirely disappeared and been replaced by a skin as rosy, thin and tender as that of a new-born child! So disconcerting was the aspect of this baby-like complexion to a woman of thirty that the desperate actress found herself more ill-looking after the operation than she had thought herself to be before undergoing it, and had to seclude herself for a month to allow her new skin to age a little. At the end of four months, however, the result was perfect; the best friends of the heroic actress all declaring that she was "unrecognizable," so completely was she rejuvenated and transformed!

The Whitaker Wright Case

London, May 7—The Prime Minister, Mr. Balfour, in the House of Commons Monday discountenanced the suggestion that the attitude of the law officers of the Crown towards the prosecution of Whittaker Wright the company promoter under arrest in New York, on extradition proceedings, could be usefully discussed on the vote for their salaries. He expressed the opinion that the manner in which the Attorney-General has exercised his responsibilities should not be debated in the House while Wright's prosecution is pending.

OVER $1,000,000 ALREADY INVESTED.

Over one million dollars have been invested within a short radius surrounding on all sides the property of this company by Boston, New Haven and New York capitalists. All this has been invested quietly within the last two years, without any appeal to the public. Only one of these companies interested has put its stock on the market recently, and that at 60 cents on the dollar.

NOT A PROSPECT, BUT A WELL-DEVELOPED MINING PROPERTY. We have shown by actual mining that we have the

A rich fissure vein. This company having paid a large sum of money for these properties and also in the development of the same, now offer to the public 60,000 shares only of their stock, in order to make further reserves, so that when they start to deliver ore at the reduction works they can keep up the supply daily and by that means pay a dividend that does not fluctuate but that can be depended on by the stockholders.

STOCK MARKETS

WHY AN ADVANCING MARKET SEEMS ASSURED

New York, May 8.—Wall street invariably looks far ahead and in a majority on instances correctly discounts industrial and railroad developments many weeks before their culmination. While the true basis of stock values is the income they return to the investor, it happens times without end that stock sells far above or below their income value as compared with the conditions existing at the time. This is due to this street's instinct of properly forecasting probable earnings, etc. The market at the present time is working up to a higher level, and the probability of vastly increased earning power of our transportation systems through their economies in operation, heavy tonnage and larger dividend disbursements. Present indications point to an anticipation of such favorable conditions, and to a market broad and strong. Bullish tendencies are justified by a reference to the prosperous character of railroad properties generally, and it would seem opportune to refer briefly to a few of the roads that are making attractive and financial history. Missouri Pacific has during this past fiscal year shown phenomenal earning increase for the four months. April 30th the gross was $2,071,000 or 18 1-2 per cent. more than for the period a year ago. With a big wheat or corn crop this ratio can be maintained, and the stock will show for the fiscal year 12 per cent net. Norfolk and Western coal business shows that the road has been tested to its capacity. The increased ten cents per ton on soft coal rates will be reflected in the next monthly report. Surplus earnings for nine months equal 7 per cent. on the preferred stock and at least, 5 per cent. on the common. Erie common will show over 4 per cent. earned, while its income for the next three months will look especially favorable as compared with the strike period last year. Pennsylvania will now be an important in its earnings, as the road finds no further occasion for extraordinary expenses. Its terminal facilities are in perfect state, freight congestion which meant the movement of cars at any cost is a thing of the past, with the traffic situation eased by the availibility of motive power, and equipment is at the top notch, reducing operative cost to a minimum, and augmenting net earnings for the forth week in April are magnificent and the percentage of increase in some of the roads as compared with 1900 is worth noting; Canadian Pacific 173, C. & O. 55, G. W. 51, S. R. 55 Missouri Pacific 108, K. T. 95, Norfolk 85. The drift of the market must necessarily be upward under such influences, and prices are now shaping for a splendid rise.

A MAGNIFICENT INVESTMENT

THE GOLD TUNNEL COMPANY.

PRESCOTT, ARIZONA

The Company owns in SIX PARALLEL VEINS of GIGANTIC SIZE, one of the largest GOLD PROPOSITIONS in the country. Each of these six veins would make a mine by itself.

The Company, by purchase and consolidation, has succeeded in acquiring the entire length of these great GOLD BEARING ledges; covering an area six thousand feet in length and about two thousand feet wide. The Company owns this valuable property free of any incumbrance.

The ground included in this group of mines gives ample evidence of tremendous natural disturbances, and shows plainly on the surface the acid and mineral stains characteristic of a heavy mineralized gold lead of gigantic proportions.

Six Miles of Gold Bearing Veins

Through the length of four of the mining claims; forming a continuous line 6,000 feet long run THREE LEDGES so close together as to be economically worked from one opening; they aggregate from 85 to 200 feet in width.

The adjoining line of three mining claims shows a ledge 4,500 feet in length, varying in width from 7 to 200 feet, with the same character of ore.

Beginning at the south end of the "Eighty-Four" mining claim, is a fifth large ledge carrying good values in GOLD, and running in a northerly direction for a distance of fully forty-five hundred feet.

Two mining claims on the east side show GOLD BEARING CROPPINGS 40 to 50 feet wide through their entire length, a distance of three thousand feet.

All of the ledges are well mineralized, carrying at grass root values in gold running from about $2.00 to $6.00 per ton.

BRONCHITIS CURED

For fifteen years Mr. John Pearson of Melvern Square suffered from Bronchitis and throat irritation. Doctors failed to relieve but Catarrhozone cured quickly

This remarkable recovery of Mr. Pearson, who for years was principal of Melvern Square High School, is convincing evidence of the exceptional curative powers possessed by Catarrhozone.

"For fifteen years," writes Mr. Pearson, "I constantly suffered from Bronchitis and Throat Irritation. Until quite recently I was able to keep up my teaching, but my bronchial trouble became so annoying that I was forced to resign.

"For months I doctored with different physicians and was not benefited. My trouble grew more severe and extended to the lungs, and I feared I would end in decline.

"Providentially I was advised to use Catarrhozone, and I believe it really saved my life. Its immediate effect was to relieve the throat trouble sufficiently to give me perfect ease in speaking. Within one short week all symptoms of bronchitis had disappeared. I can fervently recommend Catarrhozone. I know it has no equal as a sure and speedy cure for throat trouble and bronchitis."

Every air cell and air passage, all parts of the breathing organs are reached and benefited by the antiseptic vapor of Catarrhozone. It soothes and heals the inflamed mucous surfaces, stops the cough, clears the nose and throat, and drives every symptom of bronchitis right out of the system.

To purify the blood of all poisons, and to build up the system, Ferrozone Tablets, which are included in every Catarrhozone outfit, are very highly recommended. This local and constitutional treatment in Bronchitis, Catarrh, and Consumption cannot be equalled.

Catarrhozone is endorsed by physicians and ministers and thousands it has cured. Two months' treatment costs $1. Small size, 25 cts. Sold by all Druggists, or N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

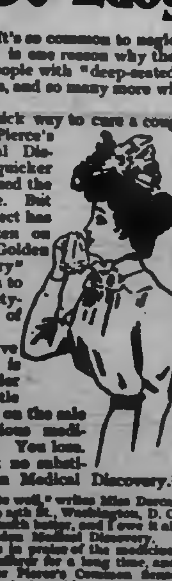
It's So Easy

To take cold. It's so common to neglect the cold. That is one reason why there are so many people with "deep-seated," stubborn coughs, and so many more with "lung trouble."



The short, quick way to cure a cough is to use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. The quicker this remedy is used the quicker the cure. But even when neglect has let disease fasten on the lungs, "Golden Medical Discovery" may be relied on to cure in ninety-eight cases out of every hundred.

The only motive for substitution is to permit the dealer to make the little extra profit paid on the sale of less meritorious medicines. He gains. You lose. Therefore accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery."

"I am feeling quite well," writes Miss Dorcas A. Lewis, of No. [illegible] St., Washington, D. C. "My cough is very much better, and I owe it all to Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I cannot say too much in praise of the medicine. I had been quite a sufferer for a long time, and after reading Doctor Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser thought I would try his 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I commenced taking it in May, [illegible]. Had not been feeling well for a long time. Took one teaspoonful of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and slept nearly all night without coughing, so I continued taking it. I am in great sympathy with everybody who suffers with a cough. I had been a sufferer for more than two years. I tried lots of different medicines and different doctors, but did not find much better. I coughed until I commenced spitting blood, but now I feel much stronger and am entirely well. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the best medicine I have ever taken. My home is in Williamsburg, Virginia."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are a ladies' laxative. No other medicine equals them for gentleness and thoroughness.

MRS. LULU LARMER.

Mrs. Lulu Larmer, Stoughton, Wis., says:

"For two years I suffered with nervous trouble and stomach disorders until it seemed that there was nothing to me but a bundle of nerves.

"I was very irritable, could not sleep, rest or compose myself, and was certainly unfit to take care of a household.

"I took nerve tonics and pills without benefit. When I began taking Peruna I grew steadily better, my nerves grew stronger, my rest was no longer fitful, and to-day I consider myself in perfect health and strength.

"My recovery was slow but sure, but I persevered and was rewarded by perfect health."—Mrs. Lulu Larmer.

Mrs. Anna B. Fleharty, recent Superintendent of the W. C. T. U. headquarters, at Galesburg, Ill., was for ten years one of the leading women there. Her husband, when living, was first President of the Nebraska Wesleyan University at Lincoln, Neb.

In a letter written from 401 Sixty-seventh street, W., Chicago, Ill., she says:

"I would not be without Peruna for ten times its cost."—Mrs. Anna B. Fleharty.

How Mr. Speers Handled the Doukhobor Pilgrims

Big Foreigners Subsided at His Bidding and Even Fervid Appeals of Women Failed to Stir Them

Douks would Not Ride Behind Horses

Regina, May 6—The story of the breaking up of this year's Doukhobor pilgrimage in search of Christ at the elbow of the North Saskatchewan could be told in a paragraph.

C. W. Speers, the Dominion Government Immigration Agent, who handled last year's great pilgrimage, simply rode into the villages, cut out the leaders, headed them off for Saskatoon, and ordered the pilgrims back to their villages. They knew Speers, and stepped out.

There is more behind the incident than that though—something that one not on the spot cannot appreciate.

These Doukhobors are not fanatics as the term is applied to the tempestuous Moslems, who rush blindly upon Christian swords and die willingly, and gladly, so long as they make strike a blow for the faith. The Doukhobor is not so easily inflamed as the Moslem. He is phlegmatic and fixed in purpose. Hundreds of years of Russian prosecution have made him resigned and reticent, but not sullen. He is a deep thinker, and in religious argument cannot be shaken. It takes management to hew out good Canadians from these big broad fellows, but it can be done as long as Speers, or men of his stamp are given a free hand to handle those who would carry the firebrand of discontent into peaceable, thrifty villages.

BEARDED THE LEADER.

Take Sunday's work. The sun was already on the decline when Speers, a single Government official, and a little cavalcade of newspaper men and wagon drivers, nine men in all, drove into the Doukhobor village at Lovell's Ferry, at the Elbow. The little hamlet nestled, as do all Doukhobor settlements, down in a little valley. Up the trim main street of the village a line of gorgeous color waved in the sunlight, and a chorus of women's voices came down the wind. A score of young women, clad in weird combinations of red, blue, purple, pink and green were chanting a Gregorian anthem, and there was no sign of religious ferment. Half down the street, Speers pulled up, and entered a log house. Inside crowded a hundred men and women. Silently they made way for the Government man. He gazed about an instant. Speers is a big man, brawny and broad shouldered, but a dozen men in the crowd towered above him. They folded their hands, and not a word was spoken. Over in a corner, isolated, stood three curly bearded men, two of mid[illegible] the winter of life in beard and hair.

"You gave me trouble last year," said Speers sharply, "What are you doing here now? You belong to Yorkton."

The three apostles of the religion of the new Eden folded their hands in their loose sleeved jackets, and gazed across the room.

Speers jammed his hands into his pockets, and slowly surveyed the gathering. He pointed at a black-bearded, furtive-eyed man. The man stepped forward.

"So, you are causing trouble again, eh?"

The black fellow nodded and hung his head.

An interpreter was secured.

"Why are these men here?" asked Speers, quietly.

"To teach people no lie, no steal, no drink whisky, no smoke, be good, love brother." Stumblingly the interpreter tried to explain the doctrine of brotherly love.

"They want these people to go without clothes? naked?" asked Mr. Speers.

"Yes."

"They'll freeze and die."

"Go some hot country."

"Well, you cannot go without clothes here," said Mr. Speers. "Are you going to let your horses and cattle go?"

"Yes."

"And you want these good people here to follow you and leave their comfortable homes?"

"Yes," nodded the bearded trio.

It had been a quiet little conclave. Suddenly Speers eyes flashed, and he straightened up.

"You'll get home out of this, now and there will be no march," he exclaimed, in a tone which betrayed unfaltering determination.

"No! no! Go three more villages," said the disciples, holding up three fingers. "Then go home."

"No, you'll not! You'll go home right now. You are up against it now, and you have got to drill out for Yorktown."

Speers' finger pointed to the three disciples. He turned to the sullen black fellow.

"You will go across the river."

His tone silenced all. The disciples silently gathered up their goods and moved out.

A WOMAN TAKES A HAND.

A woman mounted a bench and spoke excitedly. Here was a new contingency—a disciple in gaudy shawl and skirt, quilted silk jacket, and binder twine shoes.

"Canada bad Russia," she said. "Me come Canada to Russia, say get freedom. My man's no take guns and short man and big boss Czar send to Siberia." Her voice sank to a plaintive tone. "They die, and I come here my babies for freedom. None. None. I want walk and talk 'bout Jesus and tell people be good. Canada not let me. Same Russia."

The woman's wild talk, delivered as it was without gestures but with [illegible] force, roused the crowd. A dozen women chattered, and a hum arose from the men.

Speers left her talking, and in ten minutes the three Yorkton apostles plodded out upon the Saskatoon trail behind a wagon. Ride they would not. They consider it a sacrilege to work animals.

The woman explained: "Horse, he my brudder and sister." She said: "Me hitch you and this man up, and then me sit in wagon, and ride." She pointed to a couple of the Government men.

"I have to work hard, why should not the horses work, too?" argued the Government man.

"No, no, horses have no work."

Over the hill, the villagers followed the Yorkton men. They would have gone further out upon the trail but Speers held up his hand, and they stopped as obediently as London cabbies to a bluecoat's finger. The trouble at the Ferry had been nipped in the bud.

ANOTHER CROWD OF THEM.

Over the river in Tambofka, where the sixty odd pilgrims gathered up from the northern villages were stationed, the same outward peacefulness prevailed, but under cover was seething discontent. Ivan and Luke Perapolkin, father and nephew lead the malcontents, Ivan sat and folded his hands, while Luke, a smug-faced youth of 22 years, argued in a sullen way.

"What will you eat, if you don't put in your crops?" asked Speers.

"God give us bread. We eat grass." Luke acknowledged proudly that eight converts had that morning attended service devoid of clothing

"Why?"

"Adam and Eve they wear nothing."

"But it's too cold here."

"We go and find Christ where it warm."

"Well, you'll go home in the morning."

"No, no."

"You'll go, now."

The youth spoke sharply to the crowd and it broke up. Before we could get out of the building forty-three of these fanatics, men, women and children, from 10 years to 60, rushed in and commenced service. All the clothing in the chanting, praying congregation could have been carried in a thimble. The strength of the Perapolkin faction almost took Speers off his feet. He had not expected this. The hold of this pair upon the people, and their obedience, dumfounded him. Something must be done. The other Doukhobors were excluded. They betrayed no curiosity concerning these modern Eves and Adams, and those participating went about the service solemnly and in a manner which showed plainly that modesty is foreign to the Doukhobor nature. They paid not the slightest attention to each other or the foreigners. The chanting proceeded, and the prayers were stirring. Ivan and John glanced about triumphantly. Their hold was too strong to be broken. They would go on marching forth across the prairies.

"Stop!" said Speers. "Put on your clothes!" There was authority in his tone. The service ceased, and without a word the worshippers resumed their clothing. The hold of the Perapolkins was broken, and they disappeared in sullen silence.

"You'll go home in the morning," said the government man, and he, too, disappeared in the darkness. It was midnight, and thirty miles of rough prairie separated him from Saskatoon, but he was there at daybreak. The spirit pilgrimage was brokenup and he was wrestling again with the Barr Colony problem.

Of 1,600 Doukhobors, only 80 were affected by the lurid preaching of these five men. The rest are quiet, and with the agitators out of the way, no trouble is contemplated. The little detachment which "hit the trail" out from Tambofka Monday was a gum shoe or a binder twine sandal brigade. None of the Doukhobors will eat meat, but the pilgrims alone refuse to wear leather shoes. Why they eschew leather and unwoolen stockings is an inconsistency they refuse to explain.

Australia's Labour Troubles.

Melbourne, May 9. — The Government of Victoria announces that unless the Railway Men's Union severs its connection with the 'Traders' Hall, which is the central organization of all the trades unions, before May 12, the leaders will be dismissed without further notice. The Government ultimatum is a challenge to the labor party, which threatens to entail one of the most important labor wars Australia has known. The situation briefly stated is this: The various railway men's unions of Victoria, owing to a reduction in wages, lately affiliated themselves with the Traders' Hall, thereby rendering themselves liable to be called out in support of any outside strike, and thus placing all the railway communications of the colony at the mercy of any trade disputes.

The Government, which owns the railways, is willing to allow the organization of the men so long as they are not affiliated with the Traders' Hall, and with this condition attached offered to discuss the general grievances of the railway employees. Several conferences have failed of result, and hence the ultimatum.

IS THERE A LIVE VOLCANO IN THE KOOTENAY DISTRICT?

Strange Phenomena Following the Recent Land Slide into Arrowhead Lake

Revelstoke, B.C., May 9.—The Kootenay Mail says: "Many theories are rife as to the cause of the big slide at Arrowhead. Perhaps the most acceptable is that of ice expansion. According to this recent thaws had filled every crevice with water, and, Friday being a very [illegible], and freezing more and more all night and until late Saturday morning, the many bodies of water freezing expanded and forced the face of the mountain toward the water until at last it overbalanced and fell into the lake. If this be true the bodies of ice must have been many and the expansion very great.

"Another phase that has exercised the minds of the Arrowhead people is: Why was it that immediately after the mountain fell into the lake, the water receded from the shore at Arrowhead. Should it not rather have risen? One seemingly satisfactory explanation is this: The ace of the mountain fell sideways into the water and away from Arrowhead, consequently the water would gather around the place of commotion, and for the time being leave the vicinity of Arrowhead. This may have caused the receding wave.

"The freight shed at the deep water landing near Beaton was almost overwhelmed, and a quantity of freight was washed away.

"Joseph Mailloux, who has charge of the freight shed at Beaton, declares, as do other credible witnesses, that heavy volumes of smoke were visible around the mountain, from which a deep rumbling or roaring was plainly audible. The distance would be about four miles.

"John Copper, of Rossland, says: 'Just below the Lake View Hotel, where I was staying, the steamer Revelstoke was lying in her winter dock, with the ice around her perfectly solid. The waves, which were fully a dozen feet high, caught her and the ice and hurled them upon the Cottonwood Island shore. The returning wave dragged them back again, only to be sucked into deep water as the wave receded. So it went on until she was severely damaged.

"'Every one was watching the peak. We noticed what we considered smoke or steam rising. It then became apparent that a portion of the mountain had fallen into the lake. As the Archer had not arrived I grew anxious, fearing that she might have been involved in the convulsion, and determined to investigate the facts for myself.

"'Accompanied by the Rev. Mr. McCall and his son, I set out along the north shore of the arm toward the peak. On every hand we could see the effects of the waves. At one point about sixty feet in shore, and full twenty feet above the normal level of the lake, we found blocks and slabs of ice, tons in weight, dashed up high and dry among the scrub and timber. As we advanced, the smoke or steam rising from the mountain kept increasing in volume. We could hear loud rumbling, as of falling rocks.

"'We reached a point where we could see the place the slide or avalanche had come down and plunged into the lake. Vast quantities of rocks, earth and timber lay piled on the narrow foreshore.

"'While looking at the sight we were nearly paralyzed with horror at an outbreak of fearful groaning or bellowing which appeared to come from a point about a thousand feet up the side of the precipice. I could not hear my companions' voices.

"'I noticed no sign of eruption except the smoke which may have concealed many things from us. The smoke rose to an immense height above the mountain and floated away to the southeast. I know how dust, pulverized earth and snow will hang suspended in the air for a little time after a rockfall of heavy blasting. The smoke, or steam and smoke mixed, which we saw was not of that kind. It was ejected or blown upward in immense billows accompanied by the roaring.

"I cannot be persuaded to believe the convulsion was caused, by the falling of part of the mountain owing to the freezing and expansion of large bodies of water."

A DOUBLE HANGING

Two Negro Murders have Paid the Penalty of their Crimes

St. Louis, Mo., May 11.—Henry Wilson, and Sampson Gray, negroes, were hanged in the gaolyard, to-day, for murder. This is the first double hanging here since 1888. It was the first private execution in the history of St. Louis, a few officials and newspaper men being the only persons present.

Gray killed another negro for money and Wilson was convicted for the murder of Thomas Mooney, a levee saloon keeper, whom he attempted to hold up.

GREAT BRITAIN WILL NOT CHECK RUSSIA--ADVANCE ON CHINA

Joint Action Can Alone Preserve the Open Door

Can Only be Checked by International Agreement

No Carnegieism for British, Duke of Devonshire Voices Public Opinion

London, May 1.—To-day's Pekin despatches indicate that China is giving way before the insistent Russian pressure. The Times' correspondent says: "The weakness of the Chinese Foreign Office is increasing. It excites pity that that country should be dependent at such a crisis for its retention of semblance of sovereignty in Manchuria upon a decrepit prince and these Ministers."

Having put her foot down in the matter of the Persian Gulf, where she can see some limit of responsibilities, England is less likely than ever to attempt alone to stem what the recent history of Northern China seems to indicate is the inevitable Russian march southwards.

There is only one thing to preserve the open door there, namely, decisive and immediate action conjointly, or, at least on parallel lines between England, America, and Japan, directed solely to secure equal trading opportunities in all China for all nations. England will not, and cannot, undertake this alone. She has too heavy committments elsewhere, but the reception given to New York assertions that Mr. Hay is communicating with the President with the view of Anglo-Japanese-American common action, indicates that English public opinion would welcome that possible escape from a humiliating acceptance of the Russian game of battledore and shuttlecock between St. Petersburg and Pekin. It is taken for granted that M. Plancon will be moved on from Pekin, but that is only a move a pawn on the chessboard.

London, May 9—To-day's alarming news of the railway strike in Australia; the embarrassing conditions of the labor struggle in Montreal, in which British interests are closely concerned, and the persistence of Lord Penrhyn's quarrel with his Welsh quarrymen, prepare Englishmen to give sympathetic hearing to Mr. Carnegie's panacea of profit-sharing as elaborated at the Iron and Steel Institute.

The Duke of Devonshire, who combines the directorate of a great iron steel company with his Ministership, speaking last night, mildly blessed Mr. Carnegie's ideas, but became slyly critical of Carnegism when speaking, not as a Minister, but as a director. he said: "Perhaps I might wish Parliament would give us that protection which in former days Mr. Carnegie largely enjoyed from his Legislature, but I know that if I wished for it I should not get it. The disappointment is, in some degree mitigated by the knowledge that, if our industries were protected at the expense of other people, those other people would demand, and [illegible] protection for their interests at our expense. Therefore, I shall be quite satisfied, if Parliament insists, as it will do, that the Government shall do all in its power to secure access to those markets of the world which are still open, and if possible to secure access to fresh markets."

Proposed Amendment to Criminal Code.

Ottawa, May 11.—The following is the proposed amendment the the Criminal Code, dealing with strikes:

"Everyone is guilty of an indictable offence and liable to two years imprisonment who, being a person not a British subject whether residing in or out of Canada, does in Canada incite, urge or induce workingmen, by any act or means whatsoever, to quit any employment in which they may be engaged, or to enter upon any strike with the object of enforcing additional wages or terms of employment from their employers."

IRISH INDUSTRY

A Movement on Foot to Protect and Develop It

Cork, May 11.—There are large possibilities in the movement launched by the Chamber of Commerce here to-day for the promotion and protection of Irish industries, which has become a matter of necessity on account of the curtailment of emigration. The work for the time being will be confined to the city and county of Cork, but when these have been thoroughly covered, it will be extended to the whole of Ireland.

It is believed by committee in charge that former undertakings of this character attempted too much. In the beginning, therefore, enquiries will be made into the industrial and agricultural situation, and these will be followed by efforts to promote the development of those branches of native activity.

The patronage of home industry will be increasing preached and the labeling as "Irish" of imported products will be exposed.

Dr. Brigland's Death

Toronto, May 9—Dr. Bridgland's death leaves Muskoka unrepresented in the local Legislature, and it is not likely the Government will have an election there for some months. Mr. Bridgland carried it for the Liberals in 1898 largely on personal grounds, as before that the constituency had been strongly Conservative.

JAPAN Is PREPARED

London, May 11.—Little doubt exists in the minds of British politicians that Russia has determined to show its hand in Manchuria more clearly than heretofore. The outcry against its recent proposal to annex that province, followed by the proclamation on the part of the British of a kind of Monroe Doctrine on the Persian Gulf, has undoubtedly convinced the Muscovite Government that the time for a bold stroke has come.

That Russia is reported as making extensive preparations for war corroborates news to that effect published by the Star in these despatches for some time past. Britain's [illegible] Russian expansion in the near east, middle east and far east has caused intense irritation in St. Petersburg.

THE EASTERN WAR CLOUD GROWS MORE OMINOUS

War Said to be Now Certain Between Britain and Russia

JAPAN WILL FIGHT

In Britain's Behalf if War Should Come

The language of the Marquis of Lansdowne, the Foreign Secretary, in the House of Lords on Tuesday, last, regarding the situation in the Persia Gulf, is as follows:

"I say without hesitation," said he, "that we should regard the establishment of a naval base or a fortified port in the Persian Gulf by any other power, as a very grave menace to British interests, and we should certainly resist it with all the means at our disposal."

Lord Lansdowne preceded this explicit enunciation of British policy by a review of the situation there, as it effects British interests, contending that so far as the navigation of the Persian Gulf is concerned, Great Britain holds a position different to that of the other powers, both because it was owing to British enterprise and expenditure of life and money that penditure of life and money that the gulf is now open to the commerce of the world, and because the protection of the sea route to India necessitates British predominance in the gulf.

London, May 11—The news from Pekin that Russia has reoccupied New Chwang, in the Persian Gulf, is regarded by many as a practical declaration of war against Britain. The report, however, lacks official confirmation, and further news is watched with intense interest.

The Cabinet had a hurry session yesterday, showing that something unusual was on.

Pekin, May 11 — Something approaching consternation was felt throughout Chinese Imperial circles, and also amongst the Diplomatic colony here, by the news that Russia has reoccupied New Chwang with a large force and garrisoned the forts at the mouth of the Lio River.

On all hands the news is interpreted as the acceptance of the challenge contained in Lord Lansdowne's recent declaration to the effect that Great Britain intends to prevent any power from acquiring a fortified position on the Persian Gulf.

The Imperial Foreign Office is now convinced that Russia has decided to discard all equivocation respecting Manchuria, and to hold by force the outlet to the Gulf of Pechil and the Yellow Sea.

This news of Russian activity which comes from a most trustworthy source at New Chwang, adds that on their return to New Chwang the Russian troops brought with them several large guns.

It is also stated that the announcement that the Russians have reoccupied New Chwang must not be understood as implying that they ever fully evacuated the place. The news is taken here to mean that the town has been reoccupied by the force the withdrawal of which was announced in April, when the Russians said that all the troops, except the men necessary for the police guard, had been removed.

Tokio, May 11—Russian assurances to the effect that that country intended to carry out the second period of the evacuation of Manchuria, while accepted here in the course of regular diplomatic correspondence, have by no means deceived the advisers of the Mikado. The Cabinet has all along distrusted Russian promises, and stands ready to checkmate the Muscovite move at New Chwang by force if necessary.

By this time, the Russian troops, according to the agreement, should have been withdrawn from the northeastern part of Mukden and also from Kirin, and the Chinese territory along the Yalu and Tiemen River territory should have been restored to China.

There is not only no indication that Russia has attempted to do this, but the contradictory orders and moving of troops apparently has been intended to confuse and mislead outside powers, until Russia has brought off this new coup.

The City of London's Unemployed

THE professional tramp is very much in evidence in England. Recently they have been taking advantage of the reported distress of British unemployed by parading the streets and soliciting charity. The London Daily News says that it is difficult to determine whether the distress of the unemployed is so great as appearances would lead one to believe, when one reflects one difficulty employers of labour find in getting hands. A northern contractor wanted a large number of labourers, and posted a notice to that effect, but very few troubled even to enquire what the nature of the work and the wages were. At the same time there were processions of the unemployed, who looked misery personified, and money-boxes were rattled before the very noses of the public, who contributed sufficiently freely, apparently, to cause the "processers" to prefer continuing to "process" rather than accept the work offered by the contractor we were telling about. It is freely stated now that the paraders were chiefly tramps, and a London newspaper tells of the experience of a large employer of laundry labour, who, being at his wits' end for workers, encountered a procession walking down Regent Street under a banner inscribed "Unemployed Laundry Hands." To him the deceit was manifest, but the thoughtless wayfarer was contributing generously. A fine harvest of coppers has been reaped by men who never did an honest day's work in their lives, and never mean to, while much needed help has been diverted from those who are too proud to parade their suffering.

One Common Cause of Headache

Perhaps the most general cause of headache, and pain across the eyes is nasal catarrh. The simplest cure is to inhale the medicated vapor of Catarrhozone, which traverses every air cell and air passage of the throat lungs and nose. It kills myriads of germs at every breath, clears away mucous discharges, preserves and heals the membrane. Catarrhozone is just a splendid remedy for headache, and its action in certain and unfailing in diseases of the Throat, and Lungs, Deafness, Bronchitis, Asthma, and Catarrh. A trial will convince the most sceptical that Catarrhozone is all right. Large size, $1.00; size 25, Druggists, or Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

THE GRAIN SITUATION IS NOW BECOMING ALARMING

A Very Grave Condition of Affairs Now Exists at Montreal on Account of the Strike

Montreal, May 11.—The grain situation is becoming alarming.

There will be at the beginning of next week millions of bushels in port, and no outlet—no way of getting it on board of the ships or sending it to the other side.

There is more coming down all the time.

One firm has five hundred thousand bushels, which it has had in the port from Coteau, since the beginning of the week, and its barges have been lying idle alongside the various ocean going ships in the harbor.

Mr. Alex. McFee, ex-President of the Board of Trade, looks upon the situation with anxiety, and says that unless some outlet is found shortly for the grain now in port, the matter of what to do with the large quantities now on the way assumes a serious aspect.

INTERPRETATION OF CANADA'S NEW MOVE

German Tax May Have Been Imposed to Hasten Inter-Imperial Trade

THE BRITISH FISCAL POLICY

Canada Has Shown Her Indedendence in the Move, Which Comes None Too Soon

London, May 10.—A correspondent in the Morning Post ridicules the suggestion that Canada's action respecting German goods was initiated by Downing street, in order to increase the preferential treatment accorded by Canada to England.

The correspondent says: "The British Government is powerless to give Canada what it wants, without change in the British fiscal policy. The Ministers at home will not be inclined to look with amiable feelings on the penalizing of German goods by Canada, if it forces on the Cabinet the question of preferential trade within the Empire. Canada's action may cause Germany to consider her treaty arrangements with this country."

The correspondent also declares that Canada is deliberately setting herself out to force England into a preferential policy by penalizing German goods in the hope of compelling Germany to take the bull by the horns and inform England that Germany must reconsider her commercial contracts with the Motherland.

"Canada," says the correspondent, has shown her independence of the mother country, who will have, in future to remember that Canada holds the whip hand."

With Mr. Ritchie's budget, any hope of a Canadian preference in the British wheat markets have disappeared. If then preferential trade within the Empire is not to remain a dream, Canada has moved none too soon.

TO TRAIN RECRUITS FOR KING'S NAVY

Admirality to Establish Reserve Station at Halifax

FOR BRITISH BLUE JACKETS

Twenty Thousand Canadians to Compose the Empire's Reserve Force

Halifax, N.S., May 9.—Halifax is going to have a naval reserve depot. The admiralty has so decided. It will not be long before steps, towards the establishment of the same will be taken. A Star correspondent interviewed a naval official in connection with the matter. He stated that there are naval reserve depots in every British colony (except Canada, and it has been decided to establish one in Canada. Halifax has been selected as the most suitable place.

"We want 15,000 or 20,000 fishermen or merchant seamen to take the necessary course of training," said the official. "We would like to have a reserve naval force of not less than 20,000 Canadians.

Applications will be accepted at the Halifax dockyard from any desiring to join reserveforce. They will be sent to St. John's, Newfoundland, to take six months' course on the training corvette Calypso, and after they have completed the course they will be granted a certificate and their expenses paid for passage, etc., to Halifax, and will be allowed a certain sum annually. The idea is to establish recruiting branches in every seaport in the Dominion of Canada, and when it is seen that the desired interest is being manifested, the main depot will be established here. In the meantime all wishing to become reservists will be received and sent to the Calypso.

MUNICIPAL TAXATION

The Assessment Bill now before the Legislature is to be discussed in committee, and may not be made law, during the present session. It provides for the valuation of land and buildings separately, after a trial of which system for a few years, the way will be paved for the abolition or substantial reduction of the taxation of improvements, thus putting an end to land speculation, and greatly encouraging the erection of good buildings. The Bill makes a half-hearted attempt to abolish the taxes on personal property and incomes, substituting a cumbersome rental tax, in addition to the property tax. It would be far better to make one bite of the cherry. The citizen who receives and spends a large income within a municipality does good and not harm to the community. The more there are of such citizens, the better it will be fort he trade and industry of the place. Men with large incomes must live on land, not in the air, and they are apt to occupy valuable land, on which they will pay enough taxes without rating them for a special income tax. The manufacturers' machinery, which is wearing itself out in the production of goods, and the merchants' stock of goods which have already paid heavy taxes at the Custom House, should not have an additional tax imposed on them, for municipal revenue. These taxes are as a rule shifted on to the customers of goods, but they are uncertain and arbitrary, owing to the difficulty of valuation,—taxes on conscience and honesty, in fact. The aim of the Legislation should be to simplify taxation. Land and buildings lie out of doors and their value can be appraised with reasonable accuracy. An Assessment Act of a dozen lines, providing for the taxation of real estate, with optional exemption of the whole or a part of the value of buildings, would be more useful than a long Bill full of fancy provisions.

THE POPE'S POSITION

Prof. Goldwin Smith in the Weekly Sun, says that since the abolition of the Pope's temporal dominion and the disestablishment of the Church in Italy, the Papacy has entered upon a curious phase of its existence. It has become a purely ecclesiastical empire, with "the prisoner of the Vatican" at its head, and for its subjects the faithful Catholics of all lands, whose allegiance it commands apart from the States to which they belong, and from whose devotion it draws a large revenue of its own. It thus in a measure reproduces the old Hildebrandic ideas of a priestly autocracy independent of all the States of the world, and stretching out its spiritual sceptre over them all. That these are the days of science, of free enquiry and freedom of the press, of political and social progress. The allegiance of intelligence the Papacy has everywhere lost. Meantime the relations of this ecclesiastical empire with the secular Governments, especially with ultra-liberal Governments like that of France, are ticklish, as the expulsion of the monastic orders from France shows. Had Pio Nono, with his intense belief in his own divine authority, lived much longer, a collision could hardly have been averted. But Leo XIII. is an Italian statesman, and he has managed on the whole pretty well to keep the peace with the lay power.

THE DANGER OF THE DUST

Mr. C. D. Zimmerman writes an interesting letter to the Scientific American upon the question, "Dust—Is it dangerous?" According to Mr. Zimmerman, there is much danger in dust, for he points out that "nearly one-fourth of all deaths are from consumption, principally distributed by dust," and that the germs of many other diseases are often disseminated by dust particles. Much of what passes for "dusting" and cleaning both in our houses and in our streets consists largely in stirring the dust up from places where it is comparatively harmless and utilising it to give body and flavor to the air we breathe. Dust mixed with water and lying on the roads in the form of mud is very objectionable, but it is not dangerous. When it dries and is stirred up by the street sweeper or the wind it is highly dangerous to health and life. There is nothing particularly new new in this to people who have taken the trouble to think upon the subject; but the best proof that most people do not trouble themselves to think upon the matter, is that the corporation is allowed to go on year after year playing with the dust and the death rate.

Argentine Cattle Strictly Barred on Account of Disease

London, May 9—Canadian shipping circles are greatly interested in today's news that an Argentine steamer has arrived at Cape Town from Buenos Ayres with the foot and mouth disease rampant on board. Some 2,000 sheep and 250 cattle are affected. As a consequence African ports are expected to be closed to Argentine stock. Also Argentine will likely be removed from the position of equality that country now enjoys with Canada, in the British ports. Any such prohibition will tend to increase Canada's cattle trade.

Sir James Watson

This eminent English physician is one of the greatest authorities on diseases of the respiratory organs

In a recent address Sir James Watson stated that the commonest of all disorders is Catarrh and that not one person in ten thousand passes the winter without an attack of some sort.

Sir James advises local treatment very strongly, and says it is all nonsense trying to treat Catarrhal diseases by stomach medicines, ointments, douches and snuffs.

Local treatment is applied most scientifically by Catarrhozone, which is inhaled into the nose, throat and lungs, and drives the disease completely out of the system.

Catarrhozone is a rational, common-sense treatment; it clears the air passages, makes breathing easy, and relieves at once. Physicians prescribe Catarrhozone with gratifying results, and pronounce it a specific for Catarrh in any part of the system.

Mr. Titus Cox, one of the most prominent citizens of Minden, Ont., says: "I want to recommend Catarrhozone. It is a nice, clean cure for Catarrh. Cured me perfectly, and is well deserving of a trial from everyone at all affected by Catarrh or throat trouble."

Mr. G. F. Fadden, of Royan, Que., writes: "In my opinion Catarrhozone is the only cure for Catarrh. I had the disease in its worst form, but only got relief from Catarrhozone. It cured me quickly and permanently, and I have no fear of the Catarrh ever returning."

The foregoing brief extracts, like thousands of others that the proprietors of Catarrhozone have received, prove that the proper remedy to use is Catarrhozone. It is quite different from the ordinary Catarrh preparations, and is warranted to prove entirely satisfactory. If it fails your money will be refunded, so if not benefited you won't be out of pocket.

All druggists sell Catarrhozone. Complete outfit, hard rubber inhaler, liquid for recharging, etc., costs $1.00; trial size, 25 cents. By mail from N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston Ont.

Buried Gold

By FRED WHISHAW.

Author of "A Boyar of the Terrible," etc.

"Oh, he can wait," replied the potman within, in a tone which suggested a mouth unduly filled with food.

But it seemed that the knocker upstairs was hungry or thirsty—disinclined at any rate to wait longer, for he came tramping down the wooden stairs and appeared suddenly in the barroom.

The two strangers pushed back their chairs and sprang up, as with one accord. The man from upstairs turned at the sound. He saw them, and threw up his arms with a shriek.

"Why," said one of the strangers, "if it isn't Mr. Robinson himself! Well, now, this is a pleasant surprise!"

CHAPTER XI.

Dick Is In Deadly Danger.

Apparently the joy or, as the other gentleman expressed it, the pleasant surprise of seeing old friends, was too much for Dick Robinson's feelings, for instead of falling, figuratively, into their arms and exchanging happy greetings, as friends should, he tottered, turned half round as if to retreat up the stairs, stumbled heavily and would have fallen to the ground but for the timely assistance of Mr. Evans, who caught him.

"Hold up, my hearty!" cried the latter. "Why, what's the matter—ill, are yer?"

Robinson had fainted, however, and could give no explanation.

"What he's doin' down here I don't know," said the landlord, appearing from somewhere; "he's no right to be out of bed, and him in a high fever yesterday."

"Oh, that's it, is it?" said Evans. "Stayin' in the house, is he? Well, we're lucky to have found an old friend in trouble, for we shall be glad to help him through with it. D'you think he's well enough to be took away?"

"Oh, he's well enough if he can pay his bill," said the landlord. "We don't care to have sick folks in the house; they want too much attention for busy people."

"You're right, they do. Go and fetch a cab, mate, and we'll take him right home with us, poor chap. He'd do the same for us if we was in trouble."

Within five minutes the two strangers had placed their man within the cab and driven off with him. The address they gave the driver was the "Blue Dragon." Robinson was still unconscious.

"This is a bit of all right, if ever there was one—we're in luck for once, mate. Put his darned head against the side, or he'll break his blamed neck, wobbling it up and down that way. It's a good thing for us he's ill and been ill for a while; that can be proved in a minute. Anyone has a right to die without bein' asked questions when he's been as ill as that."

"Maybe he'll die without us," said the other man. "I don't want to hang for the silly fool; we can give him a day or two, anyhow."

"That depends," said Evans. "No risks either way, if we can help it."

Dick Robinson had not recovered consciousness by the time the inn was reached. He was carried in, Evans explaining that they had found a sick friend and would keep him and pay for him till he could get a berth in the hospital.

"Come from abroad, bad with fever—not catchin'," Evans explained.

Robinson recovered consciousness presently.

"Where am I?" he asked, making a feeble effort to sit up.

"You're all right—you're stayin' in the 'o-tel, at our expense," said Evans. "Bit of luck our findin' you, wasn't it, Mr. Robinson? They're wild with you over on the island, I can tell you, ain't they, mate?"

The gentleman addressed laughed loudly. "They can't get along without you there," he said, "and that's the truth!"

Now that Robinson was actually in the hands of his enemies he was surprised to find that he no longer felt that nerveless, paralyzing terror which had so unmanned him while he walked, as he had expressed it, "in the dark, with the devil about." On the contrary, he was conscious of a feeling of anger against these men so bitter that if he could have killed them both at a touch he would have done so. He also felt a strong determination to fight for his life, which, he knew well, was in the balance.

"P'r'aps you'd rather be there than here, now you've tried both," said Evans. "Would you like to come back with us?"

"Don't you fret," replied Robinson. "You haven't done with me yet."

"Don't you fret, neither," said Evans. "We shall have done with you quite as soon as you'll like. We want to get back to the island."

"Maybe you won't. What d' you think you're going to do with me? This ain't the island. You're in a Christian country. You can't do what you like 'ere."

"That's a matter that don't call for discussion," said Evans, and the conversation languished.

When, presently, Robinson rose in order to go and sit nearer the window, he was angrily told to resume his seat. When he suddenly made a rush for the same window a few minutes later, intending to throw it open and shout for help, both men threw themselves upon him and bore him down. One of them quickly produced a large handkerchief with which he gagged his mouth. The other held and presently bound his hands. Further developments of the situation were postponed by a timid knock at the door, and the boy Beadon looked in.

This sudden appearance was the result of Keith Adams' anxious consideration of the problem lately placed before him for solution.

Keith had decided, after long and profound cogitations, to undertake a somewhat dangerous enterprise. Remembering that young Beadon had promised his two stranger friends to inform them when Dick Robinson should appear in Sandown, it occurred to him that here was an opportunity of meeting the fellows face to face and perhaps of inducing or frightening them into returning to their island lest a worse thing should happen to them. Beadon should seek them at the address given and inform them that their man was at Sandown and might be seen any evening returning to his lodging in the outskirts of the town. This would fetch the two fellows down. He himself would then represent Robinson, and thus surprise the rascals red-handed—ready, at any rate, to commit a crime if the opportunity offered.

The terrible risk to himself of such a scheme scarcely occurred to Keith Adams. He thought little of such matters, having, perhaps, an overwhelming confidence in his own prowess and discretion.

Then the boy Beadon was duly coached in his part and despatched; and indeed he could scarcely have arrived on the spot at a more critical moment. Being a lad of some intelligence, he took in the situation at a glance, and with a howl of terror he turned and fled downstairs.

In the bar below stood a man or two.

CAPITAL STOCK, - - $1,000,000.00
PAR VALUE SHARES, - - $1.00

(Full Paid and Non-Assessable.

The property of this company consists of three full claims known as the "Fleur de lis," "Mayflower," and "Mistletoe" Group, embracing an area of sixty acres of highly mineralised ground, located in the famous Sumpter district, Baker county, Oregon, about 3½ miles from McEwen on the Sumpter Valley Railroad.

The best evidence we have to offer as to our "being in good company" is to mention a few of those who are our immediate neighbors, viz: the North Pole, Bonanza, Red Boy, Eureka Columbia, Golconda, Cracker, Oregon, Golden Wizard, all of which are in this same district, producing from $40,000.00 to $100,000.00 per month each.

From the preliminary amount of development work already done on our property and from the assays of ore which is entirely free milling, running $18.00 to $720.00 per ton, we are confident that with the installation of modern machinery we have a proposition worthy of the most searching enquiry by those seeking a high grade investment.

Our board of directors consists of men who have a practical knowledge of mining, well known and of high standing, who have invested every available dollar of their own to acquire this valuable property and put it on a dividend paying basis.

To accomplish this it has been decided to place a limited amount of the treasury stock on sale at 15c per share for development purposes only until such time as the condition of the mine will enable it to take care of itself, when the sale of stock will be withdrawn.

Our prospectus will give you all particulars. Let us send it to you. We shall also be pleased to answer all enquiries whether by mail or in person at our office.

THE

TWO-TEN OIL CO.

of Boulder, Colorado.

Capital Stock, 1,500,000 shares. In Treasury, 500,000 shares

TRANSFER OFFICE; BRISTOL, CONN.

This Company has a perpetual lease on 20 acres of proven oil land in SECTION NINE (9) of the Boulder district, and this section and the immediate vicinity have the best and largest number of producing wells in the entire district.

Our Well No. 1 came in in January and is now pumping and shipping Oil regularly to the Refinery.

The Directors have decided to put down well No. 2 at once, and they now offer a block of the Treasury stock for the next 30 days at

10 Cents per Share, after that price will be advanced.

It is a well known fact that a 15 barrel well will pay over 100 per cent. profit upon its cost.

This is no longer a speculation for we have proved that oil is on our ground, and we now have oil in paying quantities, with two wells pumping we can soon pay dividends, and every well we put down increases our earning capacity.

This is a business proposition, managed by business men.

STOCK MARKETS

AMALGAMATED COPPER SHAPING FOR A GOOD ADVANCE

New York, May 9.—At the present time the A. C. P. company is enjoying one of the most prosperous periods in its history. The market is becoming firmer. The Calumet and Heckla mine is holding its product at 12 1-2 cents per pound, and in common with all copper producers has the price under full control. The advance in the price of silver works to the great pecuniary advantage of the Amalgamated company, as its control of a majority of Anaconda stock means additional profits equal to $3 or $4 per share on this stock. At the present price of metal its controlled companies are making immense earnings. Boston and Montana showing profits of over four million dollars, Anaconda three million and other companies a million more. At the closest calculation copper is earning four dollars per share more than a year ago. It is confidently believed by those in a position to form an accurate opinion that the next quarterly dividend will be at a larger rate. The stock stands at present in a position to advance from 10 to 20 points, and is held to such a large degree by investors that important concessions are probable, and that the advance will be gradual, but certain. The buying of late is similar to that which moved the stock up to $75 per share and a higher point than that will be easily reached as the present purchases is by inside buyers. The stock is an excellent one to trade in as it moves independent of the general movement, and has movements up and down which is attractive to in and out trader. Bear operators have attempted to attack the stock, but their efforts have been futile and have really enough bull covering strengthened the position of the stock. The reduction of the dividend which depressed the stock from 130 to below 60, has spent its force and the investment class realize that the position and the condition of 1901 are the direct opposite of those existing to-day. The metal situation is now so extremely favorable, the public confidence is being more extending to copper securities, and we believe that a boom in the price of A. C. P. is in order.

Summary—The day's market was irregular, with no pronounced feature. Dullness set in and prices were inclined to sag, and upon the announcement of the bank statement receded from 1-4 to 1-2 point all round. As in previous days there was no advantage taken of the fractional decline to sell short. Timidity of the bear party, if such a party exists at the present time, argues well for market stability during the coming weeks. Dullness is usually accompanied with small recessions, and as they appear they should be promptly taken advantage of to procure standard stocks.

An Easy Victory Over Bulgaria Would Increase Her Prestige

London, May 9—The Times' Vienna correspondent says there would be an obvious advantage to Turkey in a war with Bulgaria, which by giving her facile victory would enhance her military prestige, and which would dispose of the obnoxious reform scheme. Turkey's German friends might also gain a prolonged lease of the Ottoman Empire, and would escape the effect of disquieting schemes for veiled Macedonian partition which, it is understood, are brewing on the banks of the Neva.

es Headache, Abdom-al, Pains, Piles and in Severe Cases Insanity and Apoplexy

It is a common mistake to conclude that Constipation is not a dangerous condition. Although at first it is only accompanied by slight inconvenience and pain, yet if not corrected, it will inevitably lead to very dire results. Great care should be used in selecting a remedy for constipation because if a violent purgative is employed, it is sure to set up pain, irritation and congestion, and result finally in piles. The experience of those who have tested all the cures for constipation, seems to prove that Ferrozone is the most agreeable and satisfactory treatment. It makes the bowels so well ordered that natural and unassisted action is established. Nothing can equal the immediate sense of comfort it produces, and pains in the head and stomach, and in the intestines, disappear almost at once.

Ferrozone is very mild and certain in its action, and never causes inconvenience or distress. Ferrozone can be taken early as long as required and in no way interferes with business or pleasure, and nothing may be feared from its use, however prolonged it may be.

For Constipation, Piles and Sick Headache, Ferrozone stands unrivalled. The driver of the City Express Company, who suffered from piles, says: — "Constant sitting on the wagon seat, produced a rectal irritation, which combined with constipated condition of the bowels, brought on a severe attack of piles. I used without benefit, different ointments, and other remedies; but got quick relief and most satisfactory results from Ferrozone. I can recommend Ferrozone to all who suffer from piles.

Ferrozone always cures, and can be purchased at any reliable drug store for 50cts. a box or three boxes for $1.25. Sent to your address by mail if price is forwarded to N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

Captured a Porcupine

Saturday morning Master Jack Eastwood, eldest son of Mr. V. Eastwood, discovered a full fledged porcupine on Aylmer street near his home. He chased the little animal first into a neighbor's house, and from there up a tree. A man and a few dozen small boys soon knocked the "feathered fowl" down and captured him, much to the joy and delight of the juveniles. They were all agreeably surprised to find that a porcupine does not "shoot his quills," as is usually understood. It is the intention of the boys to take Mr. Porcupine to the woods and give him his liberty.

ANNIVERSARY SERVICES

St. Paul's and St. Andrew's Churches Hold Special Services

Anniversary services in connection with the two Presbyterian churches of the town were held yesterday. In St. Paul's church, Rev. W. G. Wallace, B.A., B.D., of Bloor Street Presbyterian church, Toronto, occupied the pulpit, preaching eloquent and impressive sermons both morning and evening. Special music was also a feature of the services.

In St. Andrew's church, Rev. D. McTavish, M.A., D.Sc., of Central Church Toronto, preached both morning and evening. The sermons were masterly and impressing. There was also music of a very high order provided.

The collections, which were for the liquidation of the debt of the churches, were large.

Still After the Canal

We see by the Guide that Port Hope is still after the canal outlet, as the following from that paper shows: The gentlemen who went over the proposed route of the canal with Mr. MacLeod, report that good progress was made yesterday. The outlet to Rice Lake by Kidd's Corners seems to be the only practicable one, and from the swamp south of Kidd's, the engineer, who by the way appears determined to know every foot of the country, is trying now to find a possible cutting through the hill west of Whitehead, and if successful will shorten the canal about 2 1-2 miles and will get a course almost in a direct line to Port Hope. Messrs. Mulholland, Long, J. A. Brown and Purser are looking over the ground with the engineer today, who expects to be here for two or three days longer doing this location work before any regular surveying is commenced.

POOR DOMINIE

Between the Devil and the Deep Sea

A clergyman of Gresham, Neb., who drank coffee for many years suffered from chronic insomnia and from terrific headaches when he quit coffee. He says: "I have been a very heavy user of coffee for so long and have seen its effects so clearly that there is now no doubt in my mind concerning its injurious effects upon the nervous system.

"While a coffee user I was unable to sleep for hours after retiring at night and on the other hand terrific headaches resulted if the regular hour for drinking coffee passed and I did not get it so I was in a miserable position.

"But I found a firm friend in Postum Cereal Coffee and from the very time that I adopted Postum all these evil effects banished. I now enjoy sound sleep and improved appetite and a decidedly clearer complexion and I am convinced that better health and a longer life would be the result of its general use. I have a friend who has been a user of Postum for several years and the story of her recovery from neuralgia of the stomach simply by using Postum in place of coffee seems almost too wonderful to be true. Many times she was near Death's door, and the doctors had frequently given her case up as hopeless but she was entirely healed by leaving off coffee and using Postum. It is a pleasure to say these good things about Postum." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

DROWNED IN THE OTONABEE

Young Lad of Ten Years Meets a Watery Grave

On Saturday afternoon a 10 year old son of Mrs. Lennox, a widow, who keeps the boarding house for the men who are engaged in building the power house at No. 3 dam for the Lakefield Cement Company, lost his life by drowning. The boy left home in the afternoon, with a net, to catch suckers, and not returning at tea time, his mother and friends became alarmed, and a search was made. Yesterday the body had not been recovered.

Mrs. Lennox formerly resided in Lakefield. Much sympathy is felt for her.

Interesting Items.

The Westminster "Gazette" states that a company with a capital of a million dollars is being formed to turn out whiskey and wine in the form of compressed tablets.

New England critics have noted that in his recent speech at Boston, President Roosevelt began thirteen sentences with "now," used the phrase "have got" for "must" eleven times, and wound up by splitting an infinitive. This they think unpardonable for a President of the United States and a graduate of Harvard.

The official executioner of Tokio died recently. His death was curious in itself and considering his profession, was little short of remarkable. He was crossing a railway track near Tokio when he was run down by a fast express. The body was found by the track with the head as neatly decapitated as any which had been cut off by the official executioner himself. Otherwise there was not a mark on the body.

A masterpiece of censorship was recently perpetrated by the Turkish censor Nischan Effendi, on the occasion of the production of Shakespeare's "Othello" at Constantinople. He "corrected" the drama so thoroughly as to leave hardly a trace of the original. Among other words, he expunged "Cyprus," giving ingenious reasons for this correction. "Cyprus," he said, "is a Turkish island; it would be politically unwise to send Othello to Cyprus, because the territorial integrity of Turkey is guaranteed by treaties. Why not put, instead of Cyprus, some Greek island, such as Corfu?" And thus it came to pass that, from respect to the Treaty of Paris, Othello had to go to Corfu!

A remarkable and important expedition is in preparation at Seattle. United States manufacturers have combined to send a steamship, laden with samples of their productions, to Russia, China, Japan, Australia and South Africa to show foreign merchants what they have to sell and to become acquainted with the sort of goods in demand. Mr. Frank G. Carpenter has advocated this plan in his extensive correspondence for a Boston contemporary, and it is to be carried out liberally. The effect upon trade with the countries whose principal ports are visited by the expedition is expected to be immediate and far-reaching.

The desire for the expression of sentiments and emotions is very much akin to sex. Each is a reaching out for perpetuation, a bid for immortality, a protest against extinction. The gratification of an artistic success is the finest intoxication that comes to mortal. But like all pleasures it must be shared to be complete. "When I have sung well," said Patti, "and the curtain is rung down, I want Some One just to take me in his arms and tell me it was good—I don't care so much for the applause of the audience."

And many other aches to which women are peculiarly subject are generally the result of a diseased condition of the womanly organism. When this diseased condition is cured, sideache, backache, headache, etc., are cured also.

Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription establishes regularity, dries the drains which weaken women, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness. When these diseases are cured the aches they cause are also cured.

"I will drop you a few lines to-day to let you know that I am feeling well now," writes Miss Annie Stephens, of Belleville, Wood Co., West Va. "I feel like a new woman. I took several bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and of the 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I have no headache now, no backache, and no pain in my side any more. No bearing-down pain any more. I think that there is no medicine like Dr. Pierce's medicine. I thank you very much for what you have done for me—your medicine has done me much good."

A DISASTROUS FIRE
THE WORK OF AN INCENDIARY
IN OTTAWA SUNDAY

A Thousand People Are Homeless, Over 200 Houses Destroyed

LOSS CHIEFLY FALLS UPON THE POOREST CLASSES

Most of the 200 Houses Destroyed Had Replaced Those Burned in 1900—Host of Volunteers Help

Ottawa, May 11—Ottawa was fire swept again yesterday, and several hundred families are homeless.

In a large majority of cases, the victims of yesterday's disaster went through the great fire of some three years ago.

Yesterday's fire traversed a portion of the same district which was burned out in 1900, and most of the dwellings which went down were new, and of a reasonably substantial character.

The property loss was estimated last night at from $500,000 to $900,000.

The Work of an Incendiary.

The fire is held to have been directly attributable to an incendiary. John White was arrested on suspicion almost immediately after the first fire broke out at 3 o'clock. He was within a few feet of the spot where the fire began. White is a convicted firebug. On January 28, 1894, he was sent to Kingston for ten years for having fired Booth's lumber yards and caused a disastrous blaze. He had been an employe of John R. Booth, and had threatened to make him poor. He was defended by the present Hon. F. R. Latchford and was acquitted on nine counts. On the tenth he was convicted. In 1901 he was released on ticket-of-leave. Since then he has made frequent threats against Mr. Booth.

Earlier in the day a hay pressing warehouse belonging to W. H. Dwyer, and in the neighbourhood of the C.P.R. Union Station, was burned, along with some ten piles of lumber. White was seen at that fire, and was under the influence of liquor. He had been under police surveillance for some time, and on his appearance within a few minutes after the beginning of the second fire, he was promptly arrested.

In the Lumber District.

The big fire of the afternoon started in the southwest corner of the lumber piling area near St. Louis dam. From Booth's mills, at the Chaudiere, along both sides of the Canada Atlantic tracks, timber is piled in parallel rows straight away to near the experimental farm. It is a valley, protected on the city side by a high rocky escarpment, and on the suburban side by a similar declivity. In a high wind like that which prevailed yesterday, the valley is a sort of natural blast furnace.

Luckily the Wind Changed.

The wind at first was blowing almost straight from the west and for a couple of hours the whole city was threatened. Then the wind veered to the south, and the flames going straight to the north, began to traverse the whole ground covered in 1900, but moving in the other direction. In 1900, the flames jumped blocks at a time; yesterday it seemed more like a methodical lick-up, one block of houses following another in regular order.

The proverbial improbability of lightning striking place in the same place lulled the average Ottawan into a false security for a time, but within an hour the scenes of 1900 began to be faithfully reproduced.

Hosts of Volunteers Help.

The people packed up their goods and fled. Every wagon, cart and carriage in Ottawa was requisitioned and the goods were drawn to safe places. For blocks within the possible area of danger, dwellings were dismantled. Thousands of volunteer firemen, some in overalls, and some in the Sunday frock coat, labored, grimed with dust and smoke and steaming with sweat, on the houses and on the roof tops. The entire population of the Capital flocked to work or to look on.

Where there was no possibility of really systematic effort, this great relief brigade did effective and really magnificent salvage work. Every incident of pathos was shown in an afternoon and evening of keen, popular stress, but, even among the poorer victims, there was no evidence of disorder. These latter followed their goods to a safe distance from the fire, and in many cases sat upon them all night in the vacant spaces of the city. The municipal authorities, on investigation, however, found that these cases were relatively few and the public building was opened to receive the wanderers. The great majority of the victims were housed by friends.

The Water System Fails.

The fire brigade was forced to confine its efforts to fighting the fire from the front. The brigade was handicapped by lack of water. A valve that had been under repair for some time blew out, and it had to be hastily fixed up. After it was repaired, the pressure was declared to be ninety pounds.

The brigade fought the fire from street to street, and it was not until nearly 10 o'clock, some seven hours after the fire had begun, that it was declared under control. By this time the fire had burned to Wellington street, within a stone's throw of the C.P.R. station, over a space nearly a mile long and a quarter of a mile wide.

Fire Hose Aided the Prayers.

On the brow fo the escarpment known as Fisher's Hill, stands St. Jean Baptiste Church and the Dominican monastery. They are great square stone structures, prominent landmarks from every western approach to Ottawa, and, as in 1900, it was amond the buildings at the base of the hill that the crucial battle was fought.

Once over the crest of the hill, and the fire might have ravished the central portion of the city.

An open air benediction of the Sacred Host assured the faithful, and then the white-cassocked brethren bared their brawny arms, and got out their own hose, and their excellent fire apparatus did great service in saving the surrounding houses. Before the nearer buildings were reached, however, the wind had veered and the church was never seriously threatened. In all the churches the sparse congregations were dismissed after prayer.

CANADA ENVIED BY THE AUSTRALIANS

The Victorian Labor War Causes Much Comment

Whole Colony's Trade Paralyzed by the Strike

London, May 11—The strike of the railway employes of Victoria is attracting much attention here. A certain school of politicians have often pointed to Australia as a country where Government ownership of railways was an object lesson to older nations, yet now they have to confess that it is not an advantage to have the whole transportation system of a country tied up by any body of men, no matter how solid are their grievances. The strikers, who number 12,000, have completely paralyzed all operations on the 3,400 miles of railway in the State of Victoria. They state that they have been goaded to resistance by the Government's threat to reduce their pay as well as to disfranchise them unless they abandon the proposed alliance with the Trades Hall.

The mileage of the Victorial railways at last returns totalled 3,218 miles, all of which belong to the Government.

Premier Irvine is most outspoken in his determination not to yield to the demands of the labor party, even though the existence of his Ministry may be imperilled thereby. He asserts that so long as he remains in office, the interests of the general community will never be sacrificed to the claims of a section of the labor party so predominant in Australia.

The Globe, in an editorial today, says that the progress of Australia has been deliberately checked by the gross selfishness of the Labor party. "The domination of labor is an unmitigated failure. No wonder that Australians look regretfully to Canada, with the same problem to solve, advancing by leaps and bounds under a freer system."

THE ALASKAN TRIBUNAL

London, May 11—Hon. Clifford Sifton and his associates engaged on the Canadian case for the Alaskan tribunal spent the week at Knebworth, Lord Strathcona's palatial country residence in Hertfordshire, which was formerly the seat of the Bulwar-Lyttons.

Mr. Christopher Robinson, K.C., of Toronto, arrived today to assist Hon. Edward Blake in the preparation of the Canadian reply to the American "case," which also arrived here today and was formally handed over to the Foreign Office by Mr. Henry White, the secretary of the United States Embassy. He expects at least a month's work. The American reply has apparently produced no new evidence of any importance.

Another Strike Probable

Montreal, May 11—The builders' Labor Union have notified Mayor Cochrane that they are about to strike, and in a letter request him to name a time when they could lay their case before him. The union is composed of 2,000 men, who are employed in building operations, mostly as helpers to skilled labor.

CAPITAL CONSPIRES TO CRUSH LABOR

Startling Statement Made Against American Capitalists

WILL SHUT DOWN WORKS

Nation's Manufactories to be Closed in Retaliation Against Unions

Chicago, May 12.—Startling charges against the nation's capitalists and trusts, officially made before the local Federation of Labor, have been made before the local Federation of Labor, have been given weight by the appointment of a committee on propaganda to organize labor, so that it may make war on an alleged gigantic conspiracy to wreck American labor unions. The conspiracy is laid at the doors of J. P. Morgan, John D. Rockfeller, and other Wall street millionaires. In substance the charge is that Wall street is alarmed at the inroads being made upon the corporations' dividends by the demands of labor and the shrinkage in the value of service franchises worked by municipal ownership and anti-trust legislation and insists that the unions must be crushed.

According to labor officials the plan is to enforce lockouts in many big plants, in order to cause an industrial and financial panic, whereby stocks, not inflated, would shrink, and be purchasable at ruinous figures.

Much of the information is alleged to have been received from a capitalist who declined to enter the scheme.

To Exclude Argentine Cattle

London, May 11—The British Government has decided to re-impose the prohibition against the importation of cattle from the Argentine Republic, the removal of which was recently secured after protracted negotiations. The reason for the present action is the reappearance of the disease in several districts of the country.

THE BRITISH KING AS A PEACEMAKER

How His Majesty's Visit is Regarded in United States

A MONARCH'S RARE TACT

Leading American Journals Sing Praises of the King

New York, May 12.—The New York Commercial Advertiser says: "There is no doubt that King Edward has done his country good service in his recent round of ceremonious visits. British sovereigns may be from a constitutional point of view merely decorative adjuncts to an essentially democratic system of government, yet this is true, if it be really true, in relation to domestic affairs. In the foreign policy of Britain the monarch is still an important factor. How well founded this statement is can be seen from a study of the influence exerted by the late Queen in all that concerned external relations; and it is illustrated by what Edward VII. has now accomplished."

Boston Herald: "Whether his visit to Lisbon, Rome and Paris possessed any political significance or not, tere can be no doubt that it has promoted a more friendly feeling between the peoples of the different countries included in the royal tour, and that this feeling is likely to promote their mutual welfare and happiness. This, after all, is as good as a formal treaty of peace and good will."

St. Louis Republic: "King Edward's appointment of his son to the headship of the World's Fair Board is another evidence of that monarch's rare tact, and possibly a token of pleasant regard for the old St. Louis which he visited in the dim past. Edward still has his critics, yet there are few persons in the world who will not confess a liking for his genial personality and an admiration for his art of cultivation."

PRAISE FOR BRITAIN

GEN. VILJOEN ANSWERED

Britain Has Been Most Humane in Her Treatment of the Boers

New York, May 12.—Henry Van Nest, of Philadelphia, who has brothers in South Africa, has addressed the following letter to the New York Harald, in answer to General Viljoen's recent complaints:

"General Viljoen's plea for an amnesty for the British subjects of Afrikander birth who rebelled during the late war is a credit to the chivalry and bravery for which he is famous. But he must have received recent news from South Africa through prejudiced channels.

"My brothers there were in open sympathy with the Boer cause during the war, but in their letters they give the British unstinted praise and admiration for their magnanimity and the efforts they are making in settling the country. A generous amnesty has been extended to most of the Afrikanders who took up arms to aid the Boers.

"But there are some retained as prisoners—the men convicted of train wrecking, indiscriminate looting and other irregular acts. Men who looted the farms of their loyalist fellow subjects and derailed trains far from the seat of war are lucky to escape with temporary detention. No specific punishment is to be given and every week a few are released and sent back.

General Viljoen refers to our action after the civil war. If he asks the Southerners about this they will tell him a far worse story of the settlement that the Afrikanders are making out against England. The brave fight of the Boers, to whose courage and unsullied conduct their late enemies give unstinted tribute, was in no way helped by the petty brigandage sustained in the colonies by the lawless element.

"This is casting no reflection on the Afrikanders who came out openly and fought for the Boers. Most of these were freed months ago, though disfanchised."

Ottawa, May 12—The Canada Atlantic Railway Company declines the Minister of Labor's suggestion for an arbitration of the dispute with the men. Mr. Booth's company say there is nothing to arbitrate, that the men left their employ, and have been paid off and their places filled by new employes. The railway declines to recognize the strikers.

BLEW UP A MOSQUE

Worshippers Buried in the Ruins by the "Macedonian Knights of Death"

Vienna, May 11—A mosque at Kinpruil, in which two hundred Moslems had assembled, was, according to a despatch to the Die Zeitung, from Sofia, Bulgaria, blown up with dynamite on May 2. The worshippers were buried in the ruins. The perpetrator of the outrage, a man named Poppow, committed suicide by shooting. A paper discovered in one of his pockets discovered hom as a member of the "Macedonian Knights of death."

MARRIED BY FORCE

Made a Wife Without Consent and a Divorce Suit Begins

Pretty School Teacher Under Threats of Violence Permits Ceremony to be Performed without Protest

Clinton Iowa, May 12.—Forced into a marriage with a man she does not love, being compelled to marry a man under duress and for fear of her life and while the financee of another man, is the strange story which forms the basis for one of the most startling suits at law ever entered on the docket of the Circuit Court of Rock Island County, Ill. The defendant, George Lewis, was married to Catherine Greenwood, a pretty school teacher, of Moline, April 8 under the circumstances noted above.

According to the story of Mrs. Lewis, up to a year ago she and Lewis were lovers. There was a quarrel and a separation, and soon after she became engaged to another man, to whom she has been loyal at heart, and he became engaged to another young woman. April 7 she spent the night with a sister at Milan, coming in to Rock Island on the car, and, when she got off, he also alighted, and proposed they take a short walk. When they were within a block of the home of Rev. R. B. Williams, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church, he stated to the girld that he had a license for their marriage and that she must go to the parsonage and marry him.

She was startled by the proposition and stoutly refused to go. However, he was determined and told her if she did not go and marry him she would never be the wife of any man. Badly frightened, and fearing for her life, she yielded, protesting to the end. After the ceremony, she returned to her home, where she has been since. She avers that on different occasions Lewis has made attempts to kidnap her and take her to the home of his parents and force her to live with him. This, she says, she will never consent to do, and asks that the contract, entered into unwillingly by her and under duress, be dissolved.

THE STRIKE OVER AND THE MEN BACK AT WORK
AT MONTREAL.

The 'Longshoremen Resumed Work at the Wharves Yesterday

SIR THOS. SHAUGHNESSY SAID TO HAVE DRAWN AGREEMENT

Which the Steamship Companies Accepted Rather Than Split with the Railway

Montreal, May 11—At one o'clock today the striking longshoremen returned to work on the wharves, and the strike was ended. Shortly after 12 o'clock the representatives of the steamship companies announced that they had agreed to accept the terms that the longshoremen had unanimously agreed to accept at a meeting held at 9 o'clock.

The two principal features of the new agreement, which was prepared by Sir Thos. Shaughnessy, are that 'longshoremen are to be allowed to wear the union badges, and that future vacancies are to be filled by the foremen, former employes being given the preference.

No more contracts with the employes are to be made through the Canadian Independent Labor Bureau, but those already made are to be honored.

When it was announced that Sir Thos. Shaughnessy had prepared the agreement the steamship men decided to make the concessions rather than endanger the solidarity of their association by a disagreement with the Canadian Pacific.

The militia had been recalled from duty. The officials of the teamsters' union announced today that their men would also return to work at once. The new scale of wages, 25 cents an hour for day work and 30 cents an hour for night work, will go into effect at once.

Montreal, May 11—The text of the agreement reached between the striking longshoremen and the shipping firms, signed by both sides this morning, is as follows:

1. Many of the men who have heretofore been employed by the steamship companies and stevedores in the port of Montreal as longshoremen in the handling of steamship cargo have unitedly refrained from work for nearly three weeks, because of their inability to agree with the steamship companies and stevedores as to rate of wages and conditions of service. For the purpose of this agreement, the steamship owners and stevedores will be called "The Employers," the longshoremen being called "The Employes."

2. The employers are quite willing that all of the men heretofore employed shall return to work at once, and they shall be given work, without discrimination, in so far as their services can be utilized without discharging men already employed whose services the company may wish to retain.

3. In filling vacancies as they may occur and in the employment of additional men, the employers shall give first consideration to men who were employed previous to this season, whether they belong to a union or not.

4. Union men or non-union men may, without objection on the part of the employers, wear any buttonhole bouquet, blue ribbon or other badge not inconsistant with the laws of the country.

5. The employers, with a view to encouraging the employes to remain at work during the entire season, would have prepared to have fixed a rate per hour for service actually performed, with a bonus of 2 1-2 cents per hour, to be paid at the end of the season to all employes who had given such continuous service, but the men prefer a straight rate per hour without the bonus, and it is assumed, therefore, that they are willing to give the requisite assurance of continuous service during the season of navigation, without any other inventive than the agreed rate per hour.

6. A difficulty that has arisen heretofore, is to be avoided, namely, the discontinuance of work by a considerable number of the men, when their services are required during the busy portion of the season, and the employes hereby undertake to work honestly and continuously as may be required by the exigencies of traffic of the port during the life of the agreement. Any employe who may during the life of this agreement, without good and sufficient cause, violate this undertaking shall not hereafter have any claim upon the consideration of the employers or his fellow-employees, nor shall he be entitled to any recognition under this or future agreements of the same character.

7. The employers accept in good faith the undertakings of the employes as outlined in this agreement, and the Labor Bureau will be abolished in so far as the union men are concerned, the efforts of both parties to the agreement to be devoted to the maintenance of most cordial relations between employer and employe.

8. The men and their leaders undertake to use their utmost influence that no man who has been at work during the strike or who may be subsequently engaged, shall be molested.

NO. 4 COMPANY

Holds a Successful At Home at the Crown Hotel

Last evening a good representation of No. 4 Company enjoyed themselves at the Crown Hotel, the proprietor of which has won for himself a very enviable reputation for the manner in which he treats his guests, whether at a sumptuous banquet, an at home, or private boarders.

No. 4 is composed of as fine a lot of young fellows as could be gathered together. Intelligent, jolly gentlemanly and "every man a brick" are Captain Hounsell's men. He has every reason to be proud of such a company.

Before the programme began Lieutenant-Colonel Millar made the boys happy by his presence, and was given a royal welcome. After delivering an eloquent and inspiring address to the young soldiers, he took his place amongst them, not as commanding officer, but as a companion. He is deservedly very popular with both officers and men.

The programme was very informal and was comprised of songs, readings, recitations, and some very fine selections on a splendid gramaphone, which added to the merriment and entertainment of those present.

The Rev. J. C. Davidson, chaplain of the regiment, was also present and spoke in very eulogistic terms of Lieut.-Col. Millar and gave every encouragement to No. 4 Company. He spoke hopefully fo the regiment in general, and proved his reputation as a good speaker. After a few short addresses by Capt. Hounsell and others, and some good company choruses the very successful entertainment was brought to a close.

Death of Mrs. Goselin

Again it is our sad duty to chronicle the death of a young wife, Mrs. F. J. Goselin, of Crescent street, which occurred at her late home yesterday morning, from the effects of blood poisoning. The husband has the sympathy of not only a large number of relatives and friends, but also of the entire community in his sudden and very unusually sad bereavement. The deceased was well and favorably known and highly respected throughout the town. On Thursday morning at 9 o'clock the funeral will take place from her late home to St. Peter's Cathedral, and from thence to the Roman Catholic cemetery for interment.

Rising in the Ears

There is just one cure and that is plenty of food for the blood and nerves, which is best supplied in Ferrozone, than which no blood builder, nerve tonic or strength producer is better. Ferrozone promotes healthy digestion, which results in improved nutrition. The blood grows rich and red, furnishes stability to the entire system, and the store of nerve force and energy increases daily. A rebuilding of the constitution, new spirits, health and strength, all come from the use of Ferrozone. This marvelous renovator is sold by Druggists for 50c. a box or six boxes for $2.50. RUSSIA WILL ADHERE TO ITS ENGAGEMENTS TO GET OUT

Of Manchuria Although the Evacuation was Temporarily Delayed

Had no Intention of Adopting Any Measure to Exclude Foreign Consuls

London, May 11—The Under Foreign Secretary, Lord Cranborne, announced in the House of Commons today that the British Consul at New Chwang reported that there had been no re-occupation of New Chwang by the Russians.

Friendly communications on the subject, Lord Cranborne added, had been addressed to the Russian Government during the past few days by the United States and Great Britain independently, and the Russian Government, in reply, had intimated that it would adhere to its engagements to evacuate Manchuria, although the evacuation was temporarily delayed. Russia had also explained that she had no intention of adopting any measure tending to exclude foreign consuls or obstruct foreign commerce or the use of the ports.

Under these circumstances, the British Government saw no sufficient reason for securing concerted attention between the United States, Japan and Great Britain.

London, May 11—The Salonica correspondent of the Times cables that there are ten foreign men-of-war in the harbor of Salonica. A state of seige has been proclaimed, and Turkish troops are guarding every square yard of the town. Apparent quiet prevails. The schemes of the revolutionary leaders may hang fire, but it not likely that they will be abandoned.

PUPS PREFERRED TO CHILDREN

Someone with a turn for curious statistics kept count upon the fashion pageantry of Fifth avenue, New York, as it glittered by last Sunday afternoon, and in an hour he recorded seventy-one dogs on the laps of finely-dressed women and in the same time nineteen children.

Well, what of it?

The United States is a free country and if a woman prefers to be a mother to a dog rather than to a child, what is there to prevent it?

The cold, hard, brutal truth of the matter is that a whole lot of women are better fitted to bring up dogs than they are to bring up children.

When these, by natural inclination and selection, have found the measure of their affections, and that measure is dog size, why—let them indulge it.

It would be impossible to conceive of anything more pitiable than the fate of a child born to a woman whose heart yearns for a pup instead. The poor child must shrivel up, body and soul, of heart hunger.

It is no imaginary case. Unfortunately, there are many such children in the world—even in Canada.

It is unfortunate for the children and unfortunate for the world.

They are like stunted shrubs that spring up in the soil that is barely sufficient to nourish the seed, but too hard and dry to supply the life.

If they survive it is without spirit and as eyesores.

Their roots suck no emotional moisture. The sunshine of life only gnarls and parches them.

Such children—God pity them!—denied the love that vitalizes the mother milk, are worse—ten thousand times worse—than orphaned.

Their childhood is an unheeded wail of unsatisfied longing; the wellsprings of natural feeling are dammed up in their little hearts, to stagnate and to poison their lives.

Such children—well, it is better for all concerned that the mothers should raise pups instead.

There is a good pup, but there is no possibility of good in a child of a woman whose heart affections are only pup-sized.

But, even at that, it is a pity for the pup.

There is no worthier animal than a dog. He is capable, when given a chance, of responding to the intellect and affections of the highest natures. But after all, he has his level, and while we love him because he can at times raise himself to man's, even the dog himself must despise the woman who can lower herself to this.

In certain social circles it is considered "not fashionable" for mothers to show much interest in their children. The little ones are left to the nurses, while the dogs are taken out in the carriages. For the benefit of such mothers it is worth while to repeat a recent remark made by the Duchess of Fife, the eldest daughter of the King of England. The Duchess was discussing with a friend the case of a little child of wealthy parents accidentally found to be covered with bruises inflicted by a cruel caretaker. The Duchess said:

"No nurse would be able to bruise my children's bodies, for not many days go by that I do not wash them myself."

"Why," inquired her friend, "do you really stay in the nursery to watch their toilet, ma'am?"

"I did not say that I watched them being washed," said the Duchess, "I said that I washed them myself."

This is indorsement of caring for one's own children from a source that even the ultra-fashionable stand in awe of.

It is to be hoped that this virtue of royalty may be emulated as obsequiously as its vices are imitated.

The Globe and its sister organs are looking for where "that $[illegible] came from" like a tramp looks for work.

THE GERMAN NAVY

One of the prominent European reviews, devoted to naval and military affairs, noting the rapid increase in the number of ships in the German navy, raises the question whether a sufficient number of trained men will be forthcoming to man them, and answers in the affirmative. It points out that the number of men incorporated in the German navy during the period 1879-1903 was 147,000. Of these 13,000 were one-year volunteers, 38,127 were ordinary volunteers and 98,780 were conscripts. There were also 16,731 men who passed straight into reserve. Allowing for a decrease of 25 per cent. from various causes, there are still left 111,000 trained men, a force sufficient to man all the ships in the German navy twice over. The number of men required when the navy is on a peace footing is only 36,000. In addition it is calculated that up to the end of 1906 the number of untrained men who will have passed direct into the reserve, including the 16,731 mentioned above, will be about 67,383, and out of this number there ought to be at least 36,000 men who, after a short training, would be available for service.

Creeps Like a Serpent

Catarrh is an insidious disease, scarcely noticeable at first, but horribly relentless if not checked

No disease makes such inroads into weak constitutions as Catarrh. It spreads from the place of beginning to the lungs, bronchial tubes, stomach, intestines, and before long all the organs of the body are affected.

A splendid remedy, attended with remarkable success in curing Catarrh has lately come prominently to the front. Its name is Catarrhozone, and no case is recorded where it failed to quickly relieve and cure.

The strong points about Catarrhozone are that it is both a local and constitutional treatment. It not only affords quick relief to the local symptoms, but also purifies the blood of all Catarrhal poisons, builds up and strengthens the system.

Catarrhozone Inhaler supplies an abundance of medicated air which is breathed in at the mouth, and after passing through every air cell and air passage of the breathing organs, is slowly exhaled through the nostrils.

This penetrating, volatile antiseptic at once kills the germs that cause Catarrh and prevents the disease from spreading when once established. It is so healing and soothing that the inflamed membranes and sore spots are restored to normal and healthy condition in a few days.

Catarrhozone cleanses the nose and throat and keeps them entirely free of mucous discharge. It prevents dropping in the throat, cures headache and makes breathing easy and the breath pure and sweet.

To build up and invigorate the system, a blood purifier and tonic called Ferrozone should be taken after each meal. In conjunction with Catarrhozone it is a valuable aid in establishing such a healthy condition of the body that Catarrh cannot exist.

Other remedies have been known to give relief, but to permanently erradicate every trace of Catarrh you must use Catarrhozone. It is a common-sense, convenient, clean method of cure that is endorsed by the profession and all intelligent pharmacists.

You are sure to be benefited quickly and positively cured by Catarrhozone. The complete outfit costs only $1.00. Trial size, 25 cts. Sold by Druggists and N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

NEGOTIATIONS FAILED

Situation in Montreal is More Serious Than Ever

Montreal May 11—Owing to the failure of the negotiations looking to a settlement of the 'longshoremens' strike, instituted by Sir William Mulock, the steamship interests have withdrawn all concessions made by them to the strikers at various stages of the proceedings, looking to a solution of the difficulty.

The situation now looks more desperate than ever, both sides having settled down to a grim contest of strength, the end of which is hard to forsee.

The strikers are full of determination and the cry is "Vive l'union."

Two Agonizing Spring Diseases Quickly Cured by Paine's Celery Compound

The Marveless Power of the Compound Astonishes All Who Use It

In removing such diseases as rheumatism and neuralgia from the system in spring time, Paine's Celery Compound commences its good work by purifying the blood, regulating the nervous system and creating a natural appetite. Rheumatism and neuralgia are common results of sluggish and poisoned blood, and unhealthy action of the kidneys and liver. Pathologists agree that the morbid principle in the blood is uric acid, which act upon the joints and muscles, causing pain and suffering. Neuralgia is inflammation or other morbid condition of some portion of the nervous system. Neither disease remains long in the system when the sufferer uses Paine's Celery Compound. If the reader of this is suffering the torments of either disease, let him simply try one bottle of Paine's Celery Compound and carefully note the results. Mr. J. Y. Hemming, London, Ont., says:

"I suffered for years with inflammatory rheumatism which baffled the skill of medical men. I had every form of treatment known to specialists, and visited mineral springs, but obtained only temporary relief. Almost giving up in despair, I was asked to try Paine's Celery Compound, and I thank God such a blessing was brought to my notice. The use of three bottles of the great remedy gave me relief from pain and I slept better. Ten bottles worked for me a complete cure. I have no hesitation in recommending Paine's Celery Compound to all rheumatic sufferers; it cures surely and permanently."

Mrs. P. N. Mather, Vancouver, B. C., a cured woman says:

"Neuralgia in the head and face [illegible] years. The doctors said I would never get rid of it. I had heard so much about Paine's Celery Compound that I determined to give it a trial. After the use of four bottles I am a cured woman and have not been troubled with the disease for five months. I owe my present good health, comfort and happiness to Paine's Celery Compound, and advise all neuralgic victims to use it. It is the best medicine in the world."

An Organ Out of Order.

The manner in which a gang of forgers in Warsaw have been discovered and broken up makes curious reading. A domiciliary visit had to be paid by the police to a house, and on the arrival of the officers no opposition was offered to their entry. Inside one of the rooms, however, they found a man playing a cabinet organ, and all the time the visit lasted the man remained at the organ. As they were about to leave the house the officer in charge of the police, being something of a musician himself, asked the performer to play the Russian National Hymn before they left. This the man did, but the officer was not pleased with the performance, and complained that the player did not put enough expression into the melody. The man explained that he was unable to do so, as the loud pedal arrangement of the organ was out of order. The officer at once volunteered to repair it, and, in spite of the protests of the performer, set to work to do so. Great was his surprise on opening the instrument to discover that the pedal would not work because bundles of forged notes had been stuffed into the instrument. Arresting everyone in the house, the police carefully examined the organ, and found, besides the notes, documents which revealed the membership of the gang of forgers.

JAPAN IS PREPARED

London, May 11.—Little doubt exists in the minds of British politicians that Russia has determined to show its hand in Manchuria more clearly than heretofore. The outcry against its recent proposal to annex that province, followed by the proclamation on the part of the British of a kind of Monroe Doctrine on the Persian Gulf, has undoubtedly convinced the Muscovite Government that the time for a bold stroke has come.

That Russia is reported as making extensive preparations for war corroborates news to that effect published by the Star in these despatches for some time past. Britain's disposition to oppose Russian expansion in the near east, middle east and far east has caused intense irritation in St. Petersburg.

10 Cents per Share, after that price will be advanced.

It is a well known fact that a 15 barrel well will pay over 100 per cent. profit upon its cost.

This is no longer a speculation for we have proved that oil is on our ground, and we now have oil in paying quantities, with two wells pumping we can soon pay dividends, and every well we put down increases our earning capacity.

This is a business proposition, managed by business men.

Buried Gold

By FRED WHISHAW.

Author of "A Boyar of the Terrible," etc.

and Beadon shouted to them as he sprang into the street and away.

"There's fightin' going on upstairs," he yelled. "There'll be murder in a minute if you don't go up!"

Evans heard him in the room above. With a curse he hastily cut the cord about Dick's wrists and removed the gag. He replaced the chair that had been upset and tidied the carpet, rucked up in the short struggle.

Dick Robinson rose to his feet and shook himself, and at that moment the landlord rushed in.

"Come, what's up? Who's to blame? I won't have any fighting here," he said angrily. "Out you go, one and all."

"All right, landlord! It was my fault; I'll go!" said Robinson, with wonderful presence of mind. "We'll settle this another day, mate. So long, for just now."

Robinson turned and went out before Evans could think of a plea for preventing him. He staggered downstairs with difficulty. An empty cab happened to be passing, and he hailed the driver. "Southampton-west Station as quick as you like," he gasped, and fell into the vehicle more dead than alive.

"That's the chap you brought in sick," said the landlord upstairs. "What's he been up to, fightin' first thing?"

"He's mad or drunk," explained Evans. "Wasn't pleased, I suppose, to be taken proper care of. Run down and fetch him back, mate. I'll be responsible he don't do no harm, landlord."

But Robinson was no longer to be seen, and Evans and his partner were forced to realize that their quarry had eluded them.

"D—— him; he didn't look like being so nippy when we brought him in! Don't fret, mate. We'll get him at Seadown, presently, if we can't find him here."

"D—— that young whelpson that looked in and gave the alarm! It was his fault," said the other, angrily. "What in thunder did he want coming here?"

"Thought he'd seen Robinson at Seadown, maybe. Maybe he has been there and come back. He's sly enough, our man, for anything."

"He'll have to be sly to dodge us again, now he's done us once. No quarter, mate. That's what's going to be our game next time. An' if I catch that young imp of Satan——"

"You'll hang before you've done, mate, if you aren't careful," said Evans.

At Seadown, an hour later, Keith was twice startled within the same number of minutes; for as he sat at his tea there ran hurriedly into the room two persons, following closely one upon the other.

First came Harry Beadon, who omitted the ceremony of knocking, but burst into the room white, dusty, haggard, the picture of a terrified youth. He sank into a chair. "Oh, Lord help us all!" he muttered. "I was too late, Mr. Adams! They've got him, and I think they've murdered him!"

Beadon had run all the way from the station, and could scarcely speak for panting.

"Murdered who? Not Dick?" exclaimed Keith, starting up. "You didn't see it done—is he dead?—tell me quick——"

"I don't know whether he was dead. He was tied and gagged, and they both stood over him. Lord knows what they've done! I gave the alarm and ran——"

Robinson proved very effectually that his murder had not been finally accomplished, by rushing into the room at this point.

"Give me a drink, Adams," he gasped. "I'm more'n half dead!"

CHAPTER XII.

Dick conferred long and seriously with his friend. "You played the man, if all you say's true," said Keith, "and I'm glad of it; for I was afraid you wouldn't, what I saw of you up at Southampton."

"I'm all right now," Dick replied. "Anybody'd be scared knowing there was two chaps sworn to kill him shadowing him in the dark."

"Well, don't think you're safe yet, for you ain't. We've got to be as careful as cats, don't you forget it. The sooner you can get out of the place and to sea the better it'll be for you. What's this idea you say you have for gettin' the gold back from the island?"

"Why, the company ought to furnish a ship—they've plenty—to fetch back the 'Hecuba's' crew. At the same time the bankers who owned the gold, them or the underwriters, if it was insured, ought to be sounded. We should ask them, if by any chance we was to be able to save the stuff, the 'Hecuba' havin' gone down close to shore, how much they'd want in a divide, and how much'd go to the finders."

"That's all right; that'd be square all round. Now, see here, Dick, don't you go and get scared by what I'm going to say, which is this: You're the only man on our side, I take it, what knows exactly where the island is, and when you've got to the island, where the gold is hidden. I'm supposin' you've taken the bearings of both?"

"To an inch, the gold. I've got a chart in my pocket with a cross as near as I can calculate where the island is."

"Good again. Well, you take and write me a letter this very minute, showin' the exact bearin's of both. You can seal it up and I'll give you my word it sha'n't be opened unless — well, unless anything happens to you, which it might to any of us, this being a world in which accidents is constantly happening. I don't say you're in any particular danger, but with these two desperate blokes about you've got to be careful. Mind you, it isn't the swag I'm thinkin' of, but there are folks in this place who want their friends fetched back, and how are we going to get 'em if we don't know where they are?"

"Well, I'll write it; but darn me if I'd do it for any but you, Keith, and that's the truth. It's a big trust to put in a man."

"That's all right. The secret sha'n't go past you, long as you're alive, mate; and if I didn't want to keep you alive, why should I take all this trouble for your sake?"

So Dick Robinson prepared charts both of the island and of the spot in which he had seen the treasure buried and which he had since examined very carefully with an eye to emergencies, taking measurements and so on, and obtaining accurate results which he now placed upon record. When all was finished he handed his sealed envelope to Keith Adams, who put it carefully under lock and key.

It was two days after this conversation that young Harry Beadon, walking along the towing path of the canal in the evening as he went homewards, was startled and frightened by the sudden apparition of two men, who came out from the shadow of a bridge and stood before him, barring his way.

Harry was terribly alarmed, for he recognized them at once, but he did his best to play the man.

"Now, then, you imp of mischief," said Evans, always the spokesman of this worthy couple, "we've wanted you for several days and now we've got you."

"What d'you want me for?" asked Beadon, assuming an unconcern which he certainly did not feel.

"Why, to wring your neck, my son, for spoilin' our game t'other afternoon, and we shall do it, too, and chuck you into this stinkin' canal unless you swear you'll do as I say."

"That depends what it is," said Beadon, pluckily. "I don't suppose you'd murder me, would you, because I accidentally looked in at the wrong moment? You'd be sure to swing for it, you know, and it wouldn't be worth while."

"Don't you believe it, sonny. We shall get clear away before you're found. But what's the use of arguing until we know whether you're going to obey? There's no reason we shouldn't be good friends?"

"You haven't told me what you want of me yet!" said Beadon. "Let's hear that, and I'll tell you all the rest if I can."

"Firstly, where's our man, and what's his habits here? We've got to nab him at any price. If you wasn't a fool you'd help us. It'd be worth your while."

"And supposin' I refuse to tell you anything about him; what then?"

"See here, sonny," said Evans. "Ever seen one of these little toys before?" He produced a horrible looking knife in a sheath, from which he drew it. The sight sent all Beadon's manhood to the winds.

"Oh, Lord, don't!" he said. "Put it away—don't hurt me! I'll do anything you like to tell me. I only asked for curiosity."

"That's a clever lad. Now, you're talking so as you can be understood. Well, now, where's he to be found, our man?"

Harry gave the address of Keith Adams's lodging.

A DOUBLE HANGING

Two Negro Murderers have Paid the Penalty of their Crimes

St. Louis, Mo., May 11.—Henry Wilson and Sampson Gray, negroes, were hanged in the gaolyard, to-day, for murder. This is the first double hanging here since 1888. It was the first private execution in the history of St. Louis, a few officials and newspaper men being the only persons present.

Gray killed another negro for money and Wilson was convicted for the murder of Thomas Mooney, a levee saloon keeper, whom he attempted to hold up.

The house in Portland, Me., where Longfellow was born is now a tenement in the poorer part of the city, mostly inhabited by [illegible] writes us that a few years ago a teacher in Portland was giving a lesson on the life of the poet.

At the end of the hour she began to question her class.

"Where was Longfellow born?" she asked.

A small boy waved his hand vigorously. When the teacher called on him his answer did not seem to astonish the rest of the class, but was a cold shock to her.

"In Patsy Magee's bedroom," he said. —Youth's Companion.

The success of every great man hinges right on that one thing—to pick your men to do the work. The efforts of any one man count for so very little! It all depends on the selection and management of men to carry out your plans. In every successful concern, whether it be bank, school, factory, steamship company or railroad, the spirit of one man runs through and animates the entire institution. The success or failure of the enterprise turns on the mental, moral and spiritual qualities of this one man. And the leader who can imbue an army of workers with a spirit of earnest fidelity to duty, an unswerving desire to do the thing that should be done, and always with animation, kindness, courtesy and good cheer must be ranked as one of the great men of the earth.

One of Lord Salisbury's pet anecdotes is the story of the barber of Portsmouth whom he had occasion to patronize some years ago. This tonsorial artist did not fail to recognize his distinguished patron, for the latter, on passing the shop a few days later, was gratified to observe a placard in the window bearing this inscription: "Hair cut, 3d. With the same scissors as I cut Lord Salisbury's hair, 6d."

A minister whose first parish was in the backwoods of the West was called upon to officiate at the wedding of a rather seedy-looking fellow and a blooming young woman. The ceremony was performed in the log-cabin home of the bride's parents. There were many guests present, and a pleasant informality prevailed. When the bridegroom repeated the words, "With all my worldly goods I thee endow," a tall and lank guest innocently observed: "Thar goes Hank's houn' dawg, by gum!"

STOCK MARKETS

WE STRONGLY FAVOR PURCHASE OF B. R. T.

New York, May 11.—The time of year has arrived when B. R. T. will bear watching. Its stock at present is very closely held by people who thoroughly know the property and its possibilities. It is the season of the year when B. R. T. earnings are at their best, namely the summer months. From now on fall earnings, gross and net, will be very large. The new power house now in operation, the increased equipment and the natural growth of Brooklyn will all have a tendency to improve matters. The public at present [illegible] little of the stock. It is concentrated in the hands of a few men who are judges of its present and future value. President H. H. Porter, of the Chicago & Eastern Illinois Railway, and Mr. Norman B. Rea, of Chicago, own a very large percent of the stock. The stock will we believe, again cross eigthy this summer. No man appreciated its possibilities more than did the late ex-Gov. Flower. Under his tutelage in 1899 the stock sold above 125. This was undoubtedly too high a price for the property in its present stages of development, but it is well worth eighty, and worth infinitely more today than it was when it sold above par.

The strategic position of the two hundred odd miles operated by the B. R. T. Co. render it impossible for any opposition to come into the field. Its close relations with the Long Island Railway, which is today dominated and controlled by the Pennsylvania Railway, insure to its benefit. Gov. Flower used to say that every five per cent. increase in the population of the city of Brooklyn meant one per cent. addition for B. R. T. earnings, and Brooklyn is one of the most rapidly growing cities in the United States. The closeness with which the stock is held makes it extremely susceptible to bull manipulation and impervious to bear manipulation. The facts warrant the speedy appearance of operations for the advance. Buy and hold B. R. T.

HAIGHT & FREESE.

Gossip and Proposal Parties.

The successful hostess of to-day must provide for her guests something more than the conventional dinner, reception, luncheon, card party, or dance of the days of our grandmothers. It is the indoor functions which tax milady's ingenuity and originality; the summer diversions, consisting of garden fetes, launching excursions and picnics are not difficult to arrange. Winter and autumn are the strenuous seasons for the ambitious hostess.

An amusing evening may be spent at a gossip party. For this an even number of girls and men must be present, each receiving a card with a numbered list of subjects for conversation written upon it—a lively piece of social news of the day, the announcement of a certain engagement, a striking or conspicuous costume in which "Mrs. So and So" appeared recently, or anything which might be discussed for a few minutes. There must be as many subjects as couples.

About the various rooms the hostess has arranged tete-a-tetes, each with a number above it. Each guest is asked to draw a number from a receptacle of some description, there being duplicates of each number, one for the man and [illegible]. These numbers are matched with those above the tete-a-tetes until each guest has a seat and a partner with whom to gossip. When everyone is seated the hostess taps a bell and announces the first topic on the card, and for five minutes that particular bit of news is discussed. Again the mistress of ceremonies rings her bell and reads the second subject aloud. Each man then says au revoir to the girl with whom he has been talking, and moves on to the next number to gossip about the second topic. This continues until the subjects are exhausted, and at the same time each man has talked with every girl in the party.

Pencils and slips of paper are distributed at the conclusion, and the girls write the name of the man who has gossiped with them most entertainingly. The men do likewise, and prizes are given to those voted most proficient in the art of gossiping.

This form of entertainment may be made pretty and picturesque by giving a garden or out-of-door effect to the rooms. Palms, flowers, hammocks, porch chairs, and other outside accessories scattered about over a green canvas floor covering or imitation grass rugs lend a pretty lawn party effect. In case the latter idea is employed the invitations may read, "A Garden Gossip Party"—a more or less startling invitation in the midst of winter. Summer gowns add to the warm weather effect of this sort of entertainment.

Proposal parties are new and clever when properly introduced. The hostess, when her guests have arrived, informs the men that they must propose to every girl in the room within a stated period of time. She also tells them they must do it in proper style, and take her off to one of the cosy corners or secluded nooks she has arranged about the rooms. She then takes her women guests aside and gives each of them half as many little red hearts of paper, flannel, silk, or any convenient material, as there are men in the party. She also gives each girl an equal number of tiny white mittens.

At the signal of the hostess every man selects a girl and asks her to marry him, pressing his suit until he is forced to leave her by the jingle of the hostess's bell. He then proposes to another girl, and so on until he has laid his heart at the feet of everyone in the party. The girls distribute the hearts and mittens, a heart for a well-told confession of love, a mitten for a less impressive tale. At the end of the stated hour the men's collections of hearts and mittens are counted and prizes are given them. The man with the largest pile of mittens is consoled with a pair of white woollen mittens. The men fare best at a proposal party, as the prizes go to them.

Billious Dyspepsia

A DREADFUL COMPLAINT ACCOMPANIED BY HEADACHE, SICKNESS OF THE STOMACH, VOMITING THAT CAN BE PERMANENTLY AND QUICKLY CURED BY FERROZONE

Some persons have attacks of Billious Dyspepsia very frequently, and feel as if they were about to die.

The whole system seems to collapse. The tongue becomes coated, the face a sallow pallor, and a bitter taste is always noticeable in the mouth. At times the bowels are very constipated, but occasional acute diarrhoea is caused by the accumulation of bile in the system.

It is highly dangerous to allow such a condition to imperil your life. It must be cured and the simplest and surest remedy is Ferrozone. It digests every particle of food eaten, and prevents the waste products from clogging up the system.

Ferrozone restores all deranged organs to a healthy, vigorous condition. It keeps the bowels well regulated, makes the kidneys eliminate all poisons from the blood, and supplies the necessary elements to build up and strengthen the entire body.

Mr. Louis Meehan, one of Peterborough's most enterprising and well known business men, during the past three years was an unceasing sufferer from Bilious Dyspepsia. He was cured permanently by Ferrozone and is so anxious that all others may profit by his experience that he gives the following testimonial.

"About three years ago," says Mr. Meehan, "I had the Grippe which left me in a very run down condition that finally developed into Dyspepsia. I was unable to eat but a few things and had a craving for acid. I gave up treating with the doctors because they did not help me, and on the advice of a friend used Ferrozone. It not only cured by of Dyspepsia and Billiousness, but has built up my strength to what it was before I had the Grippe. I can recommend Ferrozone as an ideal restorative."

Ferrozone is capable of digesting all classes of food, and contains in a highly concentrated form the elements necessary for strengthening and reconstructing, and nourishing the stomach and other digestive organs. It is a builder of blood, muscle and fat, and makes sickly, weak, disheartened people strong and well. Ferrozone gives you force, energy, vim and spirit and stress every time. Sold by all druggists. Price 50c. per box or three boxes for $1.25. By mail from N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

SUGAR COMPANY NOTES

Nine Beet Seeders or Drills Arrive and Sent to Farmers

Yesterday morning Mr. Geo. W. Bennett, assistant of the Peterborough Sugar Company, received from Albion Mich., nine beet drills for planting sugar beets. These machines are simple in their contrivance, but are exceedingly ingenious, are indispensible to the beet farmer. One machine will plant ten acres a day. They have been distributed as follows: One each to Smith, Douro, Otonabee and North Monaghan.

Mr. Bennet reports that the Company has now 428 acres of its own, which will be planted and worked.

Yesterday morning there arrived by C.P.R., 130 girls from the Barnardo homes in England. From the station they were at once marched to Hazel Brae, the Canadian Home of this institution for girls.

The little ones are a sturdy lot. They were brought over under the care of Mrs. Owens. The children are mostly under 12 years, a comparatively few being over that age.

Homes have already been secured for many of them. About 50 will be distributed and settled today, and the balance as soon as good homes can be found for them.

—The town has purchased a double barrelled shot gun for the use of the police in looking after tagless dogs.

THE LATE JOSEPH PERRIN

A Well Known and Respected Citizen Passes Away

We are sorry to record the death of Mr. Joseph Perrin, of Bailieboro, which occurred at his late home on Sunday. He was apparently in mid-life when death overtook him being only 48 years of age; heart failure being the immediate cause. He comes of a very large and honorable family, and leaves behind a sorrowing wife and one daughter, at home, besides one son Mr. Harvey Perrin, of Lindsay, so well and favorably known in Peterborough, while in the employ of Mr. R. Neill. Mr. Perrin has several relatives in town including Mr. J. Laing and Mr. Thos. Aikens, who are brothers-in-laws.

The deceased was well and favorably known in both town and county. The funeral will take place from his home to the Bailieboro cemetery at one o'clock today.

DEATH OF A PIONEER

Mr. Frederick Edwards, Formerly of Dummer Is Called Home

One of the oldest settlers of the County of Peterborough died at his new home on Water street yesterday morning, in the person of the late Frederick Edwards, the countyones one of the best known and most highly respected individuals that has ever dwelt within her borders. He was born in Wiltshire, England, about eighty-five years ago, came with other relatives and settled in the Township of Dummer in the year 1831, where he and so many of his relatives and friends from the same part in the Old Country settled that the road passing north amongst them was called the English line.

If an "honest man is the noblest work of God," then we have lost in the person of the deceased, one of the grandest pieces of the Almighty's creation. His heart overflowed with kindness and cordiality of manner. He was cheerful, and generous to a fault, and we do not believe he ever bore any hatred in his heart toward any human being, and it is with deep and sincere sorrow that we bid farewell to so good a man.

The sorrowing sons are —Joseph Mark, Samuel, Henry, of this county; and Robert of Sarnia. The daughters are Mrs. John Anderson, of Douro, and Mrs. J. Booth, of town. The late Mrs. G. W. Yelland was also a daughter of the deceased.

The funeral takes place from his late home on Water street at one o'clock to-morrow to the family plot in Warsaw.

Lord Strathmore's Mysterious Castle.

Large and lively parties are those which Lord and Lady Strathmore are accustomed to gather round them at Glamis Castle. Yet (writes a correspondent), whether owing to the uncanny legends connected with the place, or to the rather mysterious and serious demeanor which characterises the present lord of the castle, there is always an element of (shall I say?) uneasiness about the guests of Glamis, especially those who are staying there for the first time. Unexpected things do certainly happen there: witness an anecdote told me by a young lady visitor to the castle who was one of a large party assembled there an autumn or two ago. The season was an abnormally wet one, and on rainy afternoons the house-party used to amuse themselves in the billiard-room, playing (to quote an expression of Disraeli's in "Lothair") with billiard-balls games that were not billiards, and so whiling away a few hours in pleasant fashion enough.

On one of these afternoons, as the assembled guests were in the middle of an exciting and particularly noisy game of billiard-fives, they suddenly became aware that their host was standing in the midst of them, with that grave, aloof and melancholy look on his face which is so familiar to all who know him. "I want you," he said to the by this time perfectly silent and expectant guests, "all to go upstairs to your bedrooms now at once, and kindly to remain in them until you hear a bell ring, when you will be quite at liberty to come down again." Without more ado the visitors, including my informant, silently stole away, like the Arabs of the poem. In due time the bell rang, and the party reassembled to finish the game. But the incident was certainly an odd one.

Rule for Success.

"What is your rule of business—your maxim?" we ask of the Wall street baron. "Very simple," he answers. "I pay for something that I can't get, with money that I haven't got, and then sell what I never had for more than it ever cost."

Gloomy thoughts become habitual to the dyspeptic. He looks on the dark side of things and every mole hill becomes a mountain. His condition affects his business judgment and mars his home relations.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures dyspepsia and other diseases of the organs of digestion and nutrition. It gives buoyancy of mind as well as health of body because it removes the physical cause of mental depression.

It enables the perfect digestion and assimilation of food, and the body is strengthened by nutrition which is the only source of physical strength.

"I was afflicted with what the doctors called nervous indigestion. Took medicine from my family physician to no avail," writes Mr. Thos. O. Lever, of Lever, Richland Co., S. C. "At night would have cold or hot feet and hands, alternately. I was getting very nervous and suffered a great deal mentally, thinking that death would soon claim me. Always expected something unusual to take place; was irritable and impatient, and greatly reduced in flesh. I could scarcely eat any thing that would not produce a bad feeling in my stomach. After some hesitation, I decided to try a few bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and 'Pellets.' After taking several bottles of each, found I was improving. I continued for six months or more, off and on. I have to be careful yet, at times, of what I eat, in order that I may feel good and strong. I fully believe if any one suffering with indigestion or torpid liver or chronic cold would take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and 'Pleasant Pellets' and observe a few simple hygienic rules, they would soon be greatly benefited, and with a little perseverance would be entirely cured."

Biliousness is cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

GAMEY ENQUIRY RESUMED, MANITOULIN CONSERVATIVES TELL OF CAMPAIGN, ARGUMENT WILL OCCUPY OVER TWO DAYS

World Reporter Saw Mr. Stratton with Sullivan in the Corridor at the Parliament Buildings.

Conservatives Believed in Gamey--The Evidence Nearly All in, Argument will Commence Late Next Week

The Gamey Commission resumed its labors again yesterday morning and took evidence for two hours and a half, after which it adjourned until today at ten o'clock. The witness of most importance this morning was Mr. Charles Cavers, the World reporter, of whose acquaintance Frank Sullivan boasted to Mr. Gamey. It was not in this connection, however, that he was called, but to give a refutation to Hon. Mr. Stratton's assertion that he had not talked with Frank Sullivan from September 9 to March 9. Mr. Cavers claims to be an eye witness to a conversation in what, he thinks, was the first ten days of February, the period in which the "X. Y. Z." letters and enclosures were prepared. The other witnesses were from Manitoulin, and were for the most men closely identified with the Conservative organization, who swore that they regarded Mr Gamey as a straight Conservative candidate when he ran in the last election.

The question of whether Mr. Gamey will be called by the prosecution or by the Judges has not yet been decided. Mr. Blake and his colleagues are inclined to take the view that nothing relevant to the enquiry has been presented with regard to Mr. Gamey himself on which a reply is necessary. The Judges, however, may desire to call Mr. Gamey themselves as to the Ontario Bank deposit slip. The other witness to be called will be Mr. D. A. Jones, the Ontario Bank officials, and a few more political experts from Manitoulin. If the evidence is concluded to-morrow, argument will continue this week. This seems unlikely, however, and the plan at present in view is to clean up all the evidence this week, and adjourn until Thursday, May 21. It is estimated that the addresses of counsel will take three full days.

No Further Examination.

The Ontario Bank has finally decided, after some weeks of controversy, that no outsider shall be permitted to examine its books. A letter to this effect from Mr. Walter Barwick, K.C., was read, but it was added that the officials of the bank had been instructed to look into the books, and that they would be in a position to report to-morrow.

A couple of reports as to the condition of the jail at Little Current, a minor matter, which has come up in connection with the enquiry, were put in.

Mr. Charles Cavers, reporter for The World newspaper, was the first witness called. He testified that he knew Frank Sullivan personally and Hon. J. R. Stratton by sight. Between January 16 and February 10, of this year, he was visiting the Parliament Buildings daily. On one occasion he was with Sullivan in the corridor, and Mr. Stratton came along. Sullivan left him and remained in conversation with the Provincial Secretary for upwards of five minutes.

Mr. Johnston, in cross-examination, asked Mr. Cavers to fix the day of the week. He said that it was difficult, as he went to the Parliament Buildings every day at that time; it was, however, late in the afternoon, and he thought between the third and tenth of February. Sullivan told him that Stratton was a friend of his, and that he would introduce Cavers to him some day; and that Mr. Stratton would put him on to what was going on in the buildings.

Mr. Johnston read Mr. Stratton's testimony, in which he stated that he had not had an interview in the corridor about Gamey a few weeks before the House met, and asked Cavers if he would contradict it. The witness said he would not as he did not hear the subject of the conversation.

Mr. Ritchie, in re-examination, read extracts from Mr. Stratton's evidence in which he swore that he never talked or had communication with Frank Sullivan from September 9 until March 9, the day before the House met.

Mr. W. H. Hurst.

Mr. William H. Hurst, the well known Conservative barrister of Sault Ste. Marie, testified that he had campaigned in Manitoulin with Mr. Gamey and that the latter had made it clear at his meetings that he was running on the straight Conservative platform. The only speakers at most of these meetings were Mr. Gamey, Dr. Fell and the witness.

In cross-examination, Mr. Hurst said he knew nothing about Mr. Gamey's personal canvass.

Dr. Fell, who was a Conservative candidate in East Algoma in the campaign of 1898 followed. In last May's campaign he stumped Manitoulin in all its settlements on Mr. Gamey's behalf. At some meetings Mr. Gamey was present with him. He swore that Gamey ran as a straight Conservative. He had spoken in many ridings, but had never heard more bitter denunciations of the Major portion of the Ross Government's policy than those which fell from Mr. Gamey's lips.

Dr. Fell said he wished to clear up some misapprehension that existed among honest people on this question. Every candidate in his experience, be he Grit or Tory, used certain stereotyped phrases stating that he would reserve to himself the right of judgment on the measures he would support. That was all that Gamey had said.

John Kinney's Testimony.

John Kinney, farmer and Town Clerk, of Gore Bay, was next sworn. He stated that he had attended several meetings held by Mr. Gamey, at which Mr. Gamey spoke as a Conservative and denounced the policy of the Ross Government. At the Conservative convention Gamey was given a free hand, but witness said he would certainly find fault with Mr [illegible] measure in the interest of the constituency alone. Witness naively admitted he was a strong politician.

J. A. Kinney, who was one of the concealed witnesses in the piano factory, said he had heard Mr. Gamey at several campaign meetings. Mr. Gamey said nothing to justify anyone in thinking that he would support the Liberal Government. witness spoke at the meetings, and was "in front of the piano." Personally, he would not condemn a man elected as a Conservative who supported occasional measures that were in the public interests, and advocated by the other party, but he took the position that Manitoulin should send an Opposition member if he was the only one elected.

Samuel King, of Sturgeon Falls, clerk, resided at Providence Bay during the general elections of 1902. He corroborated the evidence of previous witnesses. During his testimony it transpired that he had been in Chicago for some weeks in 1902, but had returned in time to cast a vote in the election. This led Mr. McEvoy to suggest a thrilling question to the witness "Are you an American citizen?" Witness replied in the negative.

A. A. Riley, a Toronto citizen, who came from Little Current last December, and was formerly Mayor of the town, next took the stand. He was nominated at the Conservative convention, but retired in Mr. Gamey's favor. Nothing was said at any of the meetings about Mr. Gamey giving an "independent support" to the Ross Government. Mr. Johnston was curious to know if the member for Manitoulin should oppose bad measures initiated by the Conservatives, but the witness didn't expect there would be such measures.

Mr. Ritchie then introduced a little humor into the proceedings. He pointed out that Mr. Stratton, when asked why on October 2, he had addressed a letter "My dear Gamey" had said that possible he had the letter addressed "My dear Foy" in his mind. He proposed to put in the latter letter, which was dated Dec. 27 last. Since it had not been written until three months after the one sent to Mr. Gamey, it could not have been in Mr. Stratton's mind.

Mr. Johnston, who feigned to take the matter seriously, said that Mr. Stratton reefrred to an earlier letter of Mr. Blake's, written to Mr. Foy previous to the last general election.

Mr. McPherson put in a number of technical exhibits, covering minor points in the case. The question of how Mr. D. A. Jones should be called was discussed. Mr. Johnston undertook to examine him in chief, with the privilege of cross-examination if new matter were brought out.

The Chancellor asked if Mr. Gamey would testify. Mr. Ritchie said that Mr. Blake, who was absent from the court, was considering that point.

The court then adjourned until 10 o'clock this morning.

First Train of Frank Refugees Returning to Their Homes

Blairmore, N.W.T., May 12—Frank was re-occupied yesterday by order of Premier Haultain of the North West Government, and the town, which has been completely deserted for nine days, awaiting momentary demolition which did not come, is again a scene of life and activity. Premier Haultain arrived at Frank yesterday to receive the report of the commission which has been making observations for the Government.

The conclusion reached by experts was that slides will continue for some time, but to what extent is a matter of judgment. They might come down frequently, or there might be a big slide that would wipe out a part of the town, but it was uncertain. Premier Haultain caused a number of citizens to be assembled, and stated that while a certain danger existed from further slides occurring there was a possibility that none of a serious character might occur. He did not feel like permanently closing the town, and if the people chose to return at their own hazard the movement would be started. Therefore he made the declaration that the town was open.

Merchants immediately opened their stores, and a few residents returned to their homes. It is likely more of the residents of the town will resume, but the majority of the people will doubtless make their home at Blairmore for the summer.

THE TURKISH AUTHORITIES AVERT A GENERAL MASSACRE BY ALBANIANS

SULTAN CAN PREVENT MASSACRE

Turkish Statistics Being Notoriously Untrustworthy

London, May 12.—The Times correspondent [illegible] thinks the prospects of peace for the coming summer to be more favorable now than at any time since January.

"At a meeting between the Bulgarian Premier and the Ottoman Commissioner, held Monday," the correspondent continues, "the question of the Turkish note was settled amicably. This ends a dangerous situation. In six weeks' time the entire rural population of Bulgaria and Macedonia will be occupied with the harvest."

AFFAIRS IN SALONICA.

Salonica, via London, May 12.—There is a conspicuous absence of Bulgarians from the streets of Salonica and a conspicuous presence of foreign flags flying from the windows. Turkish statistics being notoriously untrustworthy, the Consuls estimate the population roughly at between 100,000 and 150,000. It is mainly made up of Jews and Greeks, and even the Bulgarian agent does not place the number of Bulgarians above 6,000, the estimate being probably too high by 1,000 or 2,000. The Levantine correspondent of the French and German journals have sent out absurd reports that 3,000 Bulgarians have been slain. The Turkish officials have, of course, sought to minimize the losses, but no Consul now estimates the number of deaths at over 100 or 150. Although more than [illegible] to the exaggerated figures of the earliest despatches, only fifty-five Bulgarian deaths are positively known.

CREDIT TO TURKS.

It is generally acknowledged that the Turkish authorities deserve unlimited credit for keeping in hand the fanatical troops and the enormous anti-Bulgarian population here. I am informed that one battalion of Albanian troops was in the city on the second day of the outbreak, and grew mutinous, talking freely among themselves of killing the Bulgarians and raiding and plundering the town. Their officers, learning what was astir, contrived to have their ammunition belts secretly removed, and the entire force ordered off to the frontier of Bulgaria the next morning. This and other instances show that the Turks can forestall massacres when they choose.

Bulgarians Dare Not Appear on the Streets of Salonica

CITY OF TERROR, PRISONS FULL

The Hospitals Also Crowded to Their Capacity

SULTAN CAN PREVENT MASSACRE.

A Consul who passed through the exciting scenes of the Armenian atrocities assures me that no massacre will take place in Macedonia without an order from the Sultan. The Bulgarian panic is appalling. Bulgarians are afraid to show their faces outside of their own houses, and now they get food and contrive to exist is a mystery.

MISERY IN PRISON.

The authorities report that there are 400 in prison; the number may be 700. I attempted to visit the ancient prison in the walls at the back of the town. After being searched from head to foot I passed the main gate but was stopped at the jailor's office, where I caught a glimpse through the bars of the inner gate, of a hideous mass of suffering humanity, huddled together.

The hospitals are overflowing, the wounded Turks naturally being treated and cared for in preference to others. The women are in despair not knowing whether their men are dead or alive, as no list of the names of parents is available for relief of anxious inquiries, and only gruff dismissals are received at the doors of the prisons and hospitals when questions are asked of the missing. Many are probably starving, huddled in cellars and barns.

WHAT POWERS CAN DO.

The Austrian and Italian warships alone can land 2,500 marines at any moment in case their presence is necessary. It has been amazing that with the bitter race feuds of the population and the fanaticism of the Asiatic troops a general massacre has been averted. The general impression is that all is not yet over.

ARMENIANS ACTIVE.

Constantinople, May 12.—Armenian revolutionary bands have entered the districts of Bayazid and Sasun(Armenia) from Russia.

Sturgeon Point Boat Service

The Fenelon Falls Star says the cottagers of Sturgeon Point are discussing the advisability of forming a joint stock company and building a commodious passenger steamer of their own, in order to secure better accommodation. We have not heard of any stir in that direction, and would have a sincere compassion for the outside stockholders who might be coaxed into the scheme. It may be that some disgruntled cottager has been complaining to the Star man, but such equilitions are not to be taken seriously. If the majority of Sturgeon Point dwellers are not satisfied with the grand service between Lindsay and Sturgeon Point supplied by the Esturion and Manita daily, and the Kenosha twice a week or more, then they are most unreasonable beings and will never be content until each man can afford to keep a power yacht moored outside his cottage, in order that he may go and come when he pleases.

Grape-Nuts

Fresh and Strong

Food That Sends One Along

"I found a food at last that I could work on and that would keep me fresh and strong. I have been a school teacher for eleven years, and every year toward the last have been bothered particularly with my stomach and serious constipation.

"Last year I used Grape-Nuts regularly at both morning and evening meals and the result was really wonderful. I have been entirely cured of the troubles spoken of and don't know what it is to take a dose of physic any more. The old nervousness and sleeplessness have gone. No more do I lie awake nights until my brain is in a whirl. Now I sleep all night long like a healthy child.

"I was the only teacher out of fourteen in our public school who did not miss a day on account of sickness during the last session. I have been able to do more hard studying than ever before and took up the teachers' state reading work, completed the course and passed a successful examination at the last institute.

"Grape-Nuts in my case has proved the truth of the assertion that it is a brain and nerve builder. I would especially recommend it for tired, over-worked school teachers, or any other brain worker."

HOME RULE FOR IRELAND IS ASSURED

Lord Dunraven Thinks That the Long Cherished Desire will be Realized

THE NEW IRISH LAND BILL IS A GOOD START

The Measure Meets with Approval Everywhere—Ireland and England Drawn Close Together

London, May 12.—It is apparent that the time is not far distant when the Earl of Dunraven, who was once a contestant for the honor of lifting the America's Cup, will be the leader of the Irish Nationalist party and, within a decade, be the Premier of an Irish Parliament sitting in Dublin.

The authorship of the idea of the present Irish land purchase bill, which has brought Ireland and England closer than in centuries, is generally attributed to Dunraven, although the parliamentary parent of the bill is Colonel Shaw-Taylor, who doesn't own an acre of Irish land, while Dunraven is a large owner.

The Irish land bill, which has made political bedfellows of the Radical Irish Nationalists and the most stubborn of British Tories, is meeting approval everywhere, despite the ultimate cost to the English treasury. The bill, conceived and expounded in circumstances unique in the history of Ireland, is an epoch-making measure in the highest sense. It is backed by a consensus of parliamentary opinion never before known taken on any positive piece of Irish legislation, and is backed almost unanimously by the Irish people. England and Ireland are no longer enemies. Healy, Redmond, O'Brien and Davitt are now names spoken praisefully by Tory leaders. A Tory member of Parliament said to our correspondent tonight:

"While home rule is a phrase not much used nowadays, it is closer to becoming a reality than in Gladstone's fiercest days. Home rule by any other name will smell just as sweet in Ireland, and Ireland will have it within a decade if Dunraven lives. Witin a decade you will see him sitting in Dublin as Premier of an Irish Parliament. All the forces and influence of the British Government are working to cement the alliance between Ireland and England, and if an Irish Parliament in Dublin is necessary it will be conceded."

While the Tory press is asserting there is no connection between the boon to Irish tenants of the ownership of their farms and ultimate home rule, the possibility of the latter was carefully considered by the Government before it accepted the terms of Wyndham's bill. Home rule for Ireland is nearer than any Tory member of the Government cares to admit for political reasons.

PET SCHEME

Of the Kaiser was Opposed So General Von Gossler will Quit

Berlin, May 12.—General Von Gossler, who, as announced May 7, is to retire from the War Ministry after three months' leave of absence, determined, according to the Danzig Neueste Nachrichten, to retire because he was unable to support Emperor William's private military Cabinet in the project to add two army corps and a considerable force of cavalry to the army, the whole increase exceeding 10,000 men.

THE CHINESE HIGHBINDERS

Four Ringleaders Under Arrest for Murderous Conspiracy

San Francisco, May 11—Four of the eleven presidents of the See Yup Society have been arrested for the conspiracy to murder 300 members of the Chinese Society of English Education, and two of them—Gee Hong Ou, who is not only president of the On Yick Highbinders Tong, but of the See Yups, and Lee Ying, president of the Bow Leung Tong, are said to have made complete confessions to the police. The other seven presidents are in hiding, but, if found, will be charged with conspiracy to commit murder. It is believed that the evidence already obtained is sufficient to send them all to the penitentiary for long terms. The men under the ban of the See Yup Society were suspected of giving the authorities information regarding gambling under police protection in Chinatown.

Paris Murder Mystery

Paris, May 13.—The mysterious murder of Mme. de Brienne, who was found strangled in her rooms here, has aroused widespread interest. The police officials followed a clue indicating that it was an act of an Englishman, but they now claim that an American is implicated. The police do not know the name of the suspect, but they are following vague description views. The victim, who was a well known figure, came from America.

A DESPERATE EFFORT TO FIND THE MAP

American Diplomats Hunting Far and Wide for Alaskan Evidence

FROM THE ARCHIVES

Drawing by a Russian Officer Has Been Copied and will be Used in the Arbitration

St. Petersburg, May 12.—Considerable activity is being displayed by the American Embassy here with regard to the Alaskan frontier. The Alaskan territory, it will be remembered, was sold by Alexander II., to the United States Government. The frontier was not at that time particularly well defined, and would probably have remained indefinite had not the discovery of gold altered the aspect of affairs. The gold discoveries at Klondike and other places in the neighborhood of the frontier have raised the question of its demarkation to one of great importance, in which Great Britain, as represented in Canada, is very deeply interested. The movement of the frontier ever so little will affect a very large quantity of gold, for it is well known that the whole district is rich in auriferous deposits. Moreover the Canadian claim, if upheld, would give Canada a free port to the Klondike.

The United States Government is preparing itself to secure every possible inch of ground. By the agreement of sale, which was signed by both Governments at the transfer of Alaska, the frontier is only determined as lying between two particular minutes of a degree, its definite position not being further indicated. The chief document in evidence is a chart of the River Stakhine, known to contain much gold, the division of which by the frontier is now under debate. The chart was made by an officer commissioned by the Russian Government previous to the transfer, and was deposited in the Russian Admiralty, where it has remained ever since. Needless to say, the chart was very favorable to the Russian interests.

At the time of the transfer of Alaska, a copy of this chart was given to the United States Government, and just lately the American Embassy in St. Petersburg has been asking for another copy. A copy of the original chart, signed and certified to be a true copy, has been handed over to the United States Ambassador by the Ministers of Marine and Finance, and it is at the present time on its way to Washington. The attitude of the Embassy has been such as to show clearly that the chart is considered an important weapon in the settlement of this international question.

The whole attitude of the Russian Government is to be highly commended, for while unable in courtesy to refuse a copy of the chart of the country it has so recently sold, it has absolutely refused to guarantee the frontier as there delineated.

A PROFITABLE BOTTLE

A Guest at a Local Hotel Tells a Good Story

A rather good story was told The Times the other day, which is too rich to keep.

A visitor was at this hotel for a week or so, and when the bill was presented he noticed that he had been charged with a bottle of wine of a brand he had never used. Moreover, he had no recollection of having ordered any bottle of the kind at any time. He complained of the overcharge to the proprietor, who blandly remarked:

"Very well, sir; I'll take it off. You see, the clerk who got that bottle of wine from the cellar forgot to whom it had been served, so I charged it against every guest in the house. All who didn't have it will object, and the one who did will pay."

"Well, but aren't you afraid that someone who didn't have it will pay too?" asked the visitor.

"No," was the reply. "I'm afraid they won't."

Eleven guests each paid for [illegible] bottle of wine.

UNION LABEL

PETERBOROUGH, MAY 11, 1903.

RUSSIA AND THE POWERS

The news that Russia has re-occupied, or rather reinforced, her troops in Manchuria, and is already engaged in constructing forts commanding strategic positions is of the most serious character. The Russian troops were to have evacuated New Chwang a month ago but have been moving with the dilatoriness which characterises the diplomacy of Russia when it says one thing and firmly intends to do the other. The news of the erection of forts can only have one meaning, that the Bear intends to maintain its grip on the province. England, the United States and Japan are thoroughly aroused and the prospect of trouble is ominous, though it can scarcely be believed that Russia would face such an alliance. It has been suggested that the operations in the far east are intended to distract attention from the progress of events in Turkey, but inasmuch as England is the only one of the powers in the triple alliance against Russia that is interested in Turkey and that only to the limited extent of preserving the autonomy of the Ottoman empire in case the pending disturbances should threaten it, the explanation does [illegible]. There are other powers besides England interested in the fate of Turkey, and event if war broke out tomorrow some time would elapse before conditions would be arrived at to call for the interference of England. Meanwhile, the situation in China is acute and, if Russia means business, the crisis will be precipitated almost immediately.

A BLOW AT UNION METHODS

If the injunction granted the other day by the Toronto courts holds good, the trades-unionists will be the losers of quite an effective weapon in their present-day methods of carrying on disputes. Readers of the newspapers may often have observed in the advertising columns to the effect that mechanics of one description or another are requested "to keep away from a certain town, there being a strike on," or words to that effect. Mr. Justice Britton considers this usage an unlawful interference with the rights of employers and would be employees, for to the latter it directly says that if they are so obstinate as to be willing to work when the unions do not wish it, their course will be rendered distinctly unpleasant to themselves.

A JOKE ON MOTHER NATURE

In St. Paul the scientific sharps connected with the state experimental station have succeeded in playing a huge joke on Mother Nature that may make all the farmers of the far distant future rich beyond the dreams of avarice.

They have a potato vine doing double duty. Beneath the soil it is growing tubers to the best of its youthful ability. Above the ground it is bearing tomatoes with fair prospects of a crop.

The freak was accomplished by grafting.

Think of the possibilities!

Two crops, or three, or half a dozen, all from a single plot of ground in one season! Peanuts below and watermelons above! Why shouldn't we grow strawberries on pumpkin vines and grow them as big as league baseballs? Why not hitch sweet potatoes to the roots of the apple trees and get tubers possessing Baldwin flavor and Brobdingnagian size?

Of course the thing is a joke, to an extent, but there is an idea in it.

The seedless lemon is a fact, and science eliminated the seeds. We are to have smooth-skinned peaches in near future, and all along the line Nature is being educated to do more and better work. Today the man who farms or runs a truck patch, mixing science with his labor, gets a bank account, when his less progressive neighbor struggles with a mortgage.

It isn't chance the grows 150 bushels of corn to the acre, or eighty bushels of wheat.

It is a matter of brain, and soil study, the seed selection, and culture.

Experiment is back of most American successes. They are the evolution of men's failures. The potato vine that is growing two food products is worth much if it causes thought and makes even a few men realize that, content with old methods, they are not getting from the soil that which can be obtained by the use of no more labor, but a more liberal application of brains.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

When a man reckons up how much it costs him to live he figures on how much is left for clothes; when a woman has figured up what her clothes cost she estimates what is left to live on.

The Americans, having gone to limit in commercializing Niagara Falls by harnessing the power on their own side and decorating the banks with factories, are putting up a tremendous appeal for the preservation of the natural beauties of to great cataract, with a special protest against the commercialising of the Canadian side. It is too bad that the primeval beauty of the surrounding scenery cannot be preserved, but it looks very much as if the Falls was too valuable commercially to be maintained as the greatest show on earth for tourists. An untouched gold mine would also be an interesting exhibit for curious visitors, but to allow it to remain untouched on that account would be an expensive way of gratifying curiosity.

Splitting Headaches

CAN BE STOPPED AND THE CONDITIONS WHICH CAUSE THEM CURED BY FERROZONE

Poisons accumulate in the blood and spread with it every movement to all parts of the body. The brain becomes congested, the nerves irritated, and the result is that awful headache so well known to the female sex.

Most of these poisons are absorbed into the blood from the waste matter that has accumulated in the intestines resulting from indigestion. Matter which should be promptly passed from the system through natural channels.

Ferrozone cleanses the entire intestinal tract, and the liver and kidneys as well. It cures constipation and its many attendant evils. It makes the body strong and the blood pure, induces natural sleep and enables one to eat and drink anything at any time without risk of headache, nervousness or skin eruptions.

Ferrozone is nature's own remedy for headaches. It is a lasting potent tonic and the greatest health maker the world has ever seen. It masters all female derangements, and restores weak, sickly women to a healthy vigorous condition of mind and body.

No other remedy so effectually meets the requirements of a health giving tonic and regulator as Ferrozone. Every woman and growing girl can derive marvellous benefit from its regular use, and if you suffer from Chlorosis, Anaemia, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Poor Appetite, Nervousness or female disorders of any kind, you can make no mistake in selecting Ferrozone for a cure.

Every reliable druggist recommends and sells Ferrozone for 50 cents a box. Be sure you get the genuine article, and refuse a substitute. Remember the name and insist on only Ferrozone. Sent to your address if price is forwarded to N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

Buried Gold

By FRED WHISHAW.

Author of "A Tsar of the Terrible," etc.

"Now, see here, my lad," said Evans, "you've done nothing that can matter, and you needn't be ashamed of havin' told me where he's to be found. All you've got to be afraid of is tellin' a single soul in the world that you've seen me to-night. I shall be sure to know it if you do. You may swear to that with your last dyin' breath! And when I do know of it, you haven't more'n another hour to live, for I'll follow and cut you in strips with this knife wherever you are! An' you may swear to that, too!"

"I won't tell! I won't tell! I swear I won't!" blubbered poor Beadon.

"All right, sonny. If you don't, no one isn't going to hurt you. It's only if you do."

This interview was more than poor Harry Beadon could bear. He left Sandown the following morning, and walked up to Southampton with his bundle under his arm in order to find a berth in the first vessel that would take him out of a land beset with perils. He shipped as master's boy in a small coasting vessel, and was afloat by the evening.

That day Dick Robinson paid his first visit to Ruby. What reception he may have expected from her and what he received are both matters as to which there is no evidence to bring forward, excepting that he did not remain very long, and that he was pale and worried-looking when he reached home—so much so that the landlady remarked upon it, telling a friend in the back parlor that Mr. Robinson looked worse than ever today, and she was quite afraid he must be going to have another attack of illness.

"After what he's been through that wouldn't be no great wonder!" said the visitor, for by this time the story of Dick's return from the grave, together with various versions of his adventures had passed from end to end of the little town.

Keith noticed his friend's dejection, and it puzzled him much. "He made some mistake with her. Too affectionate, maybe, or p'r'aps too confident, and she was queer with him. Ruby's not one to take liberties with. He's got to learn that!"

So uncommunicative and depressed was Dick that Keith went out, in the evening, to seek more congenial society among his friends.

"You don't look well, mate," he said at parting. "You'd be wise to go to bed early. Tell Mrs. Benton not to open to anyone but me."

After Keith had left the house Robinson began to walk up and down the room. He cursed freely and seemed to be in the worst of humors, but he mentioned no names and gave no indication of the source of his trouble. Presently an idea seemed to occur to him. He let himself out of the front door and went out, down the street, and into the public-house at the corner. Here he stood at the bar and drank hard for an hour. Men came and stood by him, attempting to hold conversation, but failed, and gave up the attempt very quickly, observing that he was as short and surly as a sick bear. He would drink, but he would not talk.

When, near closing time, he staggered from the bar and out of the door, he was dazed and uncertain which way to turn for home. He chose the wrong way, and walked unsteadily in the contrary direction.

So unsteadily, indeed, that once or twice he was near falling on his nose, and felt tipsily glad when some good Samaritan caught him under the arm and supported him.

"It's a longer [illegible] thought," muttered Dick. "That's the worst of living in these darned outskirts!" He pronounced his words thickly and perhaps his companions—there were two of them—did not easily follow his remarks. At any rate, they made no reply. It was dark, for the lamps in this outlying road, leading to the downs, were scarce and far apart. Even if it had been light it is possible that Dick would not have recognized the obliging friends so kindly proffering their assistance, for, as a matter of fact, he was very drunk indeed.

Someone remaining at the bar after Dick had staggered away remarked that this was Robinson, the man who had returned from the grave—the survivor of the "Hecuba." His adventures didn't seem to have improved his temper, for a more surly, ill-mannered chap he had never come across.

"He's drunk," said a candid friend. "So'd you be if you'd been so long on a bloomin' island where you couldn't get a drink. It makes you mild for anything stronger'n milk!"

"Where's he stayin'?" asked a third man, and when told that Dick was living with his old pal, Keith Adams, this man asked why he had turned up the Down's road instead of to the right?

But the general consensus of opinion was that that was surely his own lookout, even though it wasn't the safest road, that by the Downs along the top of the cliff, for a man who had been drinking so steadily as Robinson had.

All these good fellows had to recall and repeat these remarks a day or two later at Sandown police court before the district coroner, for a body had been found in the sea, at the foot of the Downs Cliffs, which had been identified as that of poor Dick Robinson, and there was important evidence, since it enabled the coroner's jury to pronounce, without a dissentient voice, that the deceased had been found drowned, having missed his way and fallen over the cliffs while under the influence of drink. The jury added a rider recommending that a railing be placed along the edge of the cliff in order to minimize the risk of similar accidents in future.

CHAPTER XIII.

A Fair Stowaway.

Though Keith Adams was a witness at the inquest, and testified to the depression from which the deceased had suffered on the day of his death, and which, as all charitably admitted, must account for his rash indulgence at the public-house, he said nothing of any suspicion he may have entertained as to foul play. There was nothing to prove it.

Robinson had turned up the street instead of down it of his own accord, as many could and did testify. No strangers had been noticed in the vicinity; it would be useless and foolish to stir up unprovable suspicion.

Keith thought much of Ruby Amright, and pitied her with all his soul. She must be suffering horrible tortures of grief, yet he dared not offer her sympathy. He had attempted such an enterprise on a former occasion, and the attempt had been a lamentable failure. He would rather leave Sandown this time without seeing her again.

There was prospect of getting out of the place speedily, as it happened, for Tom Foster—eagerly encouraged by Jes-

TRANSFER OFFICE, BRISTOL, CONN.

This Company has a perpetual lease on 20 acres of proven oil land in SECTION NINE (9) of the Boulder district, and this section and the immediate vicinity have the best and largest number of producing wells in the entire district.

Our Well No. 1 came in, in January and is now pumping and shipping Oil regularly to the Refinery.

The Directors have decided to put down well No. 2 at once, and they now offer a block of the Treasury stock for the next 30 days at

10 Cents per Share, after that price will be advanced.

It is a well known fact that a 15 barrel well will pay over 100 per cent. profit upon its cost.

This is no longer a speculation for we have proved that oil is on our ground, and we now have oil in paying quantities, with two wells pumping we can soon pay dividends, and every well we put down increases our earning capacity.

This is a business proposition, managed by business men.

STOCK MARKETS

TEDIOUS BUT FAVORABLE

New York, May 12.—Every day that passes now brings the market closer to renewal of activities. Factors that are ceaselessly at work continue to favor the bull side. Most gratifying exhibits of net and gross earnings continue to be reported by the railways for April and for the first week in May. Eight roads show an increase for the first week in May aggregating 17 per cent. The week gone by was considerably given up to reports of "Crop damage." These tales were practically ridiculous. No one expects anything different than some deteriation from the "Perfection" report of last month, before July next. The fact nevertheless remains that we will garner a crop larger by fifty million bushels than was ever produced before in this country. As Mr. Kellogg says in yesterday's article in The Sun, "Easy money, good crops, big railroad earnings almost certainly resulting, in some cases increased dividends and prosperous general business, are the rocks upon which the security markets just now." Bradstreet's report on May 1st shows the stock of wheat in the United States and Canada to be about fifty-six million bushels only, or less for any corresponding period in four years past. European stocks are only fifty-two million bushels smaller than for any time in twenty years. The total American and European supply is only thirteen bushels larger than the low record in 1899. It is practically the same as prior to the great rise in wheat five years ago. Prospects as to crop are good at home and poor abroad. We will consequently have a great market at great prices. It means another era of inflation immediately ahead for stock prices. This summer should witness such a result. The hard headed financiers of the street who conduct the course of speculation cannot fail to see the point of the above situation. They are already preparing for the inevitable results by buying their stocks now. The bear raiders are given free reign, as it facilitates the process of securing stocks cheaply. We persistently urge you to avail yourself of the present offering opportunity. Buy some stocks immediately and hang on to them patiently.

HAIGHT & FREESE.

Woman's Failure in Her Sphere.

Women who choose to stay in the home will be glad to know that the "men" are coming to their relief. So says Charlotte Teller, in an interesting article in "Everybody's Magazine." Miss (or Mrs.) Teller starts off with the cheerful declaration that "woman has failed in her own peculiar sphere"—she has "never made any apparent effort to change her environment by inventing ways and means; consequently her work is still disorganized and generally inefficient." But man is hurrying to her rescue. He "is undoubtedly bringing order out of a domestic chaos by taking the various household occupations into the business world." It would be pleasant to record that he is doing this from a sense of gallantry, but it would not be true—"he is undertaking the work for business reasons, and for those reasons he is almost sure of success."

Man has taken weaving out of the home and put it into the factory, and he has taken over the manufacture of well nigh every article worn by every member of the family, from hats to shoes. He has solved the lighting problem, doing away with the troublesome kerosene lamps, and has developed the modern laundry, robbing wash-day of its old-time horror. To quote further:

"When man stepped over the kitchen threshold he showed his daring. But his excuse was again a valid one: it paid him to do it. He began to can fruits and fish in great quantities; vegetables were grown far from the home of the probable consumer and sent either canned or crated in refrigerator-cars which had come into being with the demand for them. Prepared foods for those who must cook before hurrying off to work in the morning, delicacies for the epicure, and health foods for those who have acquired conscious digestion from too great unconscious cerebration, were put in the markets. . . .

"The tendency of all occupations to leave the home has never been regarded as dangerous, yet it means that man is robbing woman of her sphere. He is freeing labor in the home and calling for more of it upon the market-places and in the factories. Woman will answer the call and step into the industrial open with the assurance that her presence is needed there more than in the household, because man has stepped into her place in the laundry, the kitchen, and the sewing-room. He is doing his work better than she ever did it, because he is working on the principles he has found to underlie good results in any trade—division of labor and organization. When he has undertaken a domestic problem, he has looked it squarely in the face, and if the equipment was not equal to the demands of the situation, he has invented new and improved machinery. He has learned the value of co-operation between man and man, and between man and machines, whereas woman is as strongly individualistic with regard to her breadpans and washtubs as though there were no such thing as advance possible."

We wish to extend to Mr. and Mrs. Hawkins, of Elizabeth street, Ashburnham, our sincere sympathy, owing to the sorrow they bear on account of the death of their sweet little girl who had only reached the age of one and a half years, when the grim messenger entered the house and has borne her hence. The funeral took place yesterday afternoon to the Roman Catholic cemetery.

This park consists of about six acres and faces the water, where there is a fine sandy beach for bathing. No more lovely place can be found on our back lakes than this spot.

Protest of Foresters

Court [illegible], Canadian Order of Foresters, Toronto, has adopted a resolution, protesting against the recent regulations of the Provincial Board of Health, compelling the isolation of scarlet fever patients. Part of the resolution is as follows: "We protest against the removal of children having scarlet fever from the care, treatment, attention and companionship of the mother, whom we believe to be the best person to look after and attend to her children; and request the proper civic authorities to seek to have these regulations revoked and annulled." A copy of the above resolution will be presented to the City Council at its next regular meeting.

Some Valuable Skins

Mr. Crawford Goffatt, fur buyer, of Orillia, shipped 10,000 skins the other day to the Montreal representatives of a Paris firm of furriers. Among the lot were two beautiful silver grey fox skins valued at $500, and over 7,000 muskrat pelts. Mr. Goffat laughed at the statement that muskrats are being exterminated, and says that there are as many rats today as there were twenty-five years ago. The muskrat is a prolific breeder and a source of a handsome revenue to the trapper. The skins are put to various uses in Paris, some being manufactured into imitation of other more rare and costly varieties, including the blue squirrel and mole skin. A couple of years ago Mr. Walter Kidd, who lives in the back country, shot a silver fox, whose skin is so valuable, and sold it to Mr. Brightman, of town.

CURIOUS THINGS

Come From Coffee Drinking

A lady in New York City suffered an accident to her leg and a running sore followed that medical science tried to cure for many years but unknown to her, the coffee she drank daily kept the blood in a condition that would not let the sore heal. "Three years ago," says this lady, "I was advised to drink Postum and give up coffee of which I was very fond. To say that I am thankful now for having done this is putting it very mildly for as soon as I made the shift from coffee to Postum my leg began to heal and in a few weeks was quite well.

"It has never troubled me since and I think it marvelous. Neither have I suffered from the bilious headaches which used to afflict me. I can give you the names of many of my friends who are as firm friends of Postum as I." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

This is a case where Postum made red blood in a hurry. This lady thought it marvelous because when trouble of years standing was cured in a few weeks through giving up coffee and using Postum in its place. Nothing marvelous about it, only the simplest scientific reasons that it will pay anyone to look into.

Good healthy red blood will cure most any disease. Coffee in many people, destroys the red corpuscles and produces white or watery blood. A definite change is made by leaving off coffee entirely and using Postum. You can prove this by trial.

DEATH OF MRS. WILLIAMSON

Another Respected Citizen is Called Away

A large circle of friends and acquaintances will be sorry to hear of the death of Mrs. John Williamson, which occurred at her late home on Water street yesterday afternoon.

She was a daughter of the late Robert Tully, who was one of the first settlers of the county. She leaves behind a husband and five children to mourn the loss of a loving wife and an indulgent and affectionate mother.

The family is composed of two sons, Mr. R. G. Williamson, town; Mr. David Williamson, Norwood, and three daughters, Mrs. Wm. Davidson, of Otonabee; Mrs. A. Cunningham, of Norwood, and Miss Agnes Williamson at home.

The deceased lady will be especially missed in St. Paul's Presbyterian church, of which she has been a consistent member and a faithful worker for many years.

The funeral will take place from her late home, 516 Water street, to the Little Lake Cemetery to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.

MANY JEWS BUTCHERED, DETAILS OF SLAUGHTER

MANY ARE WOUNDED AND DIE OF TERROR

One of the Foulest Blots on the History of the Great Northern Power.

New York, May 14.—The central committee for the relief of Kisineff sufferers gave out a statement last night which reads:

"The full story of the terrible massacres which occurred in Kishineff, the capital of Bessarabia, April 21 to April 23, is now coming to hand and shows that at least 100 Jewish men, women and children and some non-Jews who defended them were butchered, and that over 1,000 persons were wounded. One telegram states that van loads of cripples were sent to Odessa, the nearest city, while many went mad; owing to the terror which prevailed at Kishineff.

"The immediate cause of this terrible incident is a blood accusation charging against the Jews of Dubosari, to which the Jews of the city of Odessa repaired prior to the Russian Easter, in order to deny the story, as it was generally known that a plot had been hatched to signalize the Easter holiday by a general massacre of the Jews.

"The Governor of Kishineff himself was warned, but paid no heed, for it was only after the excesses had lasted three days that the Jews were given permission to shoot their assailants, and thousands of troops were rushed to Kieff to patrol the streets and guard the people.

"The alarm spread to Kieff, where however, the officials announced that assaults on Jews would meet with severe punishment. The Odessa community faced the situation by arming itself. Notwithstanding Governor Von Plehuve has started an investigation and undertaken to protect the Jews, the rioting is spreading to the whole of the Russian Jewry.

"Collections in aid of the victims have been taken up in every city in the United States. The reports received by the central committee show that about $10,000 has been collected, of which $4,000 has been cabled to Kishineff from New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Pittsburg and Scranton.

NEWCOMERS NOT ALL TO GO WEST

Attractions of Ontario and Quebec Pointed Out to Immigrants

MORE MEN FOR ONTARIO

Mr. Preston Says Efforts are Directed Only to Attract Agriculturists and Domestics

London, May 12.—The London News contains a column interview with Mr. W. T. R. Preston, the Canadian Immigration Commissioner in England, strongly urging the existing demand for farm laborers in Ontario, and also warning men not desiring to work for a living to keep out of Canada.

Mr. Preston, while acknowledging a possible demand for artisan labor, explains that the London Immigration Office of Canada is taking absolutely no interest in any other forms of labor than agriculturists and domestics.

The Press also publishes the cablegram of Mr. J. A. Smart, the Deputy Minister of the Interior, advising a diversion of stream of immigrants to Ontario, pointing out that the demand for men in Manitoba will not be so great until haying and harvesting begins.

The effect of these publications will likely cause a considerable addition of immigration towards the eastern provinces.

Bookings of immigrants continues active, and the second cabin passages are all taken until the middle of June.

BUILDING TIED UP FOR THE SUMMER

Struggle for Supremacy in Toronto will be a Long and Stubborn One

IS HURTING THE CITY

Both Sides are Standing Firm and Unwilling to Submit the Trouble to Arbitration

Toronto, May 14.—A committee of the Street Railway Employees' Union held a conference with the officials of the Toronto Railway Company yesterday and talked over the new wage schedule recently drafted by the union, and other matters. While both sides have agreed to keep the result of their deliberations secret until some final action is taken, it is understood that the men have made a proposal for an increase of the the present wage scale, which gives eighteen cents an hour for the first two years and twenty cents an hour afterwards. The officials of the company, on the other hand, while willing to consider an increase, would prefer to have a graduated scale, by which the men who have been with them for considerable time, some for ten or twelve years, would receive more pay than those of only two years' service. There is, however, no anticipation that the questions will not be amicably adjusted.

There is a possibility that the building trade will be tied up for the summer. The strikers and employers have both determined to stand firm. The fact that they have also declined to have the trouble settled by arbitration is looked upon in labor circles as an indication that the struggle for supremacy between employer and employed has become a more definite issue than before in the local building trade.

Yesterday the situation assumed a new phase, when the mason contractors of the Builders' Exchange decided to advertise for laborers in all the Canadian daily papers. They will pay the men 25 cents an hour. But there is still an obstacle which confronts them. The bricklayers, the stonemasons and the stonemason' laborers have been granted an increase in wages, and are bound by their agreement with the employers to work. The men say, however, that there is a clause which will excuse them from working with non-union men, and they have all agreed to take advantage of it. Yesterday the mason builders renewed their offer of 27 cents.

The master carpenters met and decided to fight the strike to an issue. "We cannot afford to give the men the demands they are making," said an employing carpenter. In discussing the existing condition of affairs, he said that the employers' offer of 32 1-2 cents for this year, and 35 cents for the next year was refused by the union, because the master carpenters would not sign an agreement. The contractors contended that they had to pay many men 30 cents an hour who were not qualified, and were actually not worth more than 20 cents an hour. In addition the employers want to have the liberty of employing non-union men, and would be prevented from so doing if they signed an agreement with the union.

FERTILE LAND DOOMED

Recent Eruption of Santa Maria Volcano Wrought Great Havoc

Mexico, May 12—News brought here from Guatemala by people who have seen the ruin wrought by the recent eruption of Santa Maria volcano confirm all the previous reports. The situation could hardly be worse.

"All the coffee plantations in the vicinity of the colcano," says Manuel Hurtado, just arrived, "have been been destroyed for all time. Ashes from 10 to 15 feet deep cover the country. In the neighborhood of the colvano ashes are so deep that only some of the tops of tall trees can be seen. Scoria and ashes cover 1,000 square miles of land to a depth of 7 to 15 feet, and 5,000 square miles to a depth of from one to five feet. One third of the entire coffee crop have been destroyed. About 300 quintals of the very choicest coffee have been lost, and the land upon which it was growing is doomed to eternal sterility."

POURS VITROIL ON CANADA

Carnegie Says This Country Has No Future Except as Part of the United States

London, May 12—Andrew Carnegie pours vitriol upon Canada in an interview with the Ironmongers' Journal in connection with his presidency of the Iron and Steel Institute. When asked whether Canada, grown populous by immigration, spiritually British, but materially American, might not bring about a union with England with America, Carnegie replied: "Certainly not. Canada has no future except as a part of the States. Her native population increases more slowly than that of Scotland. She only added 536,000 to her population in ten years, and of these 440,000 came from abroad. Canada, standing alone, can never become a great industrial nation. The steel industry is a figament, and Cape Breton a mirage. Nothing there need ever trouble the United States. In no conceivable circumstances can your dominion ever have a population approaching that of the States, and your colonial Empire, what is it but a politician's catchword?"

A well known Anglo-Canadian, after reading the interview, exclaimed: "Don't fancy Canadians will accept another cent of this man's money."

WARSHIPS GATHERING

Ten Men-of-War Now Gathering in Salonica Harbour

London, May 14.—The Salonica correspondent of The Times cables that there are ten foreign men-of-war in the harbor of Salonica. A state of siege has been proclaimed, and Turkish troops are guarding every square yard of the town. Apparent quiet prevails. The schemes of the revolutionary leaders may hang fire, but it is not likely they will be abandoned.

DOES NOT PAY

But for Imperial Reasons No Change will be Made

London, May 14.—Speaking in the British House of Commons last night, Mr. Austen Chamberlain declared that penny postage in Canada and the othe colonies could not be considered to be a remunerative service, but it was justified by political and Imperial advantages. He could not, however, consider the extension of the privilege to all countries. Mr. Chamberlain is now elaborating a simple method for the transmission of money between the colonies and the mother country.

A LITTLE WAR

Rebels Defeated with Great Slaughter and War Over

Gibraltar, May 14.—Prince Arafa, who recently set out to give battle battle to hte tribesmen of the Benidir, who had threatened Tetuan, came up with the rebels yesterday and defeated them with great slaughter. The Prince's troops burned several villages occupied by the Benidir and the Benihausmar. The losses suffered by the Sultan's troops were terrible, and they are still in hot pursuit of the rebel troops. It is believed here that the troubles, at least in the Tetuan district, are over, as the British battleship, Renown, which sailed for Tetuan the other day, has returned.

RECEPTION TO REV. L. M'KINNON

The New Pastor of Gilmour Memorial Baptist Church

The new pastor of the Gilmour Memorial and Selwyn Baptist churches, the Rev. L. McKinnon began his pastorate on the first Sunday in May. He was tendered a very warm reception by the Gilmour Memorial church on Tuesday evening. The attendance was large and the reception was exceedingly cordial. It took from 8 to 10 o'clock for the feast at the table. The spread was fully equal in excellence to those for which Gilmour church has acquired great fame and a very hearty social spirit was manifest in the intercourse of the people. Deacon Wm. Graham presided, and the programme of the evening consisted of opening devotional exercises, reading of Scripture, by Deacon Graham and prayer by Rev. J. Bastow. An address of welcome on behalf of the church was also made by Deacon Graham, and by Rev. J. Bastow on behalf of the ministry in this locality and of the Peterough Baptist Association. The pastor made an extremely apt reply to these addresses. Excellent music was furnished by Miss Crowe and by the two Messrs. Campbell, whose voices harmonized very sweetly. The meeting closed a little after eleven o'clock, with the very best of good feeling.

Has an Army of Over 150,000 Men

WITH FINE MILITIA

Of Over a Million Men Ready For Battle

San Francisco, May 14.—S. Shimizu, te recently appointed Japanese consul at Chicago, who arrived here on the Nippon Maru on the way to his new post, said yesterday regarding the Russian-Manchurian troubles:

The statement that the arsenals are working day and night and turning out vast amounts of military stores may be true. For the past four years hte government has aimed at building up a standing army which would be ready and capable of entering the lists in case of international trouble.

I believe that in equipment, training and quality of soldiers, the Japanese army has almost reached a point of perfection. At present it numbers about 150,000 men, splendid fighters, perfectly drilled and trained. Japan has no intention of remaining quietly in the background in the event of trouble, and we are always preparing for possible complications in China.

THE TAXING OF RAILWAYS

The Municipalities Are Asked to Send Delegates to Toronto

The representatives of the railway companies will be heard before a committee of the Legislature tomorrow in connection with the bill to tax railways, and it is a foregone conclusion that they will oppose it in principle and in every detail.

It is understood that a call has gone forth for representatives of township councils throughout the Province to gather in Toronto on Tuesday next, and appear before the committee, to present the case of the municipalities. There will, no doubt, be a wide response to this call for if the townships want the railways to be taxed, they should rise up and say so. The question is now before the Legislature and the country for consideration.

We understand that several of the municipalities in this neighborhood have decided to send representatives.

COUNTER ALIBI IS PRESENTED, GAMEY WAS AT EXHIBITION

Gore Bay Merchant Swore He Was With Member for Manitoulin on the Morning of Sept. 9th

LOAN COMPANY PROTESTS, DOES NOT WISH TO GRANT ACCESS TO THE BOOKS

The most important evidence submitted at the Gamey enquiry this morning was that of Robert J. Armstrong, a general merchant and machine agent at Gore Bay, and who was in Toronto during the second week of the Exhibition. He swears that on the morning of September 9, which Mr. Stratton and his subordinates swear was the time of Gamey's only visit to the Parliament Buildings in that month, he was with the member for Manitoulin, on the Exhibition grounds from 10 to 1 o'clock. This evidence, if held to be sustained, would go to show that Mr. Stratton completed arrangements with Mr. Aylesworth before Gamey had been brought to see him by Sullivan. After the cross-examination of Armstrong is concluded the Commission will adjourn until to-day. There is thus no chance that the argument will take place this week.

Accountancy Phases.

There was a conference at the outset of the investigation yesterday as to the accountancy phases of the matter. Mr. Walter Barwick, K.C., was on hand in behalf of the Ontario Bank, and Mr. A. Claude Macdonnell represented the Dominion Permanent Loan Company, in which Mr. Stratton keeps his private accounts. The bank finally announced its permission to one counsel on each side to examine transactions in $50 and $100 bills, so long as the strictest privacy were guaranteed. All information gathered by the staff will be submitted.

Mr. Macdonnell objected to the examination of the Loan Company's books unless the prosecution would state just what entries they wanted. "They cannot," said the Chancellor, "this is a fishing expedition." He held, however, that the counsel were entitled to the information.

Mr. Johnston, on behalf of Mr. Stratton said that their position was simply this: That the prolongation of the enquiry was a serious drawback to Mr. Stratton in pursuing his duties as a member of the Legislature and a Minister of the Crown. Every item of Mr. Stratton's personal account had been submitted.

The court directed, however, that one counsel on each side should have access to the books. Mr. Johnston requested that the enquiry be limited to the same dates as in the case of the Ontario Bank.

The Chancellor directed that counsel should look for traces of the alleged $1,000 transaction of January 29, as well as the $3,000 affair of September 9.

Messrs. Ritchie and Rinder will make the investigation this afternoon.

Harry Shepherd Called.

Mr. Harry Sheppard, lumberman of Espanola, six miles from Webbwood, on the Sault Ste. Marie branch of the C.P.R., was the first witness called. He swore positively that he met Mr. Gamey on the train near Webbwood on the afternoon of January 14, last. To be there Mr. Gamey must have left Toronto on the night of January 13. Sheppard was called to contradict Dr. Arthurs, of Sudbury, who swore that he conversed with Gamey at the Walker House both on January 13 and 14.

Gamey's Utterances.

Mr. Thomas Ellis, district constable at Providence Bay, Manitoulin, was called as to Mr. Gamey's utterances at a meeting held at that point. He swore that Mr. Gamey had not made any statement from which the deduction could be drawn that he was going to support whatever Government was returned to power.

In cross-examination, Ellis said he was a Conservative first, last and all the time, and nothing the Ross Government might do would change his politics.

Asked if the Providence Bay witnesses called for the defence were men who would tell the truth.

"They might, possibly," he declared.

"Come, come, now!" said Mr. Johnston.

"If they swore what you say they did," declared Ellis, "they swore to lies."

He admitted having made interruptions at Liberal meetings held later on.

"Then Grit speakers was telling lies," he said, by way of explanation.

The Interruptions.

In re-examination he explained what his interruption had been. It appeared that one of the Governments orators told the audience that Mr. Foy was going to abolish Separate schools. Ellis made a protest against raising such an issue at a Provincial election.

Mr. Wm. Vincer, township clerk, who was at the Providence Bay meeting swore that he had never heard Gamey make use of the utterances credited to him by the Liberal witnesses who were called. The whole trend of Gamey's speech was that there would be no Ross Government after May 29—Vincer also swore that at the referendum he got the appointment of deputy returning officer through the influence of Mr. Gamey.

William H. Clark.

William H. Clark, who was at meetings at Providence Bay, Long Bay Manitowaning and other points last May, swore that Gamey had given no information that he would support the Ross Government. The only Liberal from whom Gamey had a good word was Mr. James Conmee. The latter he said he hoped to see elected, as he was an old friend, and a good fellow. Clark swore that he had been a liberal until the last general election, and had known Gamey as a Conservative for eighteen years.

Geo. Strain, of Gordon township, gave testimony similar to that of the previous witnesses. He had been a McMillan supporter, but had said to the electors: "If you can't vote for McMillan, vote for Gamey."

James Carter, of Kegawaong, gave evidence in a similar strain. Gamey, he said, promised to support all measures for the good of Manitoulin.

Dr. J. Armstrong, general merchant of Gore Bay, swore that he was in Toronto September 9, and by arrangement met Mr. Gamey on the Exhibition grounds at 10 a.m. on that day. They were together for three hours, and separated about 1 p.m. The object of this testimony was to contradict the evidence of Hon. J. R. Stratton and Frank Sullivan, that Gamey visited the Parliament Buildings on the morning of September 9, and that this was his only visit during that month. Gamey says that to the best of his recollection his first visit was on the 10th.

Mr. Johnston Severe.

In cross examination Mr. Johnston was very severe upon Armstrong. The latter held his own pretty well however. He fixed the dates by the fact that he arrived in Toronto on Monday, September 8th, and spent most of the afternoon at the McCormack Harvester Company's place, he being agent for the firm. Next morning shortly after nine o'clock he met Gamey accidentally outside Simpson's store on Yonge street. Gamey asked him if he had been to the Exhibition yet; witness had not and Gamey then made the appointment for 10 o'clock. He also visited the Exhibition of Sept. 10 and Sept. 11, and this must have been on the ninth because that was the date of his first visit to the fair grounds.

Mr. Johnston wanted the witness to review his whole past life and state any other occasion when he had made an appointment. The witness caused laughter by saying that he might have made appointments in his younger days, but he did not recall the occasion of any.

He was also asked about his movements during the rest of the week. The witness could only recall that he spent most of his days on the Exhibition grounds and visited three different theatres. He could not fix within five or ten minutes where he was on any other day that week. Mr. Armstrong also produced bills and receipts for accounts which he had settled on Sept. 9, and which helped him to fix the date.

In re-examination this afternoon Mr. Armstrong said he usually visited Toronto once a year, and that at Exhibition time. He was not familiar with the directions here and the only street of which he was sure, was Yonge street. The Court adjourned at 2.10 until this morning.

PETERBOROUGH GETS POWER RIGHTS

TOWN MAY NOW GENERATE ELECTRIC POWER

Powers Asked for by Town Were Not Extraordinary Says Hon. Mr. Gibson

Toronto, May 13—The city of Toronto bill was not considered by the Private Bills Committee of the Legislature yesterday morning, on account of the inability of some interested parties to be present. The committee's time was taken up by a review of the application of the town of Peterborough for permission to generate and transmit electric energy by the development of water power on the Otonabee River, which was granted, subject to material amendments, and by the consideration of several minor matters.

When the discussion of the Peterborough power bill was continued, the three companies, represented by R. M. [illegible] and the Canadian General Electric, made a vigorous protest against the town being put in a position where it could compel all the companies to use a single system of poles and wires owned by the city and rented to them. The city complained that at present three sets of poles and wires were used on one street, and the companies will not agree to give one further "running rights."

Year's Grace to Companies.

Hon. Mr. Gibson said he did not think the powers asked for by the town were extraordinary, but he thought the companies might be given a year's time to come to some agreement, to work out their own salvation, as it were, before they were put under the control of a town that is itself intending to go into the power business.

The second clause of the bill, to enable the town to provide the apparatus for rental, was struck out, and, if no arrangement is made between the town and the companies, the town may come back at the end of he year. The preamble was amended to conform with the Government power bill. The other clauses of the bill were adopted.

MURDERING CHRISTAINS

Work of the Turkish Troops at Monastir

Constantinople, May 10.—Consular despatches received here from Monastir, European Turkey, say the Mussulmans and Turkish troops are murdering Christians in the suburbs of the Christian quarter of the town.

The statement that General Zoatcheff, one of the principal Macedonian leaders, had been killed in a fight Turks at Florina has been officially confirmed.

Another fight is reported to have occurred at the village of Gorestrovo near Demir-Hissar. The village was burned.

Paris, May 11—There was a simultaneous publication this morning in Paris, Vienna and St. Petersburg of the official view of the Bulgarian situation. The publication carries out the idea, previously published, that the powers are satisfied with the correctness of Bulgaria's course, and will not tolerate the adoption by the [illegible] against Bulgaria on account of the Salonica outrages. The official communication sums up as follows:—Two important points mark the present status of the imbrogio. First, the Bulgarian Government is not responsible for the Macedonian violence. Second, neither St. Petersburg, Vienna nor Paris have the intention to permit Bulgaria to be held responsible. The communication closes with the statement that the Porte's first duty is to carry out the general plan for the Balkan reforms, repress the Albanian agitators, and punish the murderer of the Russian Consul, adding: "If Turkey persists in diverting attention by menacing Bulgaria, the Ambassadors of the Powers may shortly remind the Porte of what the powers expect."

London, May 11—The Salonica correspondent of The Times cables that there are ten foreign men of war in the harbor of Salonica. A state of seige has been proclaimed and Tirkish troops are guarding every square yard of the town. Apparent quiet prevails. PETERBOROUGH, MAY 14, 1903.

LATEST ON CONSUMPTION

The paper recently read at the Medical Congress in Madrid by Dr. Von Schotter, of the University of Vienna, has now been published in extenso by an Austrian medical journal. Although the reports of the Congress which appeared in the European press were meagre, there was sufficient description of Dr. Von Schotter's methods of treating the lungs by means of inhalation to cause much eager interest in scientific circles not only in Vienna, but in London, Berlin and Paris.

The professor, after demonstrating the soundness of the belief in the curability of tuberculosis by inhalation treatment, criticises the ordinary inhaling apparatus, which he points out has been shown to fail to carry the medical liquid beyond, at most, the upper parts of the lungs, thus leaving the lower parts unaffected by the healing agent. He considers that the problem of reaching the whole of the lungs has been solved by the inhaling apparatus invented by Dr. Bulling. By this apparatus the therapeutic liquid is "antomized" so finely as to pass into the remotest parts of the lungs.

Dr. Von Schotter does not hesitate to declare that this apparatus is the only one in existence by wich this result can be accomplished. The procedure is based on the use of compressed air, which is free from both dust and germs by being passed through a filter of cotton wool. Then, highly compressed, the air passes on to a specially constructed "atomiser," which reduces the liquid for inhalation to quite small drops. But as they are still too large to enter the finer bronchial tubes or the air cells, currents of compressed air are driven into the vapor that has been created, and this sub-divides the drops again so minutely that their diameter is only 0.0006 millimeters, or about 200 times less than that of the ends of the bronchioles, the capillary tubes which open into clusters of air chambers.

WHAT THE OUTCOME WILL BE

The Farmers' Sun, in discussing labor troubles, says: Of the innumerable strikes some are probably fair demands for an increase of wages on the part of workingmen, to whom the cost of living has been increased, and who want their fair share of general prosperity. It is only to be deplored that the question between them and their employers could not have been settled without the waste wich a strike entails and the bitterness which it leaves behind. Let employers when they can voluntarily anticipate a reasonable claim for increase of wages instead of waiting to be coerced. But there is too much reason to fear that we are threatened with something far beyond a demand for an increase of wages on the part of any particular trades. There looms a vast combination of trades unions for the purpose of putting an end to the freedom of industry, creating a monopoly in favor of the unions, and imposing the yoke of unionism on the country. Against this the community will have to protest, and in the last extremity to fight; while force will assuredly not be on the side of the unions.

Compulsory arbitration, which New Zealand boasted had made a land without strikes, seems to have come to the end which was foreseen. So long as the courts were simply endorsing the demands of the unions, and the employers, times being good, were willing to comply, the system apparently worked well. But the courts having begun to give decisions against the unions, trouble ensues. The unions protest, the judgments are denounced, and the judges are traduced. Mediation may do much, but little apparently is to be hoped from legal and compulsory arbitration.

Unionists should remember what they are apt to forget, that the real employer, after all, is not the capitalist who engages and organizes their labor, but the customer of the capitalist who buys the products of their industry. The customer will not give for those products more than he chooses, and can afford; so that the result of pressing their demands upon the capitalist beyond reason will be the ruin of their trade. If the building of houses is made too expensive, houses will cease to be built. Unions have had a taste of this in England.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

A party of the name of Bickerdike has introduced a bill in parliament for the suppression of the cigaret. Mr. Bickerdike hails from the Province of Quebec, where they smoke black native tobacco, 60 over proof, and as fragrant as burnt oakum. They have no need for the cigaret there.

A Presbyterian preacher down in Pennsylvania is up against the moral struggle of his life. He has invented a stopper to prevent the refilling of bottles after they have once been used, in the interest of honest dealing; and now comes a big, fat Kentucky distiller and offers him $1,000,000 for the patent. Here's a subject for a theological symposium, and we would like to hear—briefly, mind you—from the clergy.

The general assembly of the Presbyterian church in the United States has for many years been considering the question of revising its creed in order to bring it more in harmony with the advanced thought in theology. The world moves, and the creed of even half a century ago might well be modified if the church would keep up with the procession. The severe theology of good old Dr. Livine, pastor of Knox church away back in the early fifties, would make the cold shivers run down the backs of the Knox church congregation of the present day; hence the milder and modern Henry has a hold on the young people of his church that could hardly be expected if the more austere creed was insisted upon. The next general assembly meets in Los Angeles, California, this month, when the question will, probably, be definitely settled. Of 235 presbyteries in the United States 227 have already voted solidly for a modified creed. Homeopathy moderated the drastic dose administered by the old school doctors. Wesley's milder theology has had its effect on the austere teachings of Calvin.

A Dangerous Disease

Owing to its tendency to spread to all parts of the system, Catarrh should be checked in its incipient stages

Catarrh commences generally with a slight cold, and because slight, it is often neglected. But the seed that has been sown brings forth a dangerous harvest,—perhaps it is the harvest of consumption, which is the harvest of death.

Better spend a few moments each day inhaling Catarrhozone, an aromatic, antiseptic remedy that is breathed in through the mouth, and, after permeating all the respiratory organs, is slowly exhaled through the nostrils.

The immediate effect of Catarrhozone is magical—so prompt and efficient. Relief is instantaneous, throat and nose cleared in a few moments by the penetrating vapor from the Inhaler Ferrozone, taken in conjunction with Catarrhozone, purifies the blood, cleanses it of all poisons, and builds up the system so that Catarrh cannot exist.

You are sure to receive lasting benefit from Catarrhozone if bothered by Catarrh in any part of the system. It is highly recommended for Bronchitis, Asthma, and Lung Trouble, and used for Coughs and Colds in the head it has no equal.

Remember that Catarrhozone is both a local and constitutional treatment, and is warranted under all circumstances to give satisfaction. Money refunded if it fails.

Two months' treatment, consisting of a beautiful polished hard rubber Inhaler and large bottle of liquid for recharging, together with a box of Ferrozone Tablets costs but $1; trial size, 25c. Sold by all druggists and N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont. Buy it to-day.

Child Kidnapped by Indians Found in the Woods

Remarkable Story of How Maud Gillespie was Found in an Indian Camp

Sault Ste Marie, May 11—From information recently received in the Soo, it is believed that Maud Gillespie, who as a girl thirteen years of age mysteriously disappeared from her home near Thessalon thirteen years ago this coming summer, has been found living with the Indians at Green Lake.

Fourteen years ago Maud Gillespie at that time a girl thirteen years of age, lived with her parents about 3 miles out of Thessalon. One morning in the summer she started to go into the little village, and has never been seen or heard from since. Thessalon at that time was a little place of perhaps 600 or 600 inhabitants, who earned their living in a couple of little sawmills estabished in what was then little more than a wilderness. Late in the evening, after the parents of the girl had become alarmed at her absence, the entire population turned out to search for her, but no trace was found that night or the following day. Excitement became intense, and the mills were shut down and all kinds of business ceased while the people hunted for the girl. For two weeks this kept up without avail, and the neighboring towns of the Soos were searched because of rumors that the girl had been seen in them, but no trace of any sort or description could be found, and at last she was given up for dead and the search abandoned.

Years passed and her father died, her mother marrying again a man named Dunphy, and now lives in the Canadian "Soo," on Gore street. Maud Gillespie had been forgotten by all but her mother, who has never given up hope of seeing her daughter again.

A short time ago an old resident of Thessalon, named White, while traveling on the "Soo" branch of the C.P.R., overheard two prospectors who had been exploring the almost unknown regions back of Thessalon telling of a white woman whom they had found living with the Indians there. These Indians live in the most primitive manner, in tents, and few of them can speak a word of English. Mr. White was interested in the story and soon called to mind the strange disappearance of Maud Gillespie 14 years ago. He enquired of the prospectors regarding the woman, and upon his return, communicated with Mrs. Dunphy, who has seen the Indian Agent and taken the matter to the Government, asking that steps be taken to recover the girl, which will undoubtedly be done. The story told by the prospectors is an interesting one. They had been exploring the regions back of Thessalon in search of mineral wealth, and had seen no human beings for weeks. Suddenly they came upon this village of Indians on Green Lake, near the Mississagua River, about 100 miles back of Thessalon. While trying to talk with the Indians, they were startled to see a white woman, who seemed delighted when she heard them speak in English. They talked with her, and she told them that years ago, when she was a small girl, she had been stolen by the Indians, and had lived with them ever since, never seeing a white men, except the French trappers, with whom she was unable to talk. She was anxious to get away from the Indians and implored the prospectors to aid her. They promised to do so. The girl speaks English in the manner of one who has not had occasion to use it for years, and is as uncouth as most of the Indians themselves. The prospectors found it necessary to use the simplest sort of language in order to make themselves understood, and said they are in doubt whether or not the sight of the girl will be welcome to her mother, if, indeed, she is the one whom Mr. White and others now believe she is.

MALT BREAKFAST FOOD

Is the Best Food for Children of Any Age After Infancy

If your children are weakly and frail, and have not the snap and vigor of healthy boys and girls, we say, have them use Malt Breakfast Food for breakfast and supper. The usual starchy foods so commonly used for children lack the nourishing elements which they need to develop muscle and bone, and put life and vigor into the blood. In Malt Breakfast Food the Malt changed the starch of the wheat to maltose, the most nutritious food element, and this with gluten and phosphates of the wheat gives a muscle-building and bone-forming food of unequalled value. CHINA TAKES ACTION

Declines to Open any New Ports in Manchuria

Shanghai, May 12. The Chinese Treat Revision Commissioners have received instructions from the Chinese Foreign Office to decline further discussion with the American Commissioners of article 12 of the proposed treaty, in regard to the opening of two cities in Manchuria to foreign trade. It is added that negotiations on this matter are inadvisable, owing to the attitude and action adopted by the Russian Government. The Chinese Commissioners reflecting the timorous indecision at Pekin, have suggested that the matter is rather one for settlement by the interchange of despatches than by inclusion in a formal treaty.

Nan King, the Viceroy, and the Taotai of Shanghai, have signed the United States idemnity bond, and have returned thirteen bonds presented by other powers. The Taotai states that he has received the Government's instructions that the sum total of the several bonds must equal 450,000,000 taels (a tael is equal to about $1.60), which amount was stipulated in the lump coupon remitted to the doson of the diplomatic corps at Pekin. Moreover, it is declared it is necessary, if payment is required in gold, that conversion be made at the rate of April, 1901. The Taotai concludes by regretting his inability to sign the bonds in which, he says, conditions not found in the protocol have been introduced.

TRANSFER OFFICE, BRISTOL, CONN.

This Company has a perpetual lease on 20 acres of proven oil land in SECTION NINE (9) of the Boulder district, and this section and the immediate vicinity have the best and largest number of producing wells in the entire district.

Our Well No. 1 came in, in January and is now pumping and shipping Oil regularly to the Refinery.

The Directors have decided to put down well No. 2 at once, and they now offer a block of the Treasury stock for the next 30 days at

10 Cents per Share, after that price will be advanced.

It is a well known fact that a 15 barrel well will pay over 100 per cent. profit upon its cost.

This is no longer a speculation for we have proved that oil is on our ground, and we now have oil in paying quantities, with two wells pumping we can soon pay dividends, and every well we put down increases our earning capacity.

This is a business proposition, managed by business men.

STOCK MARKETS

ENCOURAGEMENT

New York, May 13.—The stock market continues to move in a more or less aimless and desultory fashion, nevertheless the general market quietness exposes most vividly the efforts put forth in various issues to quietly accumulate stock. It was very plain in the past two days in Illinois Central, and Missouri Pacific, and has shown itself most strongly in B. O., the Erie issues and others. Bear tales are daily circulated, one stock after another being attacked, not only in Wall street gossip, but in the public press as well. Note the recent trades in certain papers against Metropolitan. Note the present bearish news presented as to Southern Pacific, and the widely advertised views of certain operators as to the remoteness of dividends, while only last September when the stock was 80 the self same operators predicted par in the immediate future. The reason is obvious. They were selling the stock. Then they are trying to buy the stock now that it is down some twenty-five points. In this manner do they get their profits out of Wall street, and timid people are thus made to contribute the continuous demand for stocks in small and large lots for investment is slowly draining the available supply of stock offerings, and must in the natural course of events have its effect upon values. In many issues the specialists report that declines are hard to bring about, and advances easy and upon purchases of but comparatively few hundred shares. This is particularly so in such issues as Illinois Central, Baltimore and Ohio, New York Central, Metropolitan and Manhattan.

The drift of current events tends to strengthen instead o fweaken the market situation. We cannot but espouse the "Buying Side" of the market after viewing it from all points. A word as to Cotton. Our views are exactly and concisely expressed in a letter issued yesterday, by a prominent exchange house. It goes on to say; "The present cotton speculation is paralyzing the cotton goods manufacturing business, because buyers will not pay the higher prices asked, and manufacturers will not come down from their prices which they are forced to demand owing to present high price of the raw material. A general curtailment of production will be forced both here and at Liverpool, if the cliques continue to push up the price. At present range of prices the maximum for this crop, cotton cannot be consumed freely, here or abroad. The raw material is out of relation to the cotton goods market. When cotton deal is over its fall will be marked and rapid." We have persistently bulled cotton for the past six months in our letter. We are now ultra bearish on the staple, and believe the outcome will back up our present bearish opinion as it did our past bull views. Sell only upon good margins, however, and don't lack the nerve to average the sale should the clique force the commodity still higher. It can be but temporary at the most. Bull stocks and bear cotton.

New York, May 13.—To-day's market was without particular variation from that existing previously this week. Stocks receded from 1-4 to 1 1-4 percentage from closing prices last night, also sold higher at intervals during the day. C. F. I. was a notable exception, selling up from four points. The scalping fraternity were responsible for the reactions. Cotton options opened up from 5 to 25 points. The cliques hold the commodity well in hand. We deem its price to be entirely too high. Owing to the excited state of the market we must for the time being on new contracts demand a margin of $2 per bale, instead of $1 per bale as heretofore. Many houses are asking from $4 to $6 per bale margin at present.

KING WELCOMED TO SCOTLAND

The Gracious Observations of the Monarch Arouse Much Enthusiasm

London, May 11—King Edward and Queen Alexandra, accompanied by large suites, left London this mornter which it adjourned until going to pay their first ceremonial visit to Scotland. They will arrive at Edinburgh this evening.

Their Majesties were greeted by big crowds while driving in semi-state to the railroad station, escorted by a detachment of the Household Cavalry.

The King and Queen arrived at Edinburgh this evening, and were enthusiastically welcomed. They were met by Lord Balfour, of Burleigh, Secretary for Scotland, the Earl of Erol, Lord High Constable, of Scotland, Lord Rosebery, Lieut.-Gen. Sir Archibald Hunter, commanding the forces in Scotland, and the Lord Provost, and members of the corporation in their official robes. While a salute was fired from the castle the keys of the city were presented to the King who returned them saying they could not be in better hands than those of the corporation.

After the ceremony their Majesties were driven in semi-state carriages to Dalkieth House.

Wreckers Visit Hulk of Lost Passenger Steamer Algoma

Duluth, Minn., May 11—The steamer J. C. Suit, which has been chartered for the season to be used in stripping some of the old wrecks on Lake Superior, has just returned from the wreck of the Canadian passenger steamer Algoma, which was lost 19 years ago, with 52 lives. What is left of the schooner is on the south coast of Isle Royale. The wreckers worked among the bones of the dead, when rescuing the 150 tons of iron which was taken out by the divers. The Suit will return at once to the wreck, and remove the bar iron in the hold of the lost ship.

DO YOU FEEL SEEDY?

If You are Nervous, Depressed, Sleepless, and Suffer from Sick Stomach, Headache, Constipation and Indigestion, You need a Good Tonic like Ferrozone to Build Up the System.

Thousands are in this dreadful condition, only half alive, unable to stand the strain of work and worry. There is no sense or reason in trying to be comfortable with the idea that it will pass off, and that you are going to be better soon. Unless the system is cleansed of the impurities that poison the blood, you will never be well.

The best remedy is Ferrozone. It achieves marvellous results in chronic wasting diseases, nervous prostration, faulty nutrition, heart disease and stomach troubles.

Ferrozone promotes healthy digestion which results in all food being assimilated. Nutrition is vastly improved, the blood grows rich and red and gives stability to the entire system. the store of nerve energy and force increases daily by the use of Ferrozone. The process of waste is arrested, and in its place a rebuilding of the whole system takes place.

Diseased conditions cannot exist where Ferrozone is used. It attacks disease as its very foundation, and by keeping the body well nourished and supplied with strong blood and a powerful nervous organization prevents and keeps away all manner of sickness.

There is no blood builder, nerve tonic and strength producer that can equal Ferrozone, and few people are so well that could derive great benefit from its use. It is valuable in Nervous Dyspepsia, Anaemia, Weakness, Impure Blood, Bronchitis, Neuralgia and Rheumatism. It is prepared in the form of a chocolate coated tablet and is both pleasant and convenient to use.

Ferrozone produces that high standard of health so much desired by everyone. It brings back the rosy tint to the pale cheeks of the Anaemic girls and women. It puts grace and elasticity into their movements, gives lustre and brightness to the eye, and symmetry and roundness to the form. It gives a man new strength and energy with which to pursue his daily toil, and can be relied upon at all times to benefit and give perfect satisfaction.

You can't invest half a dollar to better advantage than in a box of Ferrozone. Your druggist has it, or it will be mailed to your address if price is forwarded to N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

A Worthy Example

Yesterday the Y.M.C.A. received a cheque, through Mr. Conway, local manager for Grafton & Co., from the firm at Dundas, who each year provide tickets of membership for their employes in the Y.M.C.A. in towns where the firm has branches. Mr. Grafton is also the heaviest contributor to the Association work in Dundas. This is an example worthy of imitation.

Rain is Needed

The present beautiful sunny weather, which is a delight to the persons who think of weather merely as weather, and not as having a direct bearing upon anything but comfort, is a trial to the farmers and gardeners. Rain is what they earnestly are longing for, and the much desired rain has been coyly holding aloof for a month, and promises to be as slow in coming as is fine at other times. The gardens are suffering; the lawns are being kept from attaining their full beauty of fresh green, and even the trees and shrubs look dusty and in need of refreshing showers.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES

—The parks are beginning to look their best.

—Building operations are being greatly retarded by reason of the uncertainty of labor.

—Mr. James Graham, contractor, has been awarded the contract for building the new house for the caretaker at the Little Lake Cemetery.

—No less than six canines "bit the dust" in the north-east part of the town a few days ago. The poisoner is getting his work in.

—A reward of $25.00 is offered for the information leading to the arrest of the person who has been poisoning dogs on Gilmour st. lately.

—Talk about Sunday drinking: This g. f. j. knows a man who could not get a drink in all Peterborough last Sunday. He had no money.

—Mr. Herman Davidson, while operating a cutting machine at the Electric Works, had the misfortune to have the index finger of his right hand cut off below the second joint.

—Lindsay Post :— A surveying party comprising ten persons in charge of Mr. A. N. Bruce, of Ottawa, one of the assistant engineers for the Lindsay, Bobcaygeon, & Pontypool Railway, started out today, to locate the route for the new railway from Lindsay to Burkton. We understand another party will leave to-morrow to locate the route between Lindsay and Bobcaygeon.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

—Mr. Charlie Stone has passed his final examinations in medicine. Congratulations.

—Mr. D. H. W. Somerville, who has been attending the North-West Dental College, Chicago, is in town.

—Rev. J. G. Potter, pastor of St. Andrew's church, was in Toronto yesterday attending the Synod.

—The many friends of Mr. P. Delaire, who was severely injured while taking an old house down some weeks ago, are pleased to see him back at business once more.

—Mr. Wm. Bell, who was so severely injured a short time ago at the Cereal Company's dam, is now able to be up and around, although still confined to the hospital.

—The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. M. Sucee, 154 Rubidge street, will sympathise with them in the illness of their little daughter, Myrtle, who is suffering from scarlet fever.

—Late last night the condition of Mr. Adam H. Ferguson, son of Mr. W. G. Ferguson, had not materially improved. The Times joins in extending sympathy to the family, in their period of so great anxiety. Mr. Ferguson is suffering from inflammation of the bowels.

—The Times had a pleasant visit yesterday from Mr. A. Macdonald, who represents Messrs. J. McNee & Son, the well known cigar makers, of London. Mr. Macdonald formerly resided in Peterborough, his father having been a dry goods merchant here about 30 years ago. He belonged to the firm of Macdonald & Elder.

A LAST RESORT

Pure Food Should be the First

When the human machine goes wrong it's ten to one that the trouble began with the stomach and can therefore be removed by the use of proper food. A lady well known in Bristol, Ontario County, N.Y., tells of the experience she had curing her only child by the use of scientific food: "My little daughter, the only child and for that reason doubly dear, inherited nervous dyspepsia. We tried all kinds of remedies and soft foods. At last, when patience was about exhausted and the child's condition had grown so bad the whole family was aroused, we tried Grape-Nuts.

"A friend recommended the food as one which her own delicate children had grown strong upon so I purchased a box—as a last resort. In a very short time a marked change in both health and disposition was seen. What made our case easy was that she liked it at once and its crisp, nutty flavor has made it an immediate favorite with the most fastidious in our family.

"It's use seems to be thoroughly established in western New York, where many friends use it regularly. I have noticed its fine effects upon the intellects as well as the bodies of those who use it. We owe it much." Name given by Postum Co, Battle Creek, Mich.

AT THE POLICE COURT

Eight Cases for Non-Payment of Dog Tax Dealt With

Police Magistrate Dumble yesterday disposed of eight cases of non-payment of dog license. Seven of them had bought the license since the issuing of their summonses and had not to pay the extra cost of 35c while the eighth remarked that he had given his dog away to his brother. However, he had to pay $1.35 instead of 85 cents.

A local cattle dealer was charged with cruelty to animals. After hearing considerable evidence the Police Magistrate dismissed the charge.

BEAUTIFUL CHEMONG PARK

The Cottages Being Opened for the Season —All Are Rented

Mr. George H. Brown, the popular proprietor of Chemong Park Hotel, was in town yesterday and gave The Times a call. Mr. Brown says that never before, at this season, has there been such a demand for accommodation by tourists. It is quite certain that the hotel will be crowded to overflowing during the hot months.

Four cottages are already occupied for the season. There is not a house or cottage in the park or village that is not rented.

The fishing season opens June 15th, by which time the season will have opened.

PETERBOROUGH RIFLE ASSOC.

LAKE AND RIVER RIPLETS

A Busy Season for the Lower Water Steamers

The outlook for a busy season for the Calcutt Line of steamers is good. Already a number of excursions have been booked, and new contracts are being made almost every day. Yesterday the City of Peterborough was chartered by All Saints' Sunday school for July 7.

—The mammoth excursion to Jubilee Point, under the auspices of the 57th Regiment Band, promises to be one of the leading excursions of the season. It is in aid of the band, and therefore appeals to the people directly.

—Yesterday the Water Lily left for Rice Lake for a scow load of wood for Mr. J. J. Howden, who has 400 cords to bring up.

—The City of Peterborough will make a trial trip early next week. Capt. Lane is in command.

—The abolishment of canal tolls as well as steamboat inspectors' fees will mean a saving of several hundred dollars to Commodore Calcutt alone.

—Mr. Dan Foley is getting things in apple-pie order at Jubilee Point.

—The steamers on the lower waters in commission this year are: City of Peterborough, Water Lily, North Star and Rainbow. The Beaver, it is said, has been superannuated.

A JOLLY PARTY

The Rob Roy Takes a Merry Party Down the River

On Tuesday evening, Capt. R. M. Roy had the pleasure of piloting one of the jolliest parties down the river that ever left port. The trim little steamer, Rob Roy, seemed to understand what was required of her, for she tore through the waters of the raging Otonabee at a very high rate of speed. The party was made up of the employes of the local telephone office, consisting of about seventeen charming young ladies. The affair was chaperoned by a well known and popular young clergyman. After proceeding some miles down the river a landing was effected, and a bonfire started. There were also several other things started at the same time, the fun raging fast and furious, until the steamer's whistle called the merrymakers on board. This great family journal was represented in the person of one of the young ladies, who filled the position of "end man" in the great aggregation of talent, of which his reverence so capably acted as "middle man." Even Mr. Holmes, who claims to be something of a judge himself, says that the performance on the way home—although of an extempore character—was highly amusing and very fascinating.

The party reached home about 10 o'clock. Before disembarking they individually conveyed to Capt. Roy their hearty thanks for the very great treat afforded.

—Four ball croquet sets for 1.10 at Times Bookstore.

A Strong Man

Is strong all over. No man can be strong who is suffering from indigestion or some other disease of the stomach and its associated organs of digestion and nutrition. For when the stomach is diseased there is a loss of the nutrition contained in food, which is the source of all physical strength. When a man doesn't feel just right, when he doesn't sleep well, has an uncomfortable feeling in the stomach after eating, is languid, nervous and irritable, he is losing the nutrition needed to make strength.

Such a man needs to use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It enriches the blood, stimulates the liver, nourishes the nerves, and so gives health and strength to the whole body.

Mr. Thomas A. Swarts, of Sub. Station C, Columbus, Ohio, Box 103, writes: "I was taken very sick with severe headache, then cramps in the stomach and my food would not digest, then kidney and liver trouble and my back got weak so I could scarcely get around. The more I doctored the worse I got until six years passed. I could only walk in the house by the aid of a chair, and I had given up to die. Then one of my neighbors said, 'Take my advice and take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and make a new man out of yourself.' The first bottle helped me and after I had taken eight bottles in about six weeks I was weighed and found I had gained twenty-seven (27) pounds, and I am as stout and healthy to-day, I think, as I ever was."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation.

GAMEY SAYS HE BORROWED $1,200 FROM FRANK SULLIVAN--TELLS OF THE $900 EXTRA DEPOSIT

Mr. Gamey Asked to Go Into the Box by the Commissioners--Chancellor is Very Severe in His Examination of the Member For Manitoulin Island

THE EVIDENCE OF MR. D. A. JONES, OF BEETON, TAKEN YESTERDAY MORNING

Swears That He was in With Gamey to Make Money Out of Deals with the Government--Gamey Gave I.O.U.

Mr. Gamey was asked to go back into the box by the Commissioners yesterday and swore that the $900 which he gave to Mr. Crossin was part of $1,200 he had borrowed from Frank Sullivan, giving him an I O U for it. Witnesses were called by Mr. Johnston to show that while in Buffalo Mr. Gamey had said that he had collected the $900 during the summer. The evidence of D. A. Jones was also taken yesterday. His examination in chief was undertaken by Mr. Johnston on behalf of the commissioners. His evidence in chief was largely corroborative of Sullivan's story.

THESE BOOKS ALL RIGHT.

Mr. Johnston, at the opening of proceedings asked if it was the intention of the prosecution to call Mr. Hall, of Stratton and Hall, Hon. J. R. Stratton's solicitors. He understood that an examination of Mr. Stratton's account with the firm had been made yesterday by one of the prosecuting counsel, and understood they expressed their satisfaction with the accounts, and had allowed Mr. Hall to go home.

Mr. McPherson said he would have to confer with his principal before saying whether they would call Mr. Hall or not.

"Is there any chance of hearing the argument this week?" asked the Chancellor.

"Oh, no," said Mr. Blake.

The Chancellor then said he would rather have argument begin on Wednesday than on Thursday of next week. Mr. Blake said he didn't think Wednesday would suit him.

Mr. Charles Moss, in the absence of Mr. Barwick in Ottawa appeared for the Ontario Bank, stating that yesterday Mr. Ritchie had examined the result of the searches through the books of the various banks, and that he thought Mr. Ritchie was satisfied that the information asked for had been obtained. He had asked for further information regarding the Toronto branch only, and as this information would require the services of the accountant and assistant teller [illegible] hours, it would be Friday evening before it could be obtained.

Mr. Ritchie said his examination of the Ontario Bank business had narrowed down to two checks, which he wished to pursue further. He had also asked for a record of the $100 and $50 bills on more days.

The Railway Pass.

Mr. William Cavanagh, C.P.R. conductor or North Bay, identified Mr. Gamey's railroad pass, No. Q168, and produced his records to show that he had traveled from North Bay to Spanish River on the morning of Jan. 14 last, one of the days on which Dr. Arthurs of Sudbury, says he conversed with Mr. Gamey at the Walker House, Toronto.

Mr. C. R. Atkinson, barrister, of Little Creek, spoke at four election meetings with Mr. Gamey last May, and swore that the latter ran as a straight Conservative and that no inference could be drawn from his utterances that he would support the Ross Government, if returned.

The judges then inquired of Mr. Blake whether he intended to call Mr Gamey. Mr Blake replied that he had considered the matter fully, and had come to the conclusion that Mr Gamey had been so fully examined and cross-examined that there was no new matter on which he could testify, except that of the $900 deposit slip, which was not material to the main issue. He also pointed out that Mr. DuVernet, Gamey's counsel, was absent.

After consultation, the judges decided to call Mr. Gamey themselves.

Mr. Gamey Called.

The member for Manitoulin stepped into the box, and the Chancellor, examined him in very severe tones. He first asked as to the preparation of his statement in the House. Gamey said it had taken him about ten days to prepare it, working at it at odd times for about an hour a day.

Asked as to what material he had he said he had a memorandum book which was in his valise at the hotel, and a cash book, in which he kept a record of payments. He was not so careful in keeping a record of his receipts. He explained that what Mr. Crossin meant when he said that Gamey had kept private memoranda at Gore Bay, was a reference to this latter book. There was a memo of the deposit of $900 on Sept. 11th in this book.

The Chancellor wanted to know if he had any assistance in preparing the document, and Gamey swore he had none. Mr. R. J. McGregor had read it after it was written, and he had shown the MS. to Mr. W. R Smyth, M.P.P., who had not read it, however. He had taken reasonable care to have it accurate.

The Chancellor then took up the letter Gamey wrote to Mr. Whitney at the end of January, stating that at the request of his many constituents, he had resolved to take an independent stand in the House, and wanted to know [illegible]

Gamey explained that it was true to this extent, that he had been requested by some to do so. In a riding like his, the Liberals, and even some Conservatives, might desire him to do so.

"Was it intended to mislead?" asked the Chancellor severely several times.

Gamey kept right on with his explanation, and declared that Mr. Stratton wanted the letter written, and that it was misleading to this extent, that he had personally no intention of supporting the Government.

February Letter.

The Chancellor then read Gamey's letter, written in February, to the editor of the Manitoulin Expositor. In it he told the latter that the people of this province were not satisfied with either political party, and that there would be a shaking up of dry bones, and the Chancellor wanted to know whether it was true or written to mislead. Gamey said it was partially true, but was mainly written to keep the Expositor quiet.

"I'm sure, my Lord, you'll agree with me that the Liberal party does not represent the good, honest people of this Province!" he remarked.

He added that there were many Socialists in his riding, and on some of their proposals he agreed.

"Well, are you a straight Conservative?" asked the Chancellor.

Gamey said he was a straight supporter of the party as constituted under Mr. Whitney, but nevertheless he would be glad to advise them on some measures which he personally favored.

"Do not make public speeches!" commanded the Chancellor.

Mining Deal

The Chancellor then wanted to know whether he had had any mining deal last summer. Gamey said he had been in a transaction with Mr. Bristol. They had an option on a mining property near Arnprior, which expired in November.

"You have followed the course of the evidence?" queried the Chancellor.

"I have," said Gamey. The Chancellor then recited the long list of denials by which his story had been met and asked him if having heard them he still wished to adhere to his story, [illegible] sary to ascertain whether the money deposited in court was legitimate money or whether it was forfeited to the Crown.

"In the face of all that evidence" he concluded his lengthy address to the witness, "do you still adhere to your evidence?"

"Certainly I do," said Gamey emphatically. The Chancellor had alluded to the fact that Crossin's evidence would appear to show that $900 was deposited by Gamey in the Ontario Bank on Sept. 11 before the money was alleged to have been paid by Stratton. Gamey pointed out that the books of the bank showed that the money was deposited in the afternoon of that day.

He Borrowed $1,200.

He then went on to explain that after the division of the $3,000 on Sept. 11, he had borrowed $1,200 of Frank Sullivan's share, giving his I.O.U. $900 he deposited to the credit of the Crossin Piano Company, and $300 in Mr. Burke's private bank at Gore Bay. In the House he had not stated this because he thought Sullivan would be more likely to tell the truth if he thought he would get his money back. In the court he had not been asked anything relating to the matter.

Mr. Johnston asked their Lordships to inquire when the $1,200 was to be paid back. Gamey swore that the I.O.U. was to be paid off when he and Sullivan settled their deals together.

Before he left the box Mr. Gamey was asked if he had anything more he wished to add to his testimony. He replied that he wished to deny the evidence of Mr. James Conmee as to their conversation on the train on June 12. The latter's statement that they had discussed a protest was clearly false, since the returns were not made until July 17 and the petition was not filed until July 14.

He had not discussed Mr. Whitney's speech at Sudbury. In the first place because he was not at the Sudbury meeting, in the second place because Mr. Whitney was sick when he was there, spoke only a few minutes, and did not enunciate the mining policy. He added that he had been asked to join in the smelter proposition by Mr. Conmee solely on the ground that he was a Conservative and might help to satisfy the Opposition while Conmee handled the Government.

Asked about the deposit slip transaction, he said he would be delighted to give an explanation to the Commission, except that Mr. Johnston had been kind enough to threaten him with criminal proceedings, and he had been advised that he should reserve his defence until he came into court. Moreover, he did not deem the matter relevant to the enquiry.

When Mr. Gamey left the box, Mr Johnston put in the newspaper interviews granted by Mr. Gamey at Buffalo, in which he said that he had gathered the $900 in the previous summer.

Gamey, recalled, would not deny the interviews and added that he had considered the loan from Sullivan as private funds.

Messrs. John S. [illegible], of The Globe; E. Middleton, of The Mail and Empire, and John R Bone, of The Star, who interviewed Gamey at Buffalo, verified the published reports.

D. A. JONES CALLED.

Mr. D. A. Jones, of Beeton, was then called and swore that some time prior to the last general election Gamey had told him that he was going to run as an independent. After the general election, some time in June or July, Jones swore that he saw Gamey, and the latter said that he did not propose to sit in Opposition for four years. The bargain was struck that they were to go into partnership on various "deals." They discussed the matter of patronage, and Gamey said he would be content with half of it, and would be careful to avoid friction.

After ascertaining Gamey's position, Jones went to see Mr. Alaxander Smith, the Liberal organizer, and told him that Gamey would support the Government. He didn't let him know that they were pulling together, however. He saw Gamey again and suggested that he get evidence to unseat Mr. Smyth and Mr Miscampbell, and Gamey said that if he did so he would want to be well paid for it. This was what he alluded to in his letter to Gamey of August, in which he said that if he were in his position he could pick up thousands of dollars. Asked what he meant by "You will be even better treated than you expect," Jones said that he meant that Gamey would be a strong candidate at the election which must follow his being unseated because he would not be opposed. He had seen Smith and asked if it would be legal to pay Gamey's expenses for collecting evidence in Sault Ste. Marie and Algoma and this explained some of the allusions in the letter.

Asked what he meant by his allusions to the railway passes being all right, Jones said that at Gamey's request he had seen Mr. Smith about them, and the latter had said he thought they would be all right. The letter of September 19, Jones explained, referred to mining matters in part. They were considering some good things down East. The "party" alluded to was a party Gamey was to hunt up in connection with the Sault protest. He could not say who the party was.

When he said that he could get into Mr. Gibson's office at any time, he meant, the office of Thomas W. Gibson, of the Bureau of Mines.

He had never known that Gamey had been near the Parliament Buildings, or that he knew Frank Sullivan. He thought that he and Gamey were working together to make what money they could out of deals. Gamey had expected but half the patronage, but Alex. Smith said it was usual to give Government supporters the whole of it.

Jones Cross-examined.

Cross-examined by Mr. Blake Jones could not say how long previous to August 16 he had first talked with Gamey and with Smith about the petition.

"[illegible] absurdity for you to speak of Gamey's being unseated when he was going to support the Government"? asked Mr. Blake.

The witness could not answer.

He admitted that he wanted to make use of Mr. Gamey's influence in getting hold of franchises. He wanted to make a little legitimate money. There had been no mining deal between them since 1898.

Mr. Blake took up a phrase in one of the letters, in which Jones said he had seen "the present acting manager." Counsel pointed out that the Premier was then in England, and someone was acting in his place whereas Mr. Smith had been Liberal organizer for nine years.

Mr. Jones could offer no explanation.

Asked again what he meant by "better" treatment, Mr. Jones said he referred to the fact that Gamey was to get more money. The witness said he wouldn't be human if he shied at a graft.

The enquiry will be resumed this morning.

Feverish War Preparations

Victoria, B. C., May 15.—According to advices received by the steamer Empress of India, Japan's arsenals were being worked night and day, provisions concentrated, coal stored on Tshima Island and on all sides it was evident that Japan, doubting the extent of Russian withdrawal from Manchuria, was preparing for war.

Hon. Sidney Fisher, Canadian Minister of Agriculture, who was one of the passengers on the steamer, and who has been in close touch with Japanese royalty and officialdom, says the war feeling in Japan is very strong, while disposed to act in union with the powers in regard to the situation. Japan is not idle and warlike preparations were much in evidence.

THE DYNAMITE OUTRAGE

G. Rousseau Suspected of Sending Machine to the Dock

New York, May 15—To all appearances, G. Rousseau, who is suspected of making the infernal machine which was sent to the Cunard dock last Saturday is not a foreigner. He speaks perfect English without any trace of an accent, and his fellow boarders believed he had come from the west, possibly from Western Canada. He seemed to be familiary with Chicago, New Orleans and Seattle. He is supposed to be a Frenchman.

RIOTERS STARVING

Panic Stricken Chinese are Selling Their Children for Food

Victoria, B.C., May 15.—According to mail advices received from South China, hundreds are dying in Kwang province as a result of the famine there. Correspondents writing from several sections say the destitution, suffering and death is appalling. Families are subsisting on a few ounces of rice a day, or on roots and leaves. Missionaries are aiding thousands daily. The famine is causing the rebellion in that province to grow, for the poor are being driven to violence to obtain food. Women and children are being sold by the famine stricken people. A Wu Chow correspondent gives details of the capture of one of the rebel leaders, who went to Canton to buy arms and ammunition for the rebels. He dressed as a small military official, arrived in Canton and gave out that he was sent by the Chinese general, S. Yuehan. He hired a stern-wheel boat to take his arms and ammunition to Manning, and had the Chinese flags flying on it. He got safely up to Wu Chow, where suspicion was aroused and a telegram was sent to Gen. S. Yuehan. The fraud was thus detected. He and his boat were seized several miles from Wu Chow, where he and his assistants were tortured and beheaded.

TURKEY HAS RUN OUT OF MONEY

The Porte Cannot Pursue the Advance Against Albanians, Sultan Calls Experts In to Help in Financing

Vienna, May 14—The resources of Turkey are said to be so strained as to compel the advance against the Albanians to be suspended. It is believed that the mobolization of 100,000 men was only effected with the aid of the Sultan's private purse. The Sultan has just consulted the former Vizier, Said Pasha, on the situation, and it is reported that his Majesty has summoned a financial commission to consider means to effect the payment of the troops in Macedonia and Albania, the army contractors having refused further supplies.

BULGARIA'S POSITION.

London, May 14—Cabling from Sofia, the correspondent of the Daily News says he has had a long interview with Premier Daneff. The Premier repudiated Bulgaria's responsibility for the Macedonian outbreaks, which he said were the work of a few irreconcilables, and he protested indignantly the charge that Bulgaria had winked at the revolutionaries. The Premier admitted that the Bulgarian army was strongly in sympathy with the movement. He said, however, that this sympathy would not be allowed to interfere with its loyalty. He could not avoid seeing that some accident might precipitate a war involving Bulgaria, but Bulgaria would not be the aggressor, and in the event of such a disaster it would not be her fault. In conclusion the correspondent quotes Premier Daneff as saying he counselled Prince Ferdinand to issue an appeal to the powers to intervene in behalf of Macedonia.

"Bulgaria has no ambition to annex Macedonia," he said, "and the existing reform scheme is quite illusionary."

JEWS AID IN SLAUGHTER.

London, May 14—The correspondent of the Times at Sofia says in a despatch: "Some of the worst outrages during the recent outbreak at Monastir were perpetrated by Jews, who, anxious to show their sympathy with the stronger side, joined the Bashi-Basouks in maltreating Bulgarians. According to official accounts, the slaughter of Bulgarians in neighboring villages was considerably greater than at first supposed. At Zapari 30 were killed or wounded, the Bashi-Basouks participating in the slaughter. It is useless to conceal the fact that these occurrences are arousing an extremely bitter spirit in Bulgaria and if they are allowed to continue, the danger of a conflict with Turkey will be greatly increased."

GERMAN FINANCING IN THE REPUBLIC OF BRAZIL

Berlin, May 13.—That Germany is done with the collection of South American debts at the cannon's mouth seems proved by the remarkable settlement German bondholders have just effected with the Brazilian Oeste do Minas Railway. They pocket a loss of 12,450,000 marks ($2,963,100) representing fifty-four per cent. of their investment, rather than permit the railway to be sacrificed at public auction at Rio de Janeiro on May 14.

The trouble over this railway has threatened to involve Germany in a clash with Brazil ever since 1901, when the State of Minas Geraes declared the German concession void, and prepared to confiscate the property. Repeated representations have been made to the Brazilian authorities by the German Government, and the matter has dragged on until this week, when the bondholders announced their acceptance of a small cash payment in addition to Brazilian federal bonds, the whole sum aggregating forty-six per cent. of the original 23,000,000 marks ($5,474,000) loaned for five years, on which interest to the amount of 5,750,000 marks ($1,368,500) is still unpaid

There is every reason to believe that only the bitter results of the Venezuelan expedition have led the German financiers to give up all thoughts of similar intervention in the case of Brazil.

CRIMINAL LIBEL

Judge Street Defines the Law in Relation to It

Toronto, May 13—In outlining to the Assize Court Grand Jury this morning the bearing of the law in an indictment for libel preferred against George McDonald, editor of The Standard, a suburban publication, Mr. Justice Street observed that newspaper men had no right to hold up private individuals and business men to the ridicule of the community, by the publication of articles of a "spicy" nature. The complainant in the case before the court is John R Morrison, a local fur dealer, to whom Mr. McDonald is said to have referred as "J Pierpont Morrison," and made statements which the Crown claims constitute libel under the statute. His Lordship told the jurymen that he had read over the article in question, and found it of the nature generally known as spicy. It was for the Grand Jury to decide personally if the article in question was defamatory and intended to injure the complainant by exposing him to hatred or ridicule. The Court intimated that if the publication of the article was in the public interest, it could not be construed to be a libel, and the acts of public officials were open to more newspaper criticism than those of private people or business men.

THE IRISH LAND BILL

An Amendment to the Bill of an Important Nature

Dublin, May 15.—It is proposed to attach an amendment to the Land Bill vesting some public authority with control of the great historic monuments of Ireland. In this way it is expected that access will be guaranteed to the public ecclesiastical shrines and landmarks of national interest, and hundreds of places of scenic beauty thrown open for the enjoyment of which the people are at the present cut off.

ENGLAND'S ONLY HOPE

Dr. Parkin Says it Lies in Closer Union of the Empire

London, May 13—Mr. H. G. Parsons, read a paper on "Our Colonial Kingdoms" yesterday before the Royal Imperial Cabinet, including colonials, and imperialization of England's national debt, on the ground that the debt was largely made in helping the colonies.

Dr. Parkin, who made the speech of the evening, said that England alone could never equal the United States commercially. England's only hope was in a union of the Empire. Then the United States would be nowhere. He said that General Wood, Governor of the Philippines, told him he was going to see Lord Cromer in Egypt, and Lord Curzon, in India, to learn the secret of British success in the administration of alien colonies.

Strike at Berlin N. H.

Berlin, N. H., May 15.—Over 1,000 men, employes of the Berlin Mills Co., Burgess Sulphite Fibre Co., walked out yesterday. Demands were made for more pay and the companies' recognition of the unions. The Berlin Mills Co. and the Burgess Sulphite Fibre Companies' interests are so interwoven that the latter company cannot possibly operate without the other. The pay roll of the two companies is about $5,000 per month, both paying weekly.

RUSSIA'S DEEP GAME TO HOLD MANCHURIA

The Russian Bear Yields but, It is Believed, for the Present Only

HAS NO INTENTION OF GETTING OUT OF CHINA

In the Meantime Forts are Being Built and Preparations for War are Going On

St. Petersburg, May 15.—Russia's yielding attitude in Manchuria in the face of the warlike feeling in Japan, England and the United States may be accepted as signifying merely that she is not yet ready to submit the far east question to a military test. Her intention of monopolizing Manchuria remains a fixed feature of St. Petersburg policy. Preparations to that end have long since been inaugurated, and will be continued until Russia believes herself in a position to defy the powers with reasonable hope of success. Such a position can be attained only after years of effort. Whatever advantages the outside world expects from Russia's solution of the Manchurian question should be strenuously sought now.

General Kuropatin, Russian Commander-in-Chief, is laying the foundations for a strong military occupation of Manchuria. His work will be supplemented by a well-considered scheme of colonization, and in the course of a few years a large army can be supported in the far east. Then it will be too late to affect the Russian policy in the slightest degree except as the result of a bloody struggle.

There was nothing legendary in the story of the reoccupation of New Chwang. The soldiers actually entered the city. The troops as stated in these despatches, arrived by sea and have since been moved up country. It was unnecessary for them to enter New Chwang; hence the Russian authorities had them do so for the purpose of further testing the mettle of the powers.

THE PROBLEM OF CIVIC TAXATION

Suggestion Made by the Ontario Municipal Association

THE NEW ROSS BILL

Premier's Proposals Strongly Opposed as Unjust to the Municipalities

Hamilton, May 14.—The Executive of the Municipal Association took up Mr. Ross Act clause by clause yesterday afternoon, and tore large portions of it to shreds. The personal property clauses were practically wiped out. The defect in the proposed Act regarding the business tax which subjects the retail dealer to the same rate as paid by the wholesale dealer and manufacturer, the meeting pronounced itself strongly against. It was pointed out that the retail dealer was compelled to do his [illegible] als, while the wholesaler preferred the less busy quarters. To meet this difficulty a graded tax was recommended, but what it should be was left unfixed.

The Brockville resolution: "That in addition to the ordinary taxes on real estate, all persons, firms, and incorporated companies, carrying on any mercantile manufactory, financial or other business, be required to pay a business tax, and in addition thereto a tax upon their net income," was reaffirmed, and added to the word "income" were the words "derived from the business."

That incomes of $700, instead of $1,000, be exempt, was considered fit, and that all incomes bear the local rate of taxation, instead of being taxed at the 5 mill rate. Mr. F. Hutton, city assessor, made the statement that but 10 lawyers of the city and 13 doctors out of some 70 doing business, will admit to the assessors that they are making more than $1,000 a year. The session declared dead against the exemption of plant and machinery from the school rate, chiefly on the ground that no manufacturers had appeared before the commission to ask for such an exemption.

The Provincial Tax Board did not find the smallest share of favor. The work could be best done by the local assessors. Franchises, also, the session declared, should not be taxed, as enough was now being obtained from poles, wires and other such appliances.

That sheriffs should have the handling of the sale of land for taxes was condemned in favor of city treasurers.

Solicitor Caswell drew up the following resolution, which was unanimously endorsed:

The this Executive committee, having considered the bill of municipal taxation now before the Provincial Legislature, and, having carefully considered the same so far as it affects the assessment of property, beg to affirm our conviction, expressed at the convention at Yorkville last September, that the bill should not pass in its present form, or in any similar form, as it is now reasonably clear that the taxes under it will not enable the municipalities to pay their ways unless by increasing the general taxes far beyond the present limit of two cents on the dollar, and by making the taxes to property-owners far beyond any ability of the average tax-payer to be able to pay the same. We, therefore, ask that the bill, if it is proposed to be passed in any form, be amended so as to provide for the taxation being (1) upon real property; (2) by a business tax similar to what is provided in the Act, but to be applied to all the trades, businesses and professions; (3) by an income tax upon all persons whether engaged in business or deriving such from property or other services, the taxation on the real property and on the income to be as fixed by each local municipality.

ADVERTISE IN 'THE TIMES' NOW

JAPAN SPOILING FOR WAR WITH RUSSIA

Government Ready to Fight to Prevent Occupation of Manchuria

DEPENDING ON ENGLAND

To See Fair Play and Thinks Can Beat Czar's Fleet and Drive Out the Cossacks

London, May 14—Authorative Japanese opinion indicates that the Imperial Government is disposed to fight, if necessary, to avert permanent Russian encampment on the threshold of Japan.

"Japan has greater interests at stake than any other nation," said a Japanese diplomatist to a correspondent this morning. "Japan," he added, "objects to Russian aggression in [illegible] mercial reasons. Whenever the situation warrants action, Japan will act. If Russia forces war on us Great Britain is bound to see fair play, which is all Japanese soldiers and sailors require. We can easily cope with the Russian fleets and at the same time drive the Cossacks out of Manchuria and keep them out."

According to the best information obtainable here the British Government is awaiting clearer light on the situation in Manchuria with the determination to take whatever steps may be necessary to prevent the abrogation of treaty rights. Prominent officials admit that England is committed by the Anglo-Japanese alliance to a policy which admits of no scuttling without something unpleasantly savouring of pusillanimity and dishonor. At the same time it is not expected that Russia will ignore the angry protests of three great nations, while no credence is given to the suggestion that Germany has agreed to support the designs of Russia. It is believed that even France will refuse its autocratic ally into dangerous complications.

There is a shrewd suspicion that the Muscovite flourish in the far east is intended to divert attention from a contemplated movement elsewhere, probably in the Balkans. American officials here agree with the British in the opinion that St. Petersburg is not looking for war.

CARNEGIE AND CANADA

His Onslaught on the Dominion Receives Well-Merited Attention

London, May 13—Andrew Carnegie is evidently being found out by the English press, which has hitherto seemed to regard him as a kind of beneficent fairy queen. His wanton attack on Canada finds no sympathisers, while even the Scottish papers reproduce the Outlook's onslaught upon what is called "the bastard individualism of his carrot bonus philanthropy." The Canadian Gazette, in an article entitled "Carnegie Vinegar," shows that Mr. Carnegie is ignorant of the elementary facts as to Canada's present position and prays that Canada may be delivered from further Carnegie benefactions.

AN EXCELLENT MOVE

The proposal of the Ontario Government to appoint a commission to collect information on the question of municipal trading is one that will commend itself to thinking people generally. Among the many reports of such experiments it is difficult to find any such trustworthy record of facts as would justify a conclusion to the general principle involved. There have been many failures; it is said that there are also many successes. In Great Britain, where the system has had perhaps its greatest development, opinion varies widely, and it would be folly for Ontario municipalities to make the plunge without acquainting themselves with the results of the experience of others, when it is so easily to be obtained. It is cheaper to do our enquiring before squandering our money than afterward; and if the result be to lead us into municipal wood and coal yards, groceries, dry goods, hardware stores, etc., we shall at least have a fund of information to begin with that has cost others much hard cash. As for the general theory of municipal trading the Times' views are well known. We believe that in all ventures not in the nature of monopolies private initiation and management is the more effective, and ever to be preferred. We believe that even in the case of public franchises, which ought to be regulated by the State, province or municipalities, and made to yield a revenue to the public, it is generally better [illegible] private management and operation. A few services, among which are water supply, fire protection, and possibly in some cases street lighting, the municipality may more advantageously (perhaps not always more economically) manage and operate. But these are merely the exceptions which go to prove the general rule. We shall welcome the collection of a large fund of information on the subject and stand ready to give it careful and unbiased consideration.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

From Toronto come stories of the dropping of extensive building schemes because of the enormous increases in the cost of building and the menace of strikes, an epidemic of which has done much to damage business in many lines. It is said that the cost of labor and of material has gone up 30 to 45 per cent. In Hamilton, too, the enhanced cost of building has done much to prevent many from investing. By and by matters will adjust themselves.

SOME FINE STALLIONS

Some very fine stallions were on view in Mr. Rountree's stables, which are at the rear of his hotel, Brock street. Among several other excellent horses should be mentioned Stately City, Prince Hal, jr., Young Hermit and Attraction. The imported Clydesdale stallion Stately City, is the property of J. Elmhirst and W. Renwick, of Keene. His sire was Prince Romeo (8,144) and his dam Nancy (12,710).

Stately City is a grand, big, thick, horse, of great weight and substance, and good quality. He has fine, clean, flat bones, and his action is superb. As a yearling he was second at Hamilton and Lanark. As a two-year-old he was third at Glasgow and first at Hamilton; and as a three-year-old he was fourth at Glasgow in a very strong class, and had the Islay Premium both that year and the following one, and was the Greenock Premium horse in 1901. Stately City has only been shown [illegible] he was imported, at the Toronto Spring Stallion Show in February, 1908, when he won the sweepstakes in his class, and also the championship as the best clydesdale stallion shown. He is particularly well bred, and is certain to be a profitable investment to breeders in this district.

He will appear at Rountree's Hotel every Saturday throughout the season, weather permitting.

Prince Hal, jr., also is the property of Elmhirst & Renwick. He is a pure gaited pacer and stands 16 hands 2 1-2 inches high, is a chestnut and the only entire son of Octoroon. The dam of this horse is Highland Boy and the public can judge his merits when such men as Mr. J. Healey, of Niagara, and Mr. A. C. McCombs, of Beamsville, have used him.

Prince Hal, jr., since coming into possession of his present owners won the 2.30 trot at Norwood Fall Fair; the County trot at Peterborough in January, 1908; and at the same meet he was matched against the great pacer Re-Elect, winning in straight heats, showing the fastest clip on Peterborough track.

He will also appear at Rountree's Hotel on Saturday throughout the season, all conditions being favorable.

Another excellent horse is Young Hermit. This is a beautiful dark dapple chestnut, standing about 16 hands. He is the son of Hermit (3,923) while his dam is Dolly Wilson, by Toronto Chief. This horse is the property of Jas. McMillan and will appear at Rountree's Hotel on Saturdays from one to six p.m., throughout the season, weather and circumstances permitting.

The Hackney stallion Attraction is the property of J. F. Staples, of Ida. He is a beautiful chestnut, has a narrow stripe on the face, four white stockings, and was bred by F. Joy, of Detroit, Mich. He is very stylish, and of a beautiful conformation, and an all-round high actor. In the showing he has an enviable record, taking first at New York State Fair, 1900, besides many other similar distinctions.

His sire is Fandago (4,256) and his dam Wild Thyme (3,372). It will be seen by the above that this horse is sprung from the bluest blooded and most noted ancestors in the hackney stud book.

The above item should be of interest to farmers, who should not fail to see them. They will all appear at Rountree's Hotel, if all conditions are favorable.

Buried Gold

BY FRED WHISHAW.

Author of "A Boyar of the Terrible," etc.

sle—had taken up the question of a voyage to Innocence Island, and had already approached the shipping company, late owners of the "Hecuba," as to despatching a vessel for the purpose of rescuing her shipwrecked crew. The company readily recognized their obligation to do so. Freights to the Pacific ports were low and offered little inducement to owners. "It won't hurt us much to lose a few weeks hunting up the poor chaps!" said one of the directors. "If, as you say, some of the 'Hecuba's' bullion was saved we must see whether the bank and underwriters won't stand in with us for expenses."

Keith Adams visited the bank in order to sound them on this point.

The partners were inclined to be supercilious as to the good faith of persons who obviously intended to make the recovery of their property a matter of commerce. The gold, they contended, was theirs, and must be surrendered, if saved.

"You've got to find it first," said Keith. "The only man that's seen it, barring those on the island, is dead. I happen to have a chart of the place, but you don't suppose I'm going to part with it for nothing? What's more, the crew of the 'Hecuba,' as I'm told, don't intend anyone to have the stuff, neither you, nor me, nor anyone else. It was wrecked, they say, and therefore doesn't belong to anybody but those who found it."

"Then what do you propose to do?"

"I propose to be your man—me and a few others who'll be in the secret. And if we can't come to terms with the chaps we must get the stuff as best we can, acting for you under an agreement as to conditions. How much do you reckon there is of it in the six cases?"

"More than enough to keep you and me for a year or two," laughed the banker. "Thirty thousand pounds in each case."

Keith laughed also. "And all found-money!" he exclaimed. "You wouldn't grudge a case or two for them as got it back for you, would you? Why, you could give every man Jack on the island and everyone of your new crew a thousand each and not notice it was gone."

It was arranged eventually that should the cases be safely recovered both Keith and Foster should be rewarded with "cash or value" for not less than two thousand pounds apiece. The bank would send out a representative who should do his best to come to terms with the islanders; it might be that by this time they had become more amenable to reason, since it would be obvious to them that they could no longer hope to keep inviolate the secret of their treasure trove.

So the ship was fitted out and manned and was ready to sail. A clerk from the bank, by name Warden, had been chosen to accompany the party. Foster and Keith Adams were busy assembling their crew, who were equally busy keeping away until the last moment, as sailors will. Keith was first mate under one of the company's oldest and trustiest skippers, James Brenton. Foster had been offered the berth as second mate, at Keith's request, and the three men sat in the company's little office on the quay busy with their bills of lading and waiting for the last stragglers to come in. The "Penelope" would sail at four this afternoon.

A lad knocked at the door. "There's a lady outside," he announced, "asking for Mr. Adams."

"That'll be that little fool Jess again, askin' to come," said Foster. "Don't you let her get round you, Keith."

A lady stood there, dressed in mourning and wearing a black veil, which concealed her features.

"I'm sorry if I'm takin' you from your work, Mr. Adams," she began, "but I ——"

"Ruby!" exclaimed Keith, blushing like a peony, and his heart giving a great jump in his breast. "I—I didn't expect to see you again," he stammered.

Now that she was here and had actually taken the step she felt impelled, yet hesitated, to take, Ruby Anright was frightened at her own boldness and felt almost as shy and helpless as Keith himself. She had waited for him to pay her at least one farewell visit. She had hoped, indeed, that he would come to woo. It was not her fault this time that he did not, for she had made it very clear to Dick Robinson, at his visit, that his suit had failed. She had then explained that her mind was quite made up. There was only one man in the world whose advances she would consider, and that man was not Dick. She was sorry, she added, if he felt disappointed. But, as he knew very well, she had made no promises; and if he had told folks that she had done so, he did very wrongly.

"Ask Mr. Adams why he never comes to see me these weeks past," she had ended.

The hint was plain enough for poor Dick. She had thrown him over in favor of Keith, after all. Hence his depression and ill-humor on the evening of his death. As for delivering Ruby's message to Keith, he felt more inclined to wring his friend's neck than repeat her words to him.

But Ruby—whether she expected that Dick would do so or not (perhaps it was rather too much to expect of him), waited for Keith to come and bid her good-by, at least, before setting out upon his long and dangerous enterprise.

When he did not come she worried; then she wept; then she grew angry and vowed the fool was not worth troubling for and she would think of him no more. Then, in justification of her determination to be foolish no longer, she cried her eyes out to think she should not see him before his departure for the ends of the earth. Lastly, unable to bear the melancholy thought of so long a separation without one word of kindness to soften it, she took the bold course of going alone to Southampton docks and enquiring for Keith at the company's office.

"Did poor Dick Robinson give you any message from me?" she stammered. "No! that I remember," replied Keith, with his usual awkwardness.

"Not that he remembers!" thought Ruby indignantly. "Who but he'd forget such a message when a maid sent it!" But the girl felt chastened and subdued and continued without show of anger. "I said I hoped you'd come and say good-by, that's all, an' as you didn't come I thought I couldn't let you go without a word, so I come myself."

"I never got the message," said Keith. "I was afraid of comin' and worryin' round in the midst of your sorrow for poor Dick. But it is good of you to come and that's the truth."

"I wanted to say I'm sorry I was rude to you one day—it's two years ago, down on the sands. You said things to me that made me mad, and I said what I

OVER $1,000,000 ALREADY INVESTED.

Over one million dollars have been invested within a short radius surrounding on all sides the property of this company by Boston, New Haven and New York capitalists. All this has been invested quietly within the last two years, without any appeal to the public. Only one of these companies interested has put its stock on the market recently, and that at 60 cents on the dollar.

NOT A PROSPECT, BUT A WELL-DEVELOPED MINING PROPERTY. We have shown by actual mining that we have the

A rich fissure vein. This company having paid a large sum of money for these properties, and also in the development of the same, now offer to the public 50,000 shares only of their stock, in order to make further reserves, so that when they start to deliver ore at the reduction works they can keep up the supply daily and by that means pay a dividend that does not fluctuate but that can be depended on by the stockholders.

Will be sold at 15 CENTS PER SHARE. PAR VALUE, $1.00.

Full Paid, Non-Assessable and No Personal Liability.

READ THIS! This Company offers one of the safest and best investments, as its property is located in the famous Sumpter District, Baker Co., Oregon, and has for its neighbors such mines as the Bonanza, Red Boy, Eureka North Pole, Columbia, Golconda and Cracker Oregon, which are producing from $50,000 to $100,000 each per month. This great property for which the undersigned is Fiscal Agent is more promising than many of the big producing mines at the same stage of development.

This Company has three full claims, with two large veins, one sixteen feet and the other twenty-two feet at the surface, showing good gold values and strictly free milling.

The Company owns the property outright, being free from all debt and incumbrance and in order to equip the mine with modern machinery and to continue development work, a limited number of shares will be sold for a short time only at 15 cents per share, as announced above.

Investors who wish to place money in large or small amounts can do no better than investigate this proposition. All information cheerfully furnished, and all cheques payable to

STOCK MARKETS

EXCELLENT MAY EARNINGS.

New York, May 14.—The great gains in railway earnings during the month of April, continued so far in May. The first week of the month present a most gratifying list of improvement in earnings for that period. Missouri Pacific shows an increase of $74,600; Southern Railway $86,413; Norfolk & Western $76,616; Louisville & Nashville $91,845; Mexican Central $133,139; Texas Pacific $13,821; Chicago & Great Western $16,689. These gains figured on top of preceding magnificent reports are certainly phenomenal and would indicate the future trend of prices. Either these conditions must be speedily or drastically reversed or prices must advance materially. Considerable significance should be attached to the fact that the last offering of New York City bonds was over subscribed ten fold at prices much better than was accepted for the last lot. The process of selling Pennsylvania against subscriptions for the new stock must speedily culminate. Present price of the shares is ridiculous low. The efforts to depress steel shares are plainly evident for the purpose of effecting the balance of the market. There are dealings made at a loss with a view to depressing the prices of other stocks. The room traders are principally responsible for current fluctuations. Once definiteness of market movement is re-established their operations will prove to be of the fly in the wheel variety. Current Wall street bulletins are at present full of purchases of this operator or the sales of another. It simply illustrates the quietness of speculation. Danger signals are flying in cotton. The price of that staple is too high at the present time. You will find it a safe maximum that "It is dangerous and imprudent to buy cotton when the highest price obtainable for it is at the point nearest the cotton fields," namely New Orleans. We have until last week been ultra bullish upon this staple, our letter having strongly advocated holding cotton for the past six months. We have changed our position, veering to the bear side. Those who followed our bullish cotton advices last winter and all this spring should have ample profits to protect a bear position at present against the assaults of the bull clique.

KING SUED BY HIS DAUGHTER

Countess Lonyay Accuses the King of Belgium of Withholding Her Property

Brussels, May 13—The report that the Countess Lonyay has brought suit against her father, King Leopold, has been confirmed. The Countess claims that her share of the estate of her mother, the late Queen Marie Henriette, should be $3,400,000 instead of the $120,000 offered by King Leopold.

Countess Lonyay is the second adughter of King Leopold and the late Queen Marie Henriette. She married Crown Prince Rudolph, only son of the Emperor of Austria, in 1881, and was left a widow by the Meyerling tragedy in 1882. She was married a second time [illegible] Lonyay. This marriage was against the wishes of King Leopold, who refused to permit it to be legagized. The King has been very bitter against his daughter since. At the time of the death of the Queen, King Leopold ordered the Countess to leave Spa, where she had gone to mourn at the bier of her mother. She left Spa amid demonstrations of sympathy from the people.

SOME STARTLING FACTS

To the Editor of The Times—

Sir,—With a view to afford relief to the afflicted, I ask you to publish the following: I am 31 years old and for 9 years have done absolutely nothing, owing to rheumatism; my hands, feet and heart being affected. I was induced by my cousin to take Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills, and before I had taken 4 boxes I could go upstairs without help, and can now go up the stairs as well as I ever could. Two doctors told me that I never would be well again; but I have neither ache nor pain and am in perfect health.

GEORGE M. DUNCAN,
720 Albert St., London.

—John Williams, of the C.P.R. Works, Toronto, was cured of chronic rheumatism, after taking 10 boxes Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills.

—I was troubled with rheumatism for 22 years, and could get absolutely no relief from the doctors. Six boxes Dr. Clarke's Wonderful Little Red Pills entirely cured me, God bless Dr. Clarke. (REV.) S. HUMMITT, Winnipeg, Man.

Dr. Clarke's Little Red Pills are a positive and certain cure for rheumatism, asthma, paralysis, coughs, lame back, indigestion, all stomach and liver troubles, female complaints, even when the diseases have been standing for many years; the most stubborn cases will yield. For sale by Ormond & Walsh, Peterborough. Price 50c. per box, or 3 boxes for $1.00.

Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Catarrh and Dr. Clarke's Sure Cure for Eczema, same price. $100 will be paid for any case that it will not permanently cure.

THE OTTAWA FIRE LOSSES

Underwriters Congratulating Themselves That They Were Not Worse

London, May 13—British insurance companies are congratulating themselves that the claims on account of the Ottawa fire only reach $300,000 compared with $2,850,000 for the fire of April, 1900. They are, however, considering how best to bring further pressure on Canadian municipal authorities to secure more substantial methods of building, especially in important towns and the neighborhood of large timber stores.

THE BAND CONCERT

Last and Best Concert of the Season To-Night

We again call attention to the band concert which will take place tonight in the Market Hall. This will be the last concert given by the Band of the 67th Regiment for the season.

The opening game of the City Amateur Baseball League will take place on Saturday afternoon at the Nicholls Oval at 3 o'clock sharp between the Excelsior nine and the Auburn team. From the sample of ball put up at the practices of the different teams of the league, the public will have the opportunity of witnessing some good ball this season. A lot of fast men have been picked up that will greatly strengthen the teams. The boys should have a good crowd Saturday afternoon. Tickets can be obtained for 10 cents.

THE POWER BILL

The Town Council and the Ontario Legislature

The Town Council, while not perhaps meeting with that ready measure of success which is meted out to less deserving applicants, nevertheless has attained its end before the Legislative Committee in a way that will ultimately be satisfactory.

The Mayor and Council deserve credit. Their efforts have evidently been prompted by a sincere desire for the public weal.

This disposition to protect the Town's interests has awakened something like enthusiasm in the breasts of the ratepayers. We hope it will continue.

LOCAL POST OFFICE

A Night Service Inaugurated To-Day—Great Improvement

After months of agitation the post Office department has decided to improve the service of the Peterborough office, by putting on a night clerk. Beginning today the mails will close as follows:

The mail to be carried on the 12.25 a.m., C.P.R. express going east will close at 11.30 p.m.

The mails for the 5.10 a.m., C.P.R express going west will close at 4 a.m.

Mail matter deposited in the post office boxes at the Oriental, National and Snowden House will be collected for mailing from the post office at 11.20 p.m., each night.

This service will, it seems probable, serve the purposes of business men with late correspondence, written after business hours. They will have up to 11.30 p.m., and 4 a.m., to post letters going east and west respectively.

Mr. E.W. Morphet has been appointed for the night service, and he possesses the necessary clerical ability to perform the duties of the office satisfactorily.

THE LATE ADAM H. FERGUSON

One of Peterborough's Most Promising Young Men Passes Away

It is with feelings of the greatest sorrow that The Times records the death of Mr. Adam H. Ferguson, second son of Mr. W. G Ferguson, of the Kingan Hardware Company, town. Mr. Ferguson passed away at the family residence, Stewart street, about three o'clock yesterday morning, after an illness of only five days. He was only 25 years of age, and was highly esteemed by all who knew him. He leaves a wife, parents and two brothers and one sister to mourn his demise.

"Ad," as he was familiarly known amongst his many friends, will be greatly missed. He was very popular, and was regarded as a young man whose life was an example for others. The Times joins in extending its sincere sympathy to Mrs. Ferguson and members of the family. The funeral will take place from the family residence, 254 Steward street, at 3 o'clock to-morrow afternoon, and proceed to the Little Lake cemetery for interment.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

—Mr. Jas. Powell has returned to town from Orillia.

—Mr. A. B. Spellman, of the Clarendon House, Hastings, was in town yesterday

—Mrs. Benj. Cooney, of Stewart street, we regret to say, is seriously ill.

—Hon. Senator Church, of Halifax, N.S., was the guest of Mr. R. B Rogers yesterday. The Senator visited the lift lock and other points of interest, while here.

—The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Kidd will deeply sympathize with them in the illness of their eldest daughter, Miss Hazel, who was yesterday taken to St. Joseph's Hospital suffering from diphtheria.

LAZY COFFEE

Another Name for the "Sloppy" Sort

Postum Coffee is not made like ordinary coffee for it takes at least 15 minutes' cooking to bring out the heavy food value of Postum. It requires some effort for those things which are really worth while—making Postum requires a little care.

The grocer is in a position to hear of those lazy ones who will not take the trouble to make Postum correctly. "I am well acquainted indeed with Postum," says a grocer of Camden, N. J., "for I meet it not only at my breakfast table but I am also associated with it daily in my business.

"Coffee drinking used to affect my nerves and stomach but since we have been using Postum in our family in place of coffee the bloated feeling after eating has disappeared and my head is now clear and my stomach and nerves alright. We all feel better in every way and find Postum just as satisfactory to our palates.

"I have met customers who complained that Postum was not good but we always found this due to the fact that they tried to make it as they used to make coffee. Of course we set them right by pointing out the reasons, telling them they must boil Postum 15 or 20 minutes after boiling commences, then they get fine, choice and delicious Postum." Name furnished by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Post Office Clerks are Badly Overworked at Present

Peterborough is not the only place where post office help is overworked. From the Kingston Whig we learn that the office there is in worse shape than even in Peterborough. From our contemporary we learn that nearly a month ago a local wholesale merchant mailed a large number of business circulars. He was surprised a few days ago to learn that the circulars were still held in the local office. After satisfying himself that such was the case, he complained to the postmaster-general. Recently the local postmaster received a letter from Ottawa ordering the matter to be investigated at once and a full report made of the result.

The merchant in question charged that the clerks are already overtaxed, and blame can hardly be attached to them, and that a certain official habitually neglects his work, hence the over-taxing of the clerks.

WILL RESIST UNIONS

Builders will Not Pay More than Present Minimum Wage

Toronto, May 14.—Inquiry ascertains that the civic contractors are standing firm on their resolution not to recognize the Pavers' or Laborers' union, not to pay more than the already fixed minimum rate of wages.

At the carpenters' headquarters in Victoria hall, official and emphatic denial was made of the statement of the master carpenters that the committee from the men had verbally accepted the offer of 33 1-2 cents and 35 cents.

The situation as between the builders and the carpenters and laborers remains the same, except that the exchange is now advertising for men. A considerable number of carpenters, both from town and out of town, are said to be answering the advertisements, and being placed at work. It is too soon to say yet what will be the response to the advertisement for laborers.

AGAIN BEAT SHAMROCK I.

Lipton's New Boat Walked Away From the Old Challenger

Gourock, May 14—The two Shamrocks left their anchorage this morning for a preliminary turn to windward as far as Cloch light. Both carried immense jackyard topsails and full light weather canvas. Today's trials include a spin of forty miles. There is a fine north-by-north west breeze blowing.

Shamrock III took the lead from the start, gradually increasing until clear water was between her and the old challenger.

Sir Thomas Lipton today stated that the trial of the Shamrocks would cease next Saturday when they will be taken to the builders to be fitted with ocean rigs, crossing the Atlantic at the earliest possible date.

WORN TO A SHADOW.

When there is a falling off in flesh in woman or man there is "something wrong." And that something wrong is generally a loss of nutrition due to disease of the stomach and the other organs of digestion and nutrition. Sometimes this loss of flesh is accompanied by variable appetite, but in many cases the appetite does not fail and there may be a constant desire to eat. Languor, nervousness, irritability, sleeplessness, are symptoms often associated with this loss of nutrition and falling off in flesh.

Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures disease of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It enables the perfect digestion and assimilation of food so that lost flesh is regained and the physical health re-established.

"I had suffered from indigestion and only those who have suffered from it know what it really is," writes Mrs. M. J. Fagan, of 1613 East Genesee St., Syracuse, N. Y. "I had had severe attacks of headache and dizziness, with cold hands and feet, everything I ate distressed me, bowels were constipated and I was growing very thin and nervous. I cannot half express the bad feelings I had when I commenced taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I took nine bottles of the 'Discovery' and have taken several bottles of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. I commenced feeling better with the first bottle and kept on improving. Now I am so greatly improved in health my friends often speak of it. I most heartily recommend these medicines to all suffering as I was."

The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser, in paper covers, is sent free on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps for expense of customs and mailing only. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

MR. BUCKINGHAM CASHES A CHECK FOR $1,900 AT THE ONTARIO BANK ON SEPTEMBER 11TH--GOT $100 BILLS.

But He Deposited Them All Himself--M. O. Hammond Recalled, Tells of Interview With Mr. Stratton

Wanted Hammond to Forget Things, Approaches by Mr. Stratton to Globe Reporter Are Merely Fishing

The hearing of witnesses other than those immediately connected with the financial concerns was concluded at the Gamey investigation yesterday forenoon. Whether the evidence in connection with the investation of the books of the Ontario Bank, the Trusts & Guarantee Company, and the Dominion Permanent & Loan Company, can be concluded today is not certain, although an effort will be made to do so. The evidence of Mr. Buckingham, who cashed a Trusts & Guarantee Company check for $1.900 at the Ontario Bank on September 11 last, and received a number of $100 bills was taken today. He swore positively that transaction had nothing to do with Gamey affair. It is understood that Mr. Ritchie has at least one other transaction that he wants to inquire into. Messrs. C. A. McCool, M.P, Dr James, M.P. P., and John Loughrin, ex-M.P.P., were put in the box by the prosecution yesterday, and said they did not have interviews with Mr. Stratton on September 10 last. Mr. M. O. Hammond, a Globe reporter told of some interviews he has had with Mr. Stratton.

At the outset the Chancellor asked Mr. Gamey if he had his memorandum book for 1902 with him. Mr. cellor next suggested that before the inquiry closed some evidence be adduced to show the time of day when the $900 deposit of Crossin and Gamey was made.

Nipissing Men Called.

Mr. John Loughrin, ex-M.P.P., for Nipissing and now registrar of deeds and stipendiary magistrate, was the first witness called by Mr. McPherson. Mr. Charles A. McCool, M.P., who had been sitting with Mr. Loughrin, was asked to retire by Mr. McPherson while Mr. Loughrin gave his evidence.

Mr. Loughrin said he was in Toronto last autumn during Exhibition week for three or four days. He came down with Dr. James. They saw the Commissioner of Public Works and Mr. Cahill, the inspector on the Temiskaming Railway, was at the interview which was about road grants. He also saw the assistant Commissioner of Crown Lands. But he didn't see Mr. Stratton during that visit.

When Mr. McCool was called, he declined to answer any questions un- [illegible] about some conduct money, which he said he had not received.

Mr. McPherson—"You ran away from it."

Mr. McCool—"That is not true. Nobody tendered me money."

"Take the evidence," said the Chancellor.

Mr. McCool said he might have seen Mr. Stratton during September but he didn't see him during his visit to Toronto in Exhibition week.

Dr. James, M.P.P. for East Nipissing, was called, and swore that he didn't remember having any interview with Mr. Stratton during that week.

"My information is," said Mr McPherson, "that you and Mr. McCool, and Mr. Loughrin all had interviews with Mr. Stratton on the 10th of September; else I wouldn't have troubled you to come here.

Globe Reporter Recalled.

Mr. M. O. Hammond, the reporter of the Globe, who previously gave evidence, was recalled by Mr. McPherson. He was asked regarding his meeting with Mr. Stratton on the day previous to that on which the Globe interview was finally handed out. Witness said that when he entered Mr. Meyers' room on that day Mr. Meyers told him that Mr. Stratton wanted to see him, and he had gone in. Mr. Stratton asked him if his paper wanted any interviews on the Carnegie library. He telephoned the office and the answer was negative. As he was leaving Mr Stratton handed him a document which bore the original Gamey interview. Witness understood that Mr. Stratton was to see Gamey before the interview would be ready for publication. He didn't see Frank Sullivan with Gamey on that day, nor had he seen him since near the Provincial Secretary's department.

"Have you said since you were examined before," said Mr. McPherson, "that there were some things you might have shed some light upon had you been asked?"

"I may have said there were one or two points."

"What were they?"

"The point I had in my mind was that Mr. Gamey returned to the passageway between the offices after he had given me the interview."

"Did you see Mr. Stratton?"

"I don't think so."

Under cross-examination by Mr. Johnston witness said that the interview as it appeared in the paper with Mr. Gamey, contained considerable matter in addition to the typewritten matter received in Mr. Stratton's office. He had asked Mr. Gamey about Manitoulin and had written an introduction.

Mr. Johnston then questioned witness about the alterations which were made in the typewritten document, presumably in Mr. Gamey's handwriting. One insertion was: "If the Ontario Government has a strong enough majority to carry on the work.

Q "That might be the Whitney Government," said Mr. Johnston.

"Their" development policy was changed to "any good" development policy. (Another addition was "In measures I am satisfied with" This was made in witness' presence.

"These are material changes," said Mr. Johnston, "This was not Stratton's interview at all."

"I took it to be Mr. Gamey's sentiments," said Mr. Hammond.

The Chancellor.—The witness' impression was that Mr. Gamey made changes in the document to make it in accord with his sentiments.

Mr. McPherson in re-examination, asked: "Has Mr. Stratton ever expressed to you a desire that you suppress some of your knowledge of these events."

Mr. Hammond replied that he had had a conversation with Mr. Stratton a few days after Mr. Gamey made his statement. Mr. Stratton, on discussing the events of January didn't remember one or two things that witness did. Next day he and Mr. Stratton had another conversation in which Mr. Stratton admitted that witness' memory had been right. Mr. Stratton had asked witness to prepare a statement and give it to Mr. Johnston. He had done so.

Did Mr. Stratton ever say anything else to you?" asked Mr. McPherson.

"A few days afterwards I met him in the corridor after the House was over."

"What did he say?"

"He asked me if I couldn't forget some of the things. I said I might forget things I wasn't asked about I think I repeated his remark."

Mr. McPherson then asked Mr. Johnston for a copy of the statement that Mr. Hammond had prepared. Mr. Johnston said it was destroyed. He destroyed all witnesses' statements as soon as the evidence had been given.

A Little Scene in Ottawa.

Mr. McPherson didn't have any more witnesses ready.

Mr. Ritchie read an addifavit made by the man who tried to serve Mr. McCool in Ottawa, in which he said that the conduct money had been left on Mr. McCool's shoulder, while on the corner of Wellington and Metcalf streets.

Mr. McCool came forward and told his story with an animated delivery. He said a subpoena had been handed him by a young lawyer in the Parliament buildings, but he had told the man he couldn't take a subpoena there. Afterwards as he was walk- [illegible] M.P.'s a boy had come up behind them and had apparently tried to stick an envelope in his pocket. He had shoved him away. In the evening, in the House, Mr. Borden, M.P., had brought him an envelope with $20, which he said had been found lying on the street, and which had been intended for him. He hadn't taken it. Mr. McCool said he had never received his conduct money, and that when he asked today about it he couldn't get any satisfaction.

Mr. Ritchie undertook to get it for him.

To Prevent Delay.

Proceedings threatened to come to an end for the day at this point and Mr. Johnston asked the prosecuting counsel if they didn't want to call Mr. Coffee or Mr. Buckingham. "As no one else seems to want to call these witnesses," he added, "I will make them my witnesses. I will bring them here now." The telephone was brought into use, and there was a delay of 15 minutes.

When Mr. Coffee appeared with a bunch of checks, Mr. Ritchie said he wasn't ready to cross-examine him.

Mr. Walter Buckingham was put in the box. He is a Guelph lawyer, a former partner of Mr. T. P Coffee. He was examined regarding a check which is is understood was one of the two checks to which Mr. Ritchie referred as not being quite clear about. He produces a bank book with A. E. Ames & Co. It showed that he had deposited there $1,200 on September 11th, 1902 He had deposited it about 2 o'clock, and had got the money from the Obtario Bank. There was no other entry on the book, as the account had been closed a couple of weeks after by a transfer of the $1.200 to a stock account with the same firm. It was Chicago & Great Western stock and the account had been closed in January or February.

Another bank book produced was with the Dominion Bank, Guelph. Witness said on Sept. 11 he received $2,200 and some odd dollars from O'Hara & Co., brokers. He took that check to Mr. Coffee of the Trusts & Guarantee Company, to whom he owed something over $400 in their old partnership. Mr. Coffee gave him a Trusts & Guarantee Company check for $1.900. This he cashed at Ontario Bank, asking the teller for the biggest bills he had. He had recieved at least 12 hundreds, which he had deposited with A. E. Ames & Co. The others might have been all hundreds or with some fifties. His Guelph bank book showed that he had deposited $1,900 there on September 17. This had been made up of the $700 of the $1.900 and $200 from his bill.

To Mr. Riddell, the witness swore that he had seen Mr. Stratton at the Trust Company's office with Mr. Boland about 11 o'clock on the forenoon of September 11. Mr. Ritchie cross-examined him at length on this point and witness said he had seen Mr. Stratton and Mr. Boland leave the private office of Mr. Coffee about 11, and hadn't seen them again in the 20 minutes or so he had remained with Mr. Coffee. He hadn't seen them go to the street.

There were no more witnesses ready.

Said Mr. Johnston: "There is a general impression among the public that an attempt is being made to prolong this investigation until after the session of the Legislature is over, so that no report can be made this session."

The Chancellor said he was trying to hurry it up all he could. And Mr. Ritchie also disclaimed any effort at delay. The court adjourned at 12.10 yesterday until this morning at 10 o'clock.

Premier Says That the Country Faces Revolt

Melbourne, May 14.—In the Legislative Assembly yesterday Premier Irvine made a speech on the strike. He said the country faced a long-meditated revolt against established authority. The strike had thrown the state into confusion, and it would be a fight to a finish.

The Premier then moved the second reading of the bill providing for the suppression of the strike, which is not retrospective, and which will not remain in force after the termination of the strike.

It provides that an employe leaving work without a fortnight's notice is to be assumed to have joined the strike, and will incur the penalty of $500 fine, or a year's imprisonment, with the loss of pension, and will be ineligible in the future for Government employ.

The bill also forbids interference with employes, the collection of strike funds, or encouraging the strike in any manner.

The bill further empowers the police to destroy documents encouraging the strike, makes printers thereof offenders against the law, and declares meetings to be unlawful if four strikers are present. All persons refusing to disperse are liable to arrest without warrants, and the police are empowered to forcibly enter meetings.

An amendment expressing regret at the strike, and promising that Parliament would consider the grievances of the railroad men if they return to work was defeated by 58 to 30 votes.

A SON'S SURPRISE

Found His Father Whom He Considered Dead

Belleville, May 14.—John Clarke, an old West Belleville boy, took Horace Greeley's advice forty years ago, and went west. He travelled a good deal and finally settled at San Jose, California. He started a fruit ranch and to-day he is wealthy. A short time ago he took a notion that he would like to see his birthplace and he purchased a ticket for Belleville. He found a good many changes in the city, but his greatest surprise was to learn that his father Patrick Clarke, whom he had thought had been dead for years, was living at the home. The old gentleman is too feeble to be removed but his son will see that every comfort will be provided for the old gentleman's remaining years.

THE NATIONAL GAME

A Good Poker Story with a Long-Tailed Moral

It was in the back parlor of the Snowden House. Poker stories were being told, and finally a knight of the grip told one.

"It was out in Missouri, he said, "that five men sat down to play a friendly game. Things went along fairly well for a time, and then there was a big jackpot. One of the players told me about it afterward.

"'I opened the pot and they all stayed,' he said. 'There was some raising done before the draw, which did not scare anybody out and made the pot worth while. Then we took cards, and the bet began. We put up about all the money we had, and there was a showdown.

"'The dealer had a king full on aces. The man on his left showed three aces and a pair of kings. The other players, both of whom looked resolute and determined, held four kings and four aces respectively.'

"The other man who was telling me about the game stopped there," continued the knight of the grip, "and I asked him. 'What did you hold?'

"'Me?' he queried. 'Me? Oh, I was the coroner, and I held four inquests.'"

British and French Schooners Seized by a Cuban Cutter

Havana, Cuba, May 16.—Cuban revenue cutters have seized six British and French fishing schooners, which were poaching in insular waters.

The American Medical Association committee here is satisfied that Cuba's sanitary conditions are such now as to favor suppression of all quarantine restrictions against the island.

OPPOSED TO THE TREATY

Columbia and Panama Canal Treaty with United States

Washington, May 14.—Private advices from Colombia state that there are three elements opposed to the ratification of the Panama canal treaty. One element antagonizes the feature giving the United States permanent control; another urges that the idemnity and annuity is not sufficient and the third element consists of revolutionary spirits, who fear that with the Colombian treasury enriched by ten million dollars the Government's strength will be so increased as to destroy all hope of success from any revolutionary movement. When the Colombian Congress is convened June 20, there will be just one month for consideration of the treaty, and such other matters as may be called before it by the President, as the regular session meets July 20.

BRITISH FIRE COMPANIES

Congratulate Themselves on the Small Loss at Ottawa

London, May 16.—The British insurance companies are congratulating themselves that their claims on account of the Ottawa fire only reached $300.000, as compared with $2,850,000 for the fire of April, 1900. They are however considering how best to bring further pressure upon Canadian municipal authorities to [illegible] building, especially in important towns, and in the neighborhood of large timber stores.

BRITISH ATTACKS ON MR. CARNEGIE

Canada Gazette in London Says He is Ignorant of Canada

SCOTCH PAPER'S ATTACK

The Individualism of His Pittsburg Schemes for Workmen is Roundly Concemned

London, May 16.—Mr. Andrew Carnegie is evidently being found out by the British press which hitherto [illegible] of beneficent queen. His wanton attack on Canada finds no sympathizers here, while even Scottish papers reproduce the Outlook's onslaught, made upon what is called "the bastard individualism of his Pittsburg carrot bonus philanthropy."

The Canada Gazette, in an article entitled "Carnegia Vinegar," shows that Carnegie is ignorant of even the elementary facts of Canada's present position, and prays that Canada may ever be delivered from Carnegie's benefactations.

WHITE BREAD

Another Proof in the Controversy

Under certain conditions white bread, potatoes, and all starchy food fails to digest and bowel troubles and appendicitis are likely to follow unless the food is changed.

After consulting five physicians the last three of whom declared that an operation for appendicitis was the only way to save her life, a young lady of Bloomington, Ind., recovered her health entirely with no other aid than Grape-Nuts, the scientific predigested cereal food.

She says: "Three years ago I had an attack of what my family physician pronounced congestion of the bowels and stomach.

"He treated me for some time but I continued to grow weaker, constantly subject to the same attacks. I was compelled to give up my studies at college. In the meantime I consulted another physician. Finally I went to a specialist who pronounced it catarrh of the stomach and acute appendicitis. I was under his care for about three weeks when I had another attack and my parents called other physicians who claimed that nothing but the removal of the appendix would save my life.

"My parents refused to permit this and I was left a total wreck, weak, nervous, unable to eat. It was then that they tried Grape-Nuts, feeding me a teaspoonful three times a day. Upon this food alone I improved from the start to the great wonder of my family. For two months I ate nothing but Grape-Nuts and drank beef tea. Since that time (which was more than a year ago) I have not had the slightest illness and I am now strong and able to study again. I know that I owe my restored health to Grape-Nuts and I now eat it constantly." Name furnished by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

In this case as in most cases of appendicitis the trouble started with inflammation of the bowels resulting from the use of pastry, starchy foods that were undigested in the stomach and went into the intestines in an undigested condition, fermenting there and starting disease. Too much white bread will do this. Relief and final cure came when the improper food was left off and Grape-Nuts, (in which the starches have been transformed into grape sugar by a predigested process), was used. Although all of the rebuilding elements are there in Grape-Nuts the food is so pure that the most delicate stomach relishes and digests it.

FRONTENAC MAN PLACED WIFE IN HOLE TO SAVE LIFE

War Strength of Japan

Russia has a navy more than twice as large as that of Japan, and her land strength is so much greater that comparison of numbers would make the Japanese totals seem insignificant, the "brush" now pending would be far from lacking interest. The Japanese are becoming fighters, and at the same time advancing rapidly in education. They have learned a great deal during the past few years.

However badly she defeated the Chinese armies in the late war, it can scarcely be said that Japan won a great victory over China, because about half the Chinese population didn't know their country was at war and doubtless thousands of them haven't heard about it yet.

Japan's navy consists of 11 battleships, 2 armored cruisers, 16 gunboats, 19 torpedo boat destroyers, 27 torpedo boats, 540 heavy guns and 1,012 machine and secondary guns. The total peace strength in land forces is about 160,000, and the grand war total is in the neighborhood of 600,000. But Russia's peace strength in land forces 1,111,383, and grand war total 5,000,000.

Covered Her With Wet Blankets, Children Stood in Water

Parents Were Away While the Home Burned—Woman Died of Excitement

Kingston, May 15.—As a result of the forest fires in North Frontenac, the Catholic church on the Snow Road and adjacent to Ompah, was burned. Tales of narrow escapes with life and property come in from all sections of the country and everybody is praying for rain.

At Vennachar, Mrs. John Thompson, not in good health, rushed out to help fight the flames. In the evening, when the excitement was over and danger past, Mrs. Thompson expired from heart failure.

In the Township of Raglan, in order to save the life of his wife, M. Ruttan was compelled to dig a hole in the ground, into which Mrs. Ruttan descended. Mr. Ruttan placed a wet blanket over her, and she remained there until the fire abated.

Near Palmer's Rapids, James Ryan lost his buildings, live stock, etc. He was at Quadville at the time of the fire, and his children were alone, and it was with great difficulty that they saved themselves. They lived close to the Madawaska, and the children had to get into the water in order to keep their clothing from burning.

Messrs. W. H. Helmer and Herman Hass, with Alexander Hass and wife, fought the fire for nearly three hours, and just as they got it under control the rain came and all their buildings were saved.

Winnipeg, May 15—Word has reached the city of terrific forest fires raging on both sides of Lake Winnipeg. The fire commenced evidently about three days ago. The district on fire covers thousands of acres of valuable timber lands, chiefly the property of the Dominion Government. The loss of personal property is tremendous, and over a hundred families have lost their homes and stock.

"Valuable Government timber is being destroyed, but we are powerless to do anything to check the fire. The timber is parched dry, and the undergrowth is very rank and like tinder owing to the scarcity of rain this spring. Through this the fire has run with terrible rapidity. The high winds have helped, and the embers have jumped trails thirty and forty feet and carried the fire to the growth on the other side.

"I should say that about 300 miles along the C.P.R., from Tyndall to Balsam Bay, from there to Gimli, and from Winnipeg right down to Selkirk, comprises the territory which the fire so far has visited.

WAR ON UNION LABOUR BEGUN IN NEW YORK CITY

Employers Organized for Aggressive Attack on Men who Tied Up Buildings

New York, May 16.—With determined and concerted action the employers of New York yesterday began making plans for a fight against union laborer such as never has been undertaken in this city, and probably not in the history of the country.

Organizations representing various branches of building and other industries held meetings and decided to suspend all operations until the workingmen are willing to capitulate and make such terms as the employers were guaranteed the support of those who supply materials, and many owners of buildings agreed to waive all penalty clauses in building contracts.

If the plan of organization on the part of the employers is effective it will mean that at least a hundred thousand men will be out of employment indefinitely in the city.

A similar situation has never before confronted organized workingmen in this country, and the possibilities of the result were discussed from all standpoints yesterday. It was estimated that two or three weeks of enforced idleness of so great an army of men would exhaust the treasuries of the unions and with strikes in progress in many other cities little aid would be likely to come from the outside.

What might happen when the men found themselves without funds to provide for their families, and with opportunity for employment shut off, not one was willing to predict. The employers would say only that the time had arrived for the final struggle, and that the contest must now be a fight to the finish. They declared that it was not a question of wages and hours, as nearly all the demands of the unions had been granted in these respects, but that agreements with unions were being broken repeatedly, and that the dictatorial policy of the unions had become so oppressive that it was impossible to do business in New York with any measure of profit or safety.

PETERBOROUGH, MAY 16, 1903.

THE LABOR TROUBLES

Prof. Goldwin Smith says: In a contest between the labor unions and the community, the course of the community seems clear. On one hand, the right of labor to combine must be fully admitted; on the other hand, the freedom of labor must be resolutely maintained. The right of a non-union man to earn his bread must be defended, if necessary, by the power of the State. He must be protected in the exercise of his natural right to maintain himself and his family by the work of his hands, not only against violence, but against annoyance and insult. The rules of some of the unions, limiting a man's powers of earning, under the name of "ca' canny" or "go easy," are in the highest degree arbitrary and oppressive. Submission to them is a forfeiture of liberty, and almost of manhood, to which it is monstrous that any man should be constrained. If the community, through carelessness or unwillingness to endure a temporary inconvenience, flinches from the duty, it will be bowing its neck to an intolerable yoke. No one can read unionist journals or speeches without seeing what are the sentiments and aims of the violent, which is too apt to be the ruling party. The world had a foretaste of unionist tyranny in that of the guilds, which is believed to have driven industry and commerce from places where it prevailed. But no tyranny of a merely local guild could approach in its pressure that of vast combinations, not only national, but international, led by ambitious agitators, and powerful enough to arrest the industrial life not only of a city or of a province, but, as was seen in the case of the coal strike, of a whole continent.

Necessity for calling out the army in support of the law is always to be deplored. But, if it arises, regular troops are probably, as Mr. Osler says, to be preferred to volunteers. Volunteers can seldom be entirely exempt from the passions of the day. They are consequently apt, as their sympathies may incline, either to act too soon or to refuse to act at all. In serious disturbances which occurred in the United States some forty years ago, some of the militia refused to act. The regular fires at the word of command. Rioters not only fear the regulars more, but respect them as the ministers of a higher and impartial authority, while they are apt to resent the action of volunteers as that of social enemies and partisans.

Employers, of course, must do their part. Mr. Carnegie's suggestion of a bonus for employes is valuable as coming from him, though not new. Neither to this, however, nor to any particular specific, can we look for a magical cure. What is to be desired is that employers shall be just, and anticipate fair claims on the part of the men to increase of wages or any other concession, instead of waiting for an angry demand. It is much to be desired also that they should if possible cultivate better personal relations with their men. A very unhappy part of the extension of the factory system is the complete personal severance which it has entailed between the lord of the factory and his workmen. The master dwells apart in his suburban villa, and to the multitude of human hammers and spindles in his works he is an alien, and, as they are perhaps not unnaturally led to think, an adverse power. The factory system on the large scale had to come, and it has immensely added to production and wealth. But it has undeniably brought evils, social, moral, and physical, in its train.

Nor is it to be forgotten that the example of the rich and those in high places must tell upon the poor and lowly. If in the upper classes of society there reigns a mad thirst of pleasure and of the means of indulging in it, we can hardly wonder at the toiler who looks up and resolves to strike for his share.

KILLED WITH A BIBLE

Hawaiian Beaten to Death by a "Medicine Man" and His Wife

San Francisco, May 14—A case of a native Hawaiian who was beaten to death with a Bible in the hands of a kuhuna, or native sorcerer, is reported from the island of Hawaii. The victim was ill in bed, and after being treated by a regular physician sent for a kuhuna, having more faith in the native "medicine man." The kuhuna declared that the patient was possessed by devils, and proceeded to cast them out by beating him over the head with a Bible. The wife of the sick man was also induced to do some beating, and then the kuhuna resumed operations. The man died as a ersult. The kuhuna has been held for manslaughter.

Nervous Dyspepsia

A Disease very common to the American people, but now quickly remedied

A SURE CURE.

In a case of Nervous Dyspepsia a doctor sees two things, first, that the digestion is deranged, and second that the nerves are in a starved, irritable condition.

If abreast of the times, and in touch with the latest discoveries the doctor is sure to advise Ferrozone, which is now universally prescribed in cases of acute Indigestion and Dyspepsia.

Ferrozone is prepared specially for diseases of the stomach and bowels, and as a sure cure for Nervous Dyspepsia has proved itself a thousand times to be superior to all others.

Where Ferrozone is taken after each meal, it is impossible for Dyspepsia or Indigestion to exist. It digests the food before it has had time to ferment in the stomach, and by its regular use one is enabled to eat and drink anything at any time, without fear of bad results.

Ferrozone relieves that distressing headache, and burning feeling in the stomach peculiar to dyspepsia. It regulates the action of the bowels, kidneys and liver; strengthens the nerves and makes the sad looking dejected dyspeptic feel like a new man in twenty-four hours.

The general manager of a Toronto Manufacturing Company, who used Ferrozone with very marked results, says: "The strain of conducting a large business brought on a stage of Nervous Indigestion about a year ago, which I endeavored in vain to shake off. Doctors told me only a complete rest would cure me, but not being able to spare the time, I used Ferrozone instead. It perfectly restored my good health in a short time. I have confidence in the merits of Ferrozone, and am pleased to recommend it."

What Ferrozone can do for you can be best proven by giving it a trial. Every reliable druggist recommends and sells it, price 50c. a box, or three boxes for $1.25. Sent to your address by mail if price is forwarded to N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

Gifford, of lot 6, concession 2, Ennismore, as a result of which the barns, outbuildings, with their contents were totally destroyed. In the basement of the barn were several calves and hogs, which were burned alive. The fire, the origin of which is unknown, broke out about 12.30 in the day time, and it is said that Mr. Gifford had none of his buildings insured.

The Life Giving Virtues of Paine's Celery Compound

Rescaed a Lady Who Was Drawing Near the Grave

THE LIFE BUILDING MEDICINE THAT WIVES AND MOTHERS NEED IN MAY

Paine's Celery Compound does a wondrous work for sick and half dead women in May. The conditions of winter have been detrimental to the health of women and girls everywhere; they have declined in nervous vigor, the blood is reeking with impurities, the excretory organs do not perform their work, and the digestive machinery is sadly out of gear. The human machine must be cleansed, repaired and strengthened in May. Paine's Celery Compound does the work surprisingly fast, and gives a guarantee of permanent health and long life. It is the one spring medicine that truly nourishes, regulates and invigorates the entire nervous system from the brain to the minutest nerve filament. It gives a full, rich supply of energizing blood, it clears the muddy, unhealthy skin, it gives an increase in weight, and more refreshing sleep. Whatever be your condition happy sufferer, we give you a blessed assurance of a new and lasting health through the use of Paine's Celery Compound. Mrs. Flora S. Brantley, Levis, P.Q., writes thus:—

"Eighteen months ago I was terribly afflicted with daily headaches and was despondent, nervous and weak. Medical assistance and patent medicines failed to bring me relief. My sufferings increased, and I was told I would not get better again. I was suffering so much that I was satisfied to die if it was God's will. A neighbor kindly suggested the use of Paine's Celery Compound, and to please her, I consented to try it. The first few doses seemed to send a feeling of new life into my blood, and I went on using the compound. I have taken five bottles and can honestly say I am fully cured. I am sleeping well, appetite in good condition, getting back lost flesh, and feel as active as a girl of fifteen. I think my cure is a permanent one. I thank God for Paine's Celery Compound; it saved my life to my husband and children."

A Pitiful Case

Kingston, May 14—Today Police Magistrate Farrell had the unpleasant task of committing a woman to jail for six months for violating the Liquor License law. Mrs. Whelan pleaded guilty to a third offence, and the court had no recourse but to impose the penalty. The case is one of pity. The woman, with one arm, and a small family, violated the law to secure sustenance. The matter will be referred to the Government for leniency.

OVER $1,000,000 ALREADY INVESTED.

Over one million dollars have been invested within a short radius surrounding on all sides the property of this company by Boston, New Haven and New York capitalists. All this has been invested quietly within the last two years, without any appeal to the public. Only one of these companies interested has put its stock on the market recently, and that at 60 cents on the dollar.

NOT A PROSPECT, BUT A WELL-DEVELOPED MINING PROPERTY. We have shown by actual mining that we have the

A rich fissure vein. This company having paid a large sum of money for these properties and also in the development of the same, now offer to the public 60 000 shares only of their stock, in order to make further reserves, so that when they start to deliver ore at the reduction works they can keep up the supply daily and by that means pay a dividend that does not fluctuate but that can be depended on by the stockholders.

We are actively at work developing our properties.

This season we want to install our machinery.

We are placing stock for this purpose.

Capital Stock, 1,500,000 shares. In Treasury, 500,000 shares
TRANSFER OFFICE, BRISTOL, CONN.

This Company has a perpetual lease on 20 acres of proven oil land in [illegible] district, and this section and the immediate vicinity have the best and largest number of producing wells in the entire district.

Our Well No. 1 came in, in January and is now pumping and shipping Oil regularly to the Refinery.

The Directors have decided to put down well No. 2 at once, and they now offer a block of the Treasury stock for the next 30 days at,

10 Cents per Share, after that price will be advanced.

It is a well known fact that a 15 barrel well will pay over 100 per cent. profit upon its cost.

This is no longer a speculation for we have proved that oil is on our ground, and we now have oil in paying quantities, with two wells pumping we can soon pay dividends, and every well we put down increases our earning capacity.

This is a business proposition, managed by business men.

Buried Gold

By FRED WHISHAW.

Author of "A Foyar of the Terrible," etc.

was sorry for after. I thought I'd tell you this afore you sailed."

"That's all right. It was my fault. I'm only a fool when I'm talkin' to maids; as if I don't know it myself!"

"It's a pity, for you make folks say what they don't mean."

This remark offered Keith a splendid opportunity, but he was slow to take it, being but a fool with maids. He only said:

"I can talk to men proper; it's with maids I'm an idiot."

Ruby began to grow angry; it was her way. She had little patience when matters went not as she wished and intended.

"You'll have plenty of men to talk to for the next year, so you'll be happy!" she said. "Well, I must be goin'," she added, half crying and half cross. "Good-by—you'll have forgotten me when you come back."

"I won't, I swear to that. You know better, too, Ruby. I should have done wiser, maybe, if I had, long ago. Must you be goin' so soon? Well, good-by."

They shook hands.

"Good-by," he said again.

"There's a bit o' fluff or something on your cheek," she said, and she raised her ungloved hand to brush the imaginary particle away. Her fingers lingered softly for a moment upon his face.

"Good-by!" she repeated. "Be sure and come back."

"I'll come back!" he replied with a choke—and so they parted. The interview provided Keith with many memories of mingled delight and pain, sufficient to last him throughout the trials of the next year. It provided him, moreover, as a net result, with renewed hope, though he did not quite understand why this should be so. However, there the hope was, and a mighty support it proved.

The voyage was but two hours old when the first incident took place, the first of very many. Keith Adams sat at tea with the captain, the second mate being on duty, when there suddenly stepped into the saloon from the steward's pantry—Jessie Foster.

Jessie had vainly worried her brother Tom to let her come. He had called her a little fool, and bade her go back to the kitchen or even a warmer place. She had approached Keith with the same request, and Keith had argued politely with her, proving—though not to her satisfaction—that a maid would be utterly out of her element upon such an expedition as this.

"But there's my father and Denys among them. I must go, Mr. Adams, I really must. They may want persuadin' to leave the island. You say yourself they refused to go. Even if I couldn't persuade father to come, I could persuade Denys."

"Oh, we'll bring 'em both back, don't you fret. It ain't the kind of job for a maid. You stay at home, Jess, and make your weddin' frocks ready against we come back."

But Jessie had her own ideas upon the subject and—debarred from the plain road—selected a by-way to attain her object. She adopted a method in which she knew herself a past-mistress. She redirected her attack, choosing the cabin-boy, a youth of seventeen summers, as her next objective. The cabin-boy made a feeble resistance, for Jessie knew as well as most how to manage gentlemen of his age. She attained her object. Not only did she come aboard herself, without detection, but her new friend also brought on board all the luggage she would require for her comfort during the long voyage, carrying in her goods, unnoticed and unsuspected, in a succession of parcels labelled "stores." [illegible] for her appearance. She waited until the skipper and Keith were alone, thus breaking her fall. It now devolved upon Keith to inform Tom Foster of his sister's presence and to soften his heart, as far as possible, towards the wilful little stowaway before permitting him to see her.

Keith could manage men though he was but a fool with the fair sex, and Jessie was received by her brother with comparative mildness. She was, indeed, in disgrace for a while, but presently he forgot his anger, and even went so far as to praise her cooking, and to remark that it was a comfort to have someone by who could darn socks.

Jessie intended to prove, by and by, that she had even better claims to the toleration of her brother and the others, and that the arguments she had brought forward in favor of being allowed to join the expedition were sounder than the men had supposed.

CHAPTER XIV.

The Island at Last.

Nothing of much moment happened during the voyage until near the end of it. The good ship "Penelope" was plowing her furrow in the North Pacific before anything happened worthy of notice. Then it suddenly transpired that the devil was on board.

The evil one appeared in the guise of two sailors, [illegible] both as the whole foc'sle [illegible] testify, for they had scarcely opened their mouths from the first day of the voyage until now, keeping themselves to themselves, as the men put it, and standing aloof from their comrades in a manner which did not conduce to their popularity.

These two sailors had signed under the names of Blythe and Eddis. They had done their work well, and the ship's officers had no complaint to make against them.

Then, when the Pacific was reached and the crew were whispering among themselves that the mysterious destination of the "Penelope" must now be nearly reached, the cloven foot appeared.

The men of the starboard watch were talking, over their dinner; one or two of them knew some of the crew of the "Hecuba," whose release from the island upon which they were wrecked was the ostensible raison d'etre for the present expedition.

"There's more in it, boys, than bringin' those blokes home, and don't you make any mistake!" suddenly exclaimed Eddis. Remarks from him were so rare that his companions looked at him in surprise.

"There's treasure—we all know that; you ain't discovered nothing new!" said the bosun, with some scorn.

"Ah—whose treasure? Who does the gold belong to?" continued the man Eddis. "Why, to them as rescued it. There ain't a man on board what's got any claim to it."

"All right," said Jack Fry, the bosun, "nobody hasn't asked you to claim any."

"It ain't the bank's, what's sent a clerk to take possession," continued Eddis, without noticing the interruption. "Nor it ain't Mr. Adams', what thinks the whole world belongs to him. There's only one owner, and that's the ship's company what found the island and saved the gold from the sea."

"All right, old man, let it remain at that," said Fry. "When we 'old a harbitration court you shall be asked to preside."

"Dick Robinson was the only one as had a right to a share," Eddis persisted, "and the fool goes and falls over the cliff. Lord! there's enough gold there, boys, to make us all rich men, every one of us, and the chaps what's on the island besides. If anything was to happen to this 'ere Adams, who's going to know where the island is or where the gold's hid? The secret'd be worth something. It came from Dick Robinson, what's dead and buried. There isn't a man on board, not that you know of, that's got a right to know it."

"Well, you seem to know a lot about it, anyway," laughed someone. "Maybe you were there."

"Well, anyway, Adams wasn't, and what I say is, if anything was to 'appen to him, who's——"

"Come, stow that!" said the bosun angrily. "Nothin' ain't goin' to happen to Mr. Adams."

Eddis "stowed it," but remarked later that sometimes folks seemed to be talkin' like fools when they knew a bit more than others suspected.

"I thought you a buddish fool all the while you sulked and didn't speak," said the bosun, "but now you talk, I see you're a wuss one."

"That's all right," said Eddis. "All I care is that some on board this ship should understand what's going on and who's who afore we reach this 'ere island. I don't mind how big a fool I am so long as I teach others to open their eyes."

"What in thunder do you mean, if you mean anything?" said the bosun.

But Eddis and his companion now relapsed into silence, and even the most sarcastic allusions did not rouse them to renew the conversation.

The general opinion among those who heard Eddis's excursion into eloquence was that he didn't know what he did mean.

Having failed to interest the starboard watch en masse, Eddis presently turned his attention to individuals. His preaching was full of vague hints and mysterious innuendoes. The crew had been persuaded to take a hand in a dangerous enterprise for the benefit of others; there was wrong being done; Dick Robinson had not been the only man to escape from the island; there were others who knew all that he knew; it wouldn't matter much if anything did happen to the ship's officers; there were others on board who knew all they did and more, ah! and had more right to the treasure, too!

"Such a Noise!"

The mother says to herself sometimes, "I can hardly endure it." Then a chill creeps over her as she thinks of the awful silence which falls upon the home when children are taken away, and she is glad her children are hardy of body and lusty of lungs.

When a child does not enjoy noisy sports and games there is something wrong, and that something will often be found to be a lack of nutrition adequate to the needs of youth and growth. The stomach is "weak," digestion is imperfect, and so the nourishment of the body is inadequate.

In such cases Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery works wonders. It changes puny, fretful children into healthy, happy girls and boys. The process by which this change is accomplished is strictly along the lines marked by Nature. All growth and strength come from food when it has been digested, converted into nutrition and assimilated. "Golden Medical Discovery" cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition, and so enables the body to obtain without loss or waste the benefit of the nutrition provided in food. The "Discovery" contains no alcohol and is entirely free from opium, cocaine and all other narcotics.

A Wonderful Thing.

"I have been thinking of writing to you for some time," writes Mrs. W. D. Benson, of Maxton, Robeson Co., N. C., "to let you know what a wonderful thing Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery did for my little boy. He was taken with indigestion when he was a year and a half old and he was under the doctor's treatment for five long years. We spent all we made for doctor's bills, and it did no good. He could eat only a little milk and cracker, and some times even this would make him sick. He could not sit up all day, and I gave up all hope of his ever getting any better. Three years ago I found one of your books, and on looking it over one day I noticed Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery recommended for indigestion. We bought some and gave it to our boy. He had been treated at Hoods by a good doctor and at Bennettsville, S. C., and at Currie and Lumberton and Maxton, and was only relieved for a short time. We gave him two bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and it cured him. He is well as can be and can eat anything that he wants and it does not hurt him. He has not been sick a day since and it has been three years since he took your medicine."

A Thankful Mother.

"I have felt it my duty for a long time," writes Mrs. Mollie Jones, of Gap, Comanche Co., Texas, "to tell you of the wonderful cure effected by your 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pleasant Pellets' in the case of our little boy, now nearly seven years old. When he was two months old he was taken with La Grippe, and it settled on his lungs and in his throat. His tonsils enlarged, and when he was two years old we had the doctor operate on them. Then we had the doctor take his tonsils out and he made bad work of it. If he went in the wind he would be sick, and we tried everything we could hear of and consulted every physician we saw, but they did not know what to do. When he was nearly six years old (in October, 1898) he was worse than ever, and I could not rest for being so uneasy about him. He was our fourth boy (the other three were dead), and it seemed to me that if he died I just could not bear it. I would go to sleep crying and begging God to spare him. Well, I could see he was getting so much worse; he was just as poor as he could be, and his kidneys had been troublesome all his life. I had read a book about Dr. Pierce's medicine. It seemed to me that this was the very medicine we wanted, and I told my husband that if he would buy some of Dr. Pierce's medicine I felt almost sure it would help our boy. He sent and got some and we commenced with the 'Golden Medical Discovery' on Friday night, and with the 'Pellets' the next morning. We gave him your medicine three times a day and by Sunday he was able to play, and in one month from the time he commenced taking it he had gained six pounds and his cough was all gone. He has not coughed any since, and he [illegible] He goes about like the rest of the children and plays in the cold and hot weather."

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser in paper covers is sent free on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps to pay expense of customs and mailing only. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Will be sold at 15 CENTS PER SHARE. PAR VALUE, $1.00.

Full Paid, Non-Assessable and No Personal Liability.

READ THIS! This Company offers one of the safest and best investments, as its property is located in the famous Sumpter District, Baker Co., Oregon, and has for its neighbors such mines as the Bonanza, Red Boy, Eureka North Pole, Columbia, Golconda and Cracker Oregon, which are producing from $50,000 to $100 000 each per month. This great property for which the undersigned is Fiscal Agent is more promising than many of the big producing mines at the same stage of development.

The Company has three full claims, with two large veins, one sixteen feet and the other twenty-two feet at the surface, showing good gold values and strictly free milling.

The Company owns the property outright, being free from all debt and incumbrance and in order to equip the mine with modern machinery and to continue development work, a limited number of shares will be sold for a short time only at 15 cents per share, as announced above.

Investors who wish to place money in large or small amounts can do no better than investigate this proposition. All information cheerfully furnished, and all cheques payable to

GAVE HER LIFE TO SAVE HER FATHER

Steps in Front of Him and Stops Robber's Bullet

TRAGETY IN A FAMILY

The Robber Knew of Wealth which the Father was Carrying Home

Medford, Mass., May 16. — Miss Nellie Sturtevant, aged 25, daughter of Treasurer Jas. S. Sturtevant, of the Medford Co-operative Bank, was shot and killed at her home late last night, by an unknown man who attempted to rob her father as he was returning from a bank meeting with a satchel filled with cheques and money. The assassin then jumped upon his bicycle and escaped.

An Italian, who answered the description of the murderer, was arrested two hours later by officers in Boston on suspicion, and is held for the Medford officers.

Mr. Sturtevant reached his home about 11.30 last night, having with him a satchel well filled with money and cheques belonging to the bank, of which he was treasurer. As he stepped upon the piazza of the house his wife and daughter opened the door and a few words of greeting passed between them. At that moment a rough appearing stranger appeared on the piazza, and revolver in hand, ordered Mr. Sturtevant to throw up his hands.

The order was not immediately obeyed, and Miss Sturtevant stepped in front of her father to shield him from harm, just as the intruder fired, the bullet entering her body with fatal result.

The man then snatched a satchel bag from Miss Sturtevant, probably supposing it contained the money, and jumped upon a bicycle which he had conveniently near, rode off rapidly in the direction of Boston.

The man arrested in Boston was brought here early to-day. The man gave his name as Comasso Lombreid, an Italian and he cannot speak English.

Another arrest was made in connection with case to-day, a stranger having been taken into custody here this morning.

Mr. and Mrs. Sturtevant are under medical care, having been prostrated by the shock over their daughter's death.

Daniel J. Murphy, arrested in Medford in connection with the Sturtevant murder, has been released, his case having not been pressed in the district court here to-day. Commaso Lombreid, who was arrested in Boston, was held without bail for a further hearing next Tuesday.

Is inhaled 4 times daily

Catarrhozone is the most pleasant and powerful destroyer of disease germs known to science. It is inhaled at the mouth, and in traversing the air passages of the nose, throat, bronchial tubes and lungs passes over not less than 1,000 square feet of mucous surface.

The penetrating, healing vapor of Catarrhozone goes wherever the air we breathe can go, and no matter how remote the disease may be it will quickly cure it.

The bacilli of Catarrh and Consumption are expelled from the system by one day's use of Catarrhozone. Ordinary coughs and cold in the head are cured in ten minutes. Most severe cases of Asthma, Bronchitis, and Lung Trouble are relieved in a few hours.

Catarrhal Deafness, Head Noises Ringing in the Ears, can be corrected in a short time and cured by the persistent use of Catarrhozone, which is guaranteed to prove satisfactory or your money refunded. Lakefield News: Councillor E. A. Tanner was in Toronto on Tuesday, as a representative of the village council, to oppose the bill before the the Ontario Legislature of the town of Peterborough. Among other things the bill asked for powers to appropriate all the water powers in the county, including the dams on the Otonabee River. THE BAND CONCERT

A Splendid Programme of Music and a Fair Audience

The concert given by the band of the 57th Regiment in the Market Hall last night was a great success. The programme was a superb one, and showed the band to be an organization of which the citizens have reason to be proud.

The audience, although large, should have been larger. The fine evening and the disinclination to be indoors, no doubt kept many away.

OUR CENTRAL EXHIBITION

A Big Show Now Positively Assured—$2000 in Sight

General interest is being taken in the Peterborough Central Exhibition under the new management. President Hughes-Charles is determined to make the fair one of the best in Canada, outside the large cities.

A lease for five years of the Agricultural Grounds has been secured, which has yet to be sanctioned by the members. The society have $2,000 in sight to start on. The prizes for live stock will be more than double in value of what they were last year. Several changes in the form of entries will be made. A number of first-class horse races will be on the programme and the prospects appear bright for the biggest show that has been held in some years. A committee was appointed to talk over the prize list and report at a meeting of directors to be called for that purpose.

INTERESTING PRESENTATION.

Made to Dr. and Mrs. Jeffs by Workers in Havelock Methodist Church

On Monday night at a large gathering held in the basement of Havelock Methodist Church, Dr. and Mrs. Jeffs, who have recently moved to Peterborough, from Havelock, were made the recipients of addresses expressive of the Church's gratitude and appreciation of their many helpful services. The address to Dr. Jeffs, which was signed by the pastor Rev. Mr. Johnston and Mr. Edward Fennell, Sec.-Treasurer, was most expressive of the deep regret the congregation experienced in his departure, he having held the position of secretary and treasurer of the Trustee Board, and was also a very active member of the building committee.

Mrs. Jeffs was presented with a silver butter-dish and an address from the Willing Workers' Society.

Havelock feels keenly the loss of these worthy people and their heartfelt good wishes go with them to their new home. Dr. and Mrs. Jeffs responded in appropriate terms and thanked their many friends for their kindness.

THAT GLORIOUS COW

Minister Quaffs Strange Milk, But Is Quite Equal to the Occasion

A good story is told on a minister who occupies one of Peterborough's leading churches. The minister is very popular and revered, but it often happens, his best friend was a man of the world, wont to play practical jokes and cut up all sorts of didos. It was a custom of the minister, whenever dining at the home of this friend, to consume a glass of milk, and then, without more ado, fall to and enjoy the spread, which was always elaborate when he was expected. The parishoner one day planned to cause his ministerial friend embarrassment and disquietude of mind, but he reckoned without [illegible] parson was scheduled to appear. Instead of the foamy glass of milk, delicious and creamy, there was a good, stout, rich glass of milk punch, so clearly and cleverly prepared that it resembled nature's concoction to a nicety. The dinner hour duly arrived, and after a short blessing, the minister seized his glass and quaffed. Not a tremor, not a move, not an exclamation until the beverage was consumed, and then he exclaimed, as he pushed the glass from him, closed his eyes and smacked his lips: "Ah! a glorious cow!"

Coal Will be No Cheaper

The price of coal for the season of 1903 has been settled upon by the anthracite coal operators. In view of the fact that the coal commissioners in the recent strike have awarded the miners an increase of 10 per cent. in wages, the said increase to date from the time the work was resumed in the mines. This increase means that there is some $3,000,000 of back wages due the miners. The commissioners have decided that all back wages are to be paid the miners in five monthly payments. The operators, therefore, have notified the wholesale dealers that anthracite coal is now at its lowest price, which will be advanced 10 cents per month until September 1st, 1903, at which time it will be 60 cents per ton more than it was during the month of April.

C. G. E. EXCURSION

First of Season to be Held on Saturday Afternoon

In order to enjoy to the utmost their half-holiday, the Canadian General Electric Company Benefit Society, have arranged a series of five or six Saturday afternoon excursions down the Otonabee. This afternoon the "City of Peterborough" will leave the wharf at 1.30 sharp, and it is more than likely that many will take advantage of this first pleasure outing. This is a step in the right direction, and is worthy of the highest commendation. The tired worker can refresh himself after the busy week by drinking in the pure air, much better than inhaling the city dust. The Fare is 40 cents and 20 cents.

HOSPITAL SUNDAY

A Very Good Suggestion Is Made by Lindsay Hospital Board

The Board of the Ross Memorial Hospital, Lindsay, has made a suggestion to the people of that town which is worthy of the consideration of Peterborough citizens as well. The board suggests that the churches in the county agree to set apart the last Sunday in May in each year as Hospital Sunday, when those who feel prompted to assist this worthy institution will be afforded an opportunity to do so. In commenting on it the Post says that it is hoped that at the services on that day the clergymen of the county will make a suitable reference to the laudable object in view and to the fact that the hospital is for the reception of sick and injured persons of all races and creeds, without distinction, and for the benefit of those who are in indigent circumstances and wholly or partially unable to provide medical or surgical assistance for themselves, preference being given to Victoria County residents.

Economy and Better Health

MALT BREAKFAST FOOD

A True Nourisher and Not a Fad

One package of Malt Breakfast Food costing 15 cents will make as many meals for the family as can be obtained from three packages of any of the ready-to-eat fad foods put up in bulky containers, which have more weight in cardboard than in food. A still stronger point than the economical one, is the fact that Malt Breakfast Food is the most nourishing, most appetizing and most easily digested of all breakfast foods. Thousands of physicians who have watched results obtained from use of Malt Breakfast Food, recommended it with pleasure and great satisfaction as a diet for dyspeptics, and maintain it has no equal for keeping well people strong and hearty. Your Grocer can recommend Malt Breakfast Food with confidence.

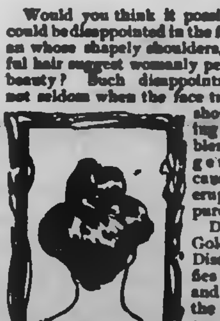
Would You Think It?

Would you think it possible that you could be disappointed in the face of a woman whose shapely shoulders, and beautiful hair suggest womanly perfection and beauty? Such disappointment comes not seldom when the face turned to you shows disfiguring blotches and blemishes. In general the cause of these eruptions is impure blood.



Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery purifies the blood, and removes the corrupt accumulations which cause disease. When the blood is cleansed, pimples, tetter, salt-rheum, boils, sores, and other results of impure blood, are perfectly and permanently cured.

"For three years I suffered with that dreaded disease eczema," writes Mrs. J. Koepp, of Herman, Oregon. "I was told to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which I did, and after I had taken fourteen bottles I was permanently cured. It has been a year since I stopped taking your medicine and it has never appeared since. I think your medicine a wonderful cure and hope others suffering as I did, will take it and be relieved of their suffering."

Some of the most remarkable cures effected by "Golden Medical Discovery," have been of scrofulous diseases.

"I will forever thank you for advising me to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery," writes Mrs. Jas. Murphy, of Fonda, Pocahontas Co., Iowa. "It has cured me of chronic scrofula of twelve years' standing. I had doctored for the trouble until I was completely discouraged. I also had chronic diarrhea for twelve years. I am in good health now—better than I ever was in my life, owing to Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I took several bottles of the 'Discovery' before I stopped."

Accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery." There is nothing "just as good" for diseases of the stomach, blood and lungs.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure dizziness and sick headache.

ENTERTAINED LAST NIGHT

Young Men's Guild of George Street At Home to Charlotte St. and St. Andrews Guilds

A very enjoyable time was spent in the Sunday School room of George street church last night when the Young Mens' Guilds of St. Andrews and Charlotte street churches spent a social evening with the members of the George street Guild.

After singing "Blest be the Tie that Binds," and prayer by the pastor, Mr. F. Skitch, Vice-President of the George street Guild, took the chair and introduced the following programme:

Pianola solo...... .... Mr. Soanes
Address...... ....Mr. J. A. Fife
Trio... ... .Messrs. Turner, Bowes and McGuire
Address...... ....Mr. F. H. Dobbin
Intermission.

A noticeable feature during the intermission was the handshaking and general fraternal spirit of the gathering.

About one hundred members sat down to a sumptuous repast, which was furnished under the direction of the Girls' Guild of George st. church.

After ample justice was done to the inner man, the following toast list was run off: Mr. W. B. Warren in a very few appropriate remarks, proposed the toast of our King which was honored by all standing and singing the National Anthem. Mr. S. R. Armstrong proposed the toast of "Our Country" referring fittingly to its vast extent.

It was replied to by Mr. Gerard, of St. Andrews'.

"Our Guests" was proposed by Mr. W. Dredge, who referred to the fraternal spirit which existed among the different Guilds of the town. It was replied to by Mr. Campbell, of St. Andrew's, in a very humorous speech, and also by Mr. Galbraith, in behalf of Charlotte street. "The Ladies" was proposed by Mr. Elliott. The reply to this toast on behalf of the ladies, brought out the finest speech of the evening, it being capably handled by Mr. Sorsoleil of Charlotte street Guild.

The meeting was closed by the benediction being pronounced by Rev. J. G. Potter.

Special mention should be made of the efficient manner in which the Girls' Guild arranged the tables. The Guild are indebted to Mr. Soanes for the music during the supper and also to Mr. E. F. Mason for the handsome donation of the special Seal Brand blend of coffee.

A PROMINENT COLLEGE MAN.

One of Indiana's Useful Educators Says: "I Feel Like a New Man."

MR. JOHN W. MENG.

Mr. John W. Meng, 54 Jefferson Ave., Indianapolis, Ind., State Representative of Indianapolis Business College, writes:

"I firmly believe that I owe my fine health to Peruna. Constant travel and change of food and water wrought havoc with my stomach, and for months I suffered with indigestion and catarrh of the stomach. I felt that the only thing to do was to give up my occupation which I was very reluctant to do. Seeing an ad. of Peruna as a specific for catarrh I decided to give it a trial, and used it faithfully for six weeks, when I found that my troubles had all disappeared and I seemed like a new man. I have a bottle of Peruna in my grip all the time, and occasionally take a few doses which keeps me in excellent health."—John W. Meng.

THE most common phases of summer catarrh are catarrh of the stomach and bowels. Peruna is a specific for summer catarrh.

Hon. Willis Brewer, Representative in Congress from Alabama, writes the following letter to Dr. Hartman:

Gentlemen—"I have used one bottle of Peruna for lassitude, and I take pleasure in recommending it to those who need a good remedy. As a tonic it is excellent. In the short time I have used it it has done me a great deal of good."—Willis Brewer.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

CONCLUSION OF THE INVESTIGATION

The Member for Manitoulin Must Give Up That $1,200

HOT SURPRISES FOR BOTH SIDES

The Proceedings Have Consumed 23 Days, Taken the Evidence of 119 Witnesses and Expenped Several Thousand Dollars, But Not Discovered Source of Cash

Toronto, March 16. The evidence in the bribery investigation was concluded to-day. The finish was even more exciting than the inception of the case. There were painful surprises to both sides. In fact the day was replete with sensations, and the chief actors in the dramatic affair appeared to be immeasurably relieved when the counsel announced that the case was closed, with the exception of some women witnesses, who will depose as to the whereabouts of Mr. Stratton on the fatal Sept. 11, when Gamey says he was busy consummating the bribery plot at the Parliament Buildings.

NET RESULT OF THE FINISH.

The net result of the day's developments was a rude shock to the Provincial Secretary's alibi, an equally hot surprise for Mr. Gamey, in the shape of a prize package handed him by the commission to cover into court the $1200 which he claimed to have borrowed from Frank Sullivan and some startling questions asked sundry bank employes about the mysterious disappearance of a large package of money in September, which Mr. Stratton was supposed to have removed, and failed to place a voucher for. No evidence, however, was received bearing out the idea conveyed by this question, each bank clerk deposing that he had not previously heard such a report. In putting the question, Mr. [illegible] stated that "I have been informed that such is true."

CLOSE OF FAMOUS CASE.

And thus was practically concluded one of the most extraordinary trials in the history of the Dominion—a trial fraught with the most serious consequences to that political party whose skirts may be soiled by the mass of filth exposed. During the twenty-three days which the royal commission has consumed in the investigation, 119 witnesses have been examined. Nearly twice that number have been summoned, but for one reason or another have not been called. The known cash expended will aggregate five thousand dollars, paid out almost wholly as expenses for witnesses. Testimony has been sought as far east as Ottawa, as far north and west as Winnipeg, in the Manitoulin Islands, and over in the States. It is estimated that $25,000 will scarcely cover the whole expense of the trial. The evidence of the 119 witnesses will, when completed and put in book form necessary to the court's review, make three [illegible] to the Bible.

The adjournment was made indefinite, but it is understood that the commission will convene as soon as one of the three ladies who it is claimed were in Mr. Stratton's company Sept. 11, reaches Toronto from Winnipeg. Two days will be accorded each side to make their argument, though the prosecution asserts that a day and a half will suffice them to close their summing up. No decision is expected under several months.

GAMEY MUST DEPOSIT CASH.

From the view of the defence, the feature of the day was the order of the court requiring Gamey to deposit with the court $1200, which he testified he had borrowed from Frank Sullivan, and that it was part of the bribe money received from Mr. Stratton. Just what will be done over this feature is uncertain. During the afternoon, Gamey was in conference with his counsel, as to his obligation to produce this cash. He takes the position that this was an independent transaction, entirely apart from the case under consideration; that he has explained what he did with this particular cash; that the court is aware that it is not in his possession, and, therefore, he is not obliged under the law to account, under the court's orders, especially since the money cannot become a factor in the solution of the case.

BUT, ON THE OTHER HAND!

As viewed by the prosecution, the really important developments of the day relate wholly to the story of the hackdriver, who said that he called at the Parliament Buildings the forenoon of Sept. 11, and drove Mr. Stratton, who was accompanied by three ladies around the city, returning about an hour later. This is a direct contradiction of Mr. Stratton's alibi story, and, while the counsel for the prosecution ridicule the matter, the savage manner in which the witness was attacked on cross-examination was evidence that the story had struck a vital spot.

LOOKED AFTER THE BOOKS.

George C. Bartlett, teller of the Ontario Bank, submitted a statement, covering transactions over a sum of $1000, which was privately examined. This showed the bank books, and brought out several cross-questions. When no evidence relating to sums that could be regarded as touching the bribe money was elicited, questions were asked concerning recourse to the treasury for larger sums, but the witness thought the sums would have to be very much in excess of the amount before a call would be made on that source. He also filed an exhibit, showing the sources from which the Ontario Bank received $50 and $100 bills from Sept. 9 to 11. There was nothing in this evidence to throw any light on the real point at issue.

BANK MANAGER'S EVIDENCE.

William Smith, manager of the Ontario Bank, swore that the bank officials had been unable to discover any trace of the three thousand dollars in Ontario Bank bills, which figure in the case. The source from whence they came and on whose account the cash was paid, remained shrouded in the deepest mystery.

The Chancellor, at this stage, asked Gamey to go on the stand again. He asked him about the disposition of the balance of the $1200 which he claimed he secured from Frank Sullivan, and, being told that $300 was paid the Crown Piano Company, the court ordered that the full amount be added at once to the boodle cash already deposited.

Henry M. Butler, ledger-keeper in the Dominion Permanent Loan Company; A. Atkinson, paying teller, and William Northgrave, were in turn examined as to a report which Counsel McPherson said he had received that about Sept. 11 a package containing a large sum of money had disappeared from the loan company's office, and after much excitement in the office Mr. Stratton had relieved the employes by explaining that he had removed the package and had forgotten to leave a voucher for the cash.

Each witness was positive he had never heard the story before, and nothing was brought out to support the purpose of the interrogation.

Patrick Maher, the liveryman, was called and explained that his books showed that a Victoria had been charged to Mr. Stratton for the forenoon of September 11. The driver was Weston Green, and he testified that for an hour he had driven Mr. Stratton [illegible] buildings around the city. He could not be mistaken, but was somewhat confused by the merciless cross-examination.

THREE LADIES TO TESTIFY.

It was upon this point that the commission was asked indulgence by the defence until the evidence of the three ladies in question could be secured, and the adjournment was made indefinite for that purpose.

The Gamey exposure came in the House on Wednesday, March 11. The investigation incident to the charges close May 16, after 23 days' work of seven hours each. This is a brief narration of the story told by the commission's examination. Those who have watched the case closely have been rather impressed with the scope permitted by the commission. There has been little disposition to complain on this score by either side.

SOMEBODY'S DESPERATE GAME.

The aspect of the case that has provoked the greatest interest throughout relates to the desperate game which some man or some set of men are playing in connection with this case. Money has been used freely, and in view of the contradictory nature of the mass of evidence adduced, it is not too much to say, that perjury has been a very handy weapon; but who is the perjurer and who is the briber? These are the queries that are freely indulged in. The confusing array of evidence piled up on both sides has established beyond doubt that a conspiracy existed either to bribe Gamey or to involve the government. This phase of the case is too plain to be disputed, but to distinguish between [illegible] two great variety of stories is the greatest difficulty of the affair.

WHENCE CAME THE MONEY.

But some strong facts are prominent and none more than the real tangible character of the $3,000 now [illegible] that money of large denominations? That is the interrogation that has busied the prosecution since the plot developed. Here is the positive evidence of a felony. The contention of the defence is that Gamey was the plotter, and that this cash came from that source. The prosecution has sought to prove that Provincial Secretary Stratton delivered the boodle and that it was for the purpose of saving the governmental majority. The suspicion has been provoked by the absence of any other ministers or members of the government from the court room or of apparent sympathy with Mr. Stratto, and that the Provincial Secretary had been left to play a lone hand, but there has been nothing positive to support this idea.

STRENGTH IN WITNESS BOX.

[illegible] chief actors on the stand is considered one of the most curious side lights of the case. The singular success of Gamey, Sullivan and Stratton in maintaining their stories practically unshaken in the face of a terrific cross-examination merely contributes depth to the peculiar puzzle presented, in the estimation of those who have sought to follow the case, and who are learned in the art of sifting evidence. It would [illegible] that of these three men the penetrating character of the cross-examination would have found a serious [illegible] if there had been one, in the [illegible] Yet it is physically impossible [illegible] the three stories are true.

TANGIBLE EVIDENCE OF CRIME.

But the one fact that has attracted the bulk of attention, and which constitutes the certain and tangible evidence of a crime, relates to the cash deposited. From whence did it come and by whom was it handled and what purpose was it to serve? Three thousand dollars in $50 bills were taken out of some local bank at some time in the first week of September and used in connection with this case. A minute trace is kept by all Canadian banks of bills of large denomination. Daily the supply on hand is noted, and the payment of so large a sum could scarcely have been made without the knowledge of several bank employes. The searchlight of the whole court machinery has been turned upon this point.

SEARCHED BANK BOOKS.

Every banker in the city was was likely to have even remote knowledge of any such transaction has been on the stand or his books have been examined by experts. Detective talent has undoubtedly been used freely on both sides and after weeks of the most persistent work of all this powerful force of brainy people, not a single absolute trace of the source of the boodle has been unearthed! This is a puzzling feature, which has caused wide speculation in press and public. Yet the money is in evidence. It was drawn from some bank on a cheque, or it passed through some express company or other common source, from which a leak would have been expected. Still, all the "fishing" expeditions of the prosecution in this respect have been complete failures.

GAMEY EXPOSED QUICK ENOUGH.

In contradistinction to the extraordinary mystery which surrounds this transaction, note the rapidity with which Gamey's connection with the fatal bank deposit slip was made public. He went to the bank at noon and made the substitution, and within two hours the fact was in possession of the lawyers for the defence, and in a day was known to the newspaper men of the whole city. The confidence with which bank transactions are supposed to be treated, and the mystery which bank employes are supposed to surround their customers with, did not protect Gamey in this respect. If the same conscientious devotion to duty should characterise the actions of those from whom the boodle funds were secured the guilty parties in this case could hardly escape identification.

The three thousand dollars in evidence consists of new bills and their clean condition was positive evidence that they had been recently withdrawn from a bank. Every banking institution called upon to supply evidence has done so with a display of frankness that precludes the possibility of deception, and yet there has been deceit somewhere. In consequence of the failure to show the source of boodle, the most scandalous feature of the miserable affair promises to remain a mystery indefinitely. It is impossible that the acumen of the Royal Commission will enable their judicial minds to determine from whence came the bribe money from the evidence thus far submitted.

BOTH PRINCIPALS COMPLAISANT.

Secretary Stratton has stood the trying ordeal well, but no better than Mr. Gamey. There has been a marked improvement in the complacency of the Provincial Secretary since the compromising deposit slip incident and the flight of Gamey to Buffalo. But at no time during the trial has the "nerve" of the member for Manitoulin appeared to desert him, with the possible exception of the Buffalo trip. These two chief actors in the bit of play from real life, one day with a tragic tinge, and the next threatening to develop into a roaring farce comedy of the variety of the McFadden's Flats, have sat within a few feet of each other during the whole investigation. Not infrequently they have been seen gazing intently at each other. Frank Sullivan, too, has been near much of the time. At no time have they appeared to display any particular anger, but rather indifference towards one another.

One of the most damaging incidents of the evidence brought out as against the accused is that of Reporter Hammond's story of Mr. Stratton, asking him to suppress certain things about the famous interview which the Provincial Secretary is alleged to have secured from Gamey for the Globe. That this statement came in the nature of a bomb shell to the defence camp is not disputed. However, it was not the proverbial bolt from a clear sky, for there was every evidence of an area of low barometer about that time in the immediate vicinity of the Parliament Buildings and distress signals were being displayed on more than one mast head.

The vigorous manner in which the members of the commission have sought to cast light on this or that obscure part of the evidence and the general scope permited, silenced much carping of "restricted investigation" heard early in the investigation. At the same time there was distinct disappointment that the presence of Frank Sullivan's father-in-law in New York and his sudden departure from Toronto when the House was ripped up by the Gamey exposure, was not gone into more thoroughly by the commission.

Altogether, it would appear that enough damaging evidence has been unearthed in the investigation to keep the friends of the interested parties busy explaining just how it happened, for a campaign or two.

TURNING TOWARDS UNIVERSAL PEACE

British House Discusses Reduction of Naval Armaments

NATIONS TIRED OF WAR

The Views of Responsible Statesmen on the Hope of Securer Days to Come

London, May 18.—The question of the reduction of naval armaments came up again yesterday in the course of a discussion of the navy estimates in the House of Commons. The speakers suggested that the Government take the first step in proposing a reduction to other powers.

Sir Charles Dilke (advanced Radical) said he thought this might be possible. In view of the improved relation between Great Britain and France those two nations might talk the matter over, and subsequently approach Russia. Even if Germany did not agree to a reduction the three powers migh effect something. It was not necessary for Great Britain to build against the United States. It would be as great a mistake to count upon the United States as an enemy, as to count upon her as an active ally, for the United States had always been the great defender of the rights of neutrals.

Mr. Arnold-Foster, the Admiralty Secretary, after having pointed out that it was the duty of the Admiralty to deal with facts as they were, and not as they might be, said that all the great powers were increasing their maritime preparations, notably Russia. He denied that the Admiralty's proposals were in excess of the requirements of the country. The Secretary added that he would not, on that occasion, express any view with regard to the position as affected by the United States.—"that was a grave consideration which in future would have to be considered." The Admiralty's present duty was to give the nation a guarantee against attack, and more important still, against defeat by any combination of the powers.

Sir Robert Reid, formerly Liberal attorney-general, suggested that the Government endeavor to obtain an alteration of the laws of naval warfare, making food stuffs not contraband of war, and exempting personal property from capture.

Such an agreement, he thought, would withdraw all temptation for foreign nations to build strong navies.

GERMANY'S IDEAS OF THE DOMINION

Believes Roosevelt is Ambitious to Add Canada to the Republic

MONTREAL FIRM'S LETTER

Canada Applied to End Tariff War She would be Courteously Treated Says a Paper

London, May 18.—The German papers are seeking consolation in the Canadian surtax, in the belief that President Roosevelt is working for the day when every European power will be driven from the American continent.

The Kreuz Zeitung says the whole tone of President Roosevelt's ideas is ultimately menacing to Britain as the possessor of Canada.

The Kolnische Zeitung, in an inspired paragraph says it has before it in a letter from a large firm of Montreal importers, written to friends in Germany, advocating that Canada take the first step towards an understanding between the two countries, since it was she that caused the German countermeasure.

The Zeitung remarks that on the German side, Canada would be met with complaisance so far as German interests permit.

FINDING OF OLD COINS

Pots of Them Green with Mold Discovered by British Workmen

London, May 18.—A workman who was digging a water trench for a water main in Croydon, England, felt his pick smash through something which examination proved to be two earthenware pots filled with coins.

He immediately took part of his find to the authorities at the town hall, and steps were at once taken to prevent any loss of the coins still remaining in the trench. The earth that had been removed was carefully sifted. In all, some 3,700 bronze coins were recovered, with the fragments of the two round pots in which they had lain.

At the British Museum they were later on pronounced to have been struck between the years 337 and 350 A.D. A number of them appear to have at one time been gilded, for when cleaned with acid flakes of gilt were loosened.

Though quite green with age, the coins are in excellent preservation, the various designs having been skillfully executed. It is understood that the crown cannot claim them as "treasure trove," for that peculiar right exists only in the case of discoveries of gold and silver. The coins will be deposited in the town hall museum.

CARNEGIE AND CANADA

Comment of British Press on Philanthropist's Canadian Views

London, May 18.—The London Daily Chronicle ridicules Mr. Andrew Carnegie's talk about Canada, and says: "A country which can develop an external trade such as the Dominion has done in ten years, from $241,000,000 to $123,000,000, is not in as much danger of absorption by a neighboring rival as Mr. Carnegie appears to anticipate."

FOUND CHILD IN A TRUNK

Neighbors Accuse Stepmother of Inflicting Cruel Punishment

Pittsburg, May 17.—Mrs. Mary Guitas, of West Park, is accused by her husband before Justice Barnhart of cruelty to her stepchild. Neighbors declare the woman placed the child, which is only 3 years old, in a trunk and closed the lid. The child had been crying.

The woman left the house shortly after, and the child was released by neighbors. The latter declare that the child was black in the face.

THE GERMAN FLEET

An [illegible] that Shows that the Old Animosities are Dying

Brest, France, May 18.—The German squadron, commanded by Admiral Prince Henry of Prussia, arrived off this port yesterday, at the same time that the French northern squadron entered. As this was the first visit of German warships to French waters in years, the appearance of Prince Henry's squadron caused much comment and commotion. Salutes and visits were exchanged.

Prince Henry's squadron came from Kiel and is on its way to Spain and Portugal.

THE WORLD'S POPULATION

[illegible] Calculated that There are 1,544 [illegible] People

Berlin, May 18.—New statistics on religion have been compiled by Dr. H. Zeller, director of the statistical bureau in Stuttgart. The total census of mankind, according to his calculation, amounts to 1,544,510,000. Of this number he allots to Christianity 534,940,000; to Islam, 175,290,000; to Judaism, 10,860,000; and to other religions, 823,120,000. Under this general heading he includes 300,000,000 followers of Confucius, 214,000,000 Brahmins and 121,000,000 Buddhists. He estimates that out of each 1,000 of the earth's inhabitants, 346 are Christian, 114 Mohammedan, 7 Israelite and 523 adherents of other religions.

A GREAT LABOR CRISIS IN CHICAGO

Nearly 200,000 Union Workmen will Go on Strike

AN APPEAL TO THE STATE

Governor Yates will Interfere — A State of Anarchy May Result

Chicago, May 18.—Labor leaders interested in the strike of the negro waiters employed in the Kohlsaat restaurants declared to-day that they will tie up the whole city before they would allow the waiters to lose the strike. The threat is due to the assertion that the Employers' Association would force union labor out of all the hotels and restaurants if the waiters do not return to work. The Teamsters' Union numbering 30,000 men, offered to support the waiters, by preventing any supplies being delivered to the bakeries and lunch rooms. Its officers declare that if the Employers' Association does not withdraw its aid from the Kohlsaat Company the entire union will go out against all the members of the Employers' Association. Conferences between the Deering strikers, the laundry workers and their respective employers were held to-day, but there is no prospect of a settlement of either strike.

One thousand blacksmiths on the Rock Island and Northwestern Railroads went out this morning to compel those companies to sign the new wage scales. The shopmen threaten to join them.

The local labor situation has become so grave that Governor Yates has caused the state board of arbitration to come here and open permanent quarters. The board has invited both sides of the several strikes now involving 23,000 workers, to submit their differences to that body, while Chairman Selfridge of the local board of arbitration has asked the laundry workers to submit their grievances to that body. But local unions charge that the local board is composed entirely of employers. The business men express a hope that the state board may inspire greater confidence, otherwise the city is menaced by a monster strike which will invole 150,000 union workers.

The rumor is current to the effect that all the hotels and restaurants have resolved to discharge all union help and employ non-union workers from the small towns.

TERRIBLE MASSACRE OF HEBREWS IN RUSSIA

Scenes at Kiskinaff are Too Terribly Revolting to be Adevually Described

OVER THREE HUNDRED PEOPLE WERE KILLED

The Effect Will be to Hasten Movement of the Jews to Palestin—Full Details at Hand

Vienna, May 18.—Detailed reports of the outbreaks against the Jews at Kishineff, Russia, have been received from official Zionist correspondents there, and far exceed in revolting horror and hideousness any previous descriptions. Systematic attempts were made by the Russian officialdom to suppress the truth, but in spite of the rigid censorship of the press and of the mails, special agents sent to investigate, have managed to evade the vigilance of the censor, and to bring the real facts before the world.

The first outbreak began at Kishineff. The Russian mob overwhelmed the Jews one hundred to one, carrying fire and devastation throughout the entire Jewish district of the city. Like fiends they sprang upon the helpless disarmed Jews massacring the victims and torturing with every hideous and indescribably outrage. Women were throttled subjected to every dishonor, or shot down mercilessly. Their children were thrown from windows, and butchered before their eyes. Jewish men attempted, even in their unarmed condition to defend their wives, children and homes, but were shot or butchered merilessly.

JEWISH QUARTER WRECKED.

For three days the brutal Russian mob roamed the streets, massacring, pillaging, torturing and outraging. No Jew in all Kishineff was unwounded. Not a house or store was left undemolished. The outbreak of 1881 was mere child's play compared with the present massacre. The mob, after carrying off all the goods on which they could lay hands, destroyed the rest by pouring kerosene oil thereon and burning. The whole Jewish quarter is completely wrecked. Not a Jewish home or warehouse was left standing.

The police, whose duty it was to defend the Jews, only aided and abetted the mob, and when Jews approached the chief of police and demanded protection, they were fired out of police headquarters, and literally torn to pieces by the frenzied Russians. Every synagogue was wrecked. The scrolls of the law, after being desecrated with filth, were hurled into the flames. The military authorities, who secretly sympathized with the mob, remained perfectly indifferent, and only after the slaughter had become too horrible for the authorities to safely permit [illegible] ordered to check the mob, and put a stop to the fearful scenes.

STREETS LIKE BATTLEFIELD.

A few days later, in spite of all warnings, violence was renewed, and a still more violent outbreak took place at Tiraspol. Here, although but few in number, as compared with their assailants, the Jews made a desperate stand. They managed to seize a magazine of arms, and for several hours held their assailants at bay. Among their assailants were quite a number of police and soldiers who were openly helping the mob, but notwithstanding the superior arms of the latter, the Jews fought so desperately that they drove the mob and soldiers back over and over again, and it was only after a long fight that the Jews were overcome by superior numbers, and were slaughtered almost to a man.

The streets of the town presented the appearance of a battlefield. Slain Jews, Russian soldiers, police and workingmen were lying comingled in heaps upon the ground.

It is estimated that during these outbreaks over three hundred Jews were killed, about seven hundred seriously wounded, and over one thousand slightly injured.

At present the whole district is under military control, troops having been tardily sent to restore order. The Russian Government pretends to be innocent of any complicity, but there is abundant proof of the falseness of this statement, as they were warned long before the uprising of the threatening condition of affairs in this district, but all representations of the Jews were treated with contempt. It is a significant fact, too, that the police and soldiers openly aided the mob as long as they dared to do so with safety.

Dr. Mandelstamm and Messrs. Kolan-Bernstein and Temkin, the Zionist leaders, are working indefatigably to succour the helpless Jews who survived the slaughter, and who are all reduced to absolute want. Mainly through the instrumentality of Dr. Mandelstamm and the Zionist associations on this part of Russia, carloads of bread and other provisions have been secured from Odessa and the survivors are relying entirely upon Zionist help to save them from actual starvation. Were it not for the aid which is being given to the sufferers from this source, the death rate would be much larger, as it is the hospitals are crowded with wounded.

RELIEF OF VIENNA.

Vienna, May 18.—The desperate outbreaks against the Jews in Russia has resulted in immediate action on the part of the chief executive of the Zionist movement here, and important measures are being planned of relief. It is stated that Dr. Herzl, the head of the Zionist movement, will at an early date visit Constantinople, and while the object of his visit is kept secret, it is surmised that he is taking active steps to arrange for the transportation to the newly acquired Zionist territory in [illegible] persecuted Russian Jews. It is known that the territory recently acquired by Dr. Hertzl and the Zionists, between Succoth and Gaza, in Palestine, will easily accommodate a large population.

THE LONDON VIEW.

London, May 18.—The Zionist Federation here is endeavoring to have official steps taken to stop the outrages. Michael Davitt, the Irish home ruler, has accepted the task of visiting Russia, and investigating at the scene of the outrages, the true condition of affairs. He is leaving for Kishineff immediately.

THE WAR CLOUD IS VERY OMINOUS

The Situation in the Balkans is Not Improving in the Least

THE TURKISH ARMY

London, May 18.—The ominous news from the East which reaches London daily, does not tend to peace. There is a feeling that war must come, and that, too, very soon. In the Balkans—that dangerous corner—are congested the fears and the ambitions of every great power except the United States; there, in Europe itself, the Turk's receding wave of invasion, which once carried him to the walls of Vienna, still retain autocratic dominion with the grim tenacity of a ruling, a militant and a fanatical race; there the Mohammedan, believing that death in battle with the Christian opens wide the gate to Paradise, and the Christian, with the mighty power of the Christian legions of Russia, Germany, Austria, France and Italy at his back, dwell in adjoining houses and meet everyday in the market place. Risings and throat cuttings and swift and terrible punishment by Turkish officials and appeals to Europe on the part of the punished are inevitable. This situation has caused three wars within the memory of men living—wars which illy re-paid their cost in blood and treasure.

"The Sick Man of the East," in so far as the phrase refers to the average Turk, is one of the healthiest and most virile men on earth. Any one who has seen red rivers of fezes—divisions, brigades, and regiments—spread out in skirmish order, and come forward, careless of all obstacles, to their objective with a skill that is modern and with a fanatical confidence that is medieval, knows that however inimical Turkish rule in Europe may be to the interests of civilization, the Turkish army is a magnificent fighting machine, which may suffer for want of food, raiment and pay, but ever keeps its arms bright.

Turkish opinion of the Macedonians may be summed up in the remarks of an old Turkish sergeant: "These Macedonian Christians are swine," said he. "When the Padishah gives the word we will smite them as the rainstorm lays the dust. The Christians of far-away Europe are another matter. They are true fighting men—but not so good as Turks because they have not the true faith. And they are always stepping in and robbing us of our victories."

A SON'S SURPRISE

Found His Father Whom He Considered Dead

Belleville, May 14.—John Clarke, an old West Belleville boy, took Horace Greeley's advice forty years ago, and went west. He travelled a good deal and finally settled at San Jose, California. He started a fruit ranch and to-day he is wealthy. A short time ago he took a notion that he would like to see his birthplace and he purchased a ticket for Belleville. He found a good many changes in the city, but his greatest surprise was to learn that his father Patrick Clarke, whom he had thought had been dead for years, was living at the home. The old gentleman is too feeble to be removed but his son will see that every comfort will be provided for the old gentleman's remaining years.

Saw-Carriage Broke His Back

Ogdensburg, N.Y., May 18.—Thomas Cunningham, aged 55, while engaged in repairing the carriage to a sawmill of the Gould Paper Company at Page, N.Y., near Lowville, was fatally injured by the carriage running against him and breaking his back. He died shortly after the accident.

CONCLUSION OF THE INVESTIGATION

The Member for Manitoulin Must Give Up That $1,200

HOT SURPRISES FOR BOTH SIDES

The Proceedings Have Consumed 23 Days, Taken the Evidence of 119 Witnesses and Expenped Several Thousand Dollars, But Not Discovered Source of Cash

Toronto, March 16. The evidence in the bribery investigation was concluded to-day. The finish was even more exciting than the inception of the case. There were painful surprises to both sides. In fact the day was replete with sensations, and the chief actors in the dramatic affair appeared to be immeasurably relieved when the counsel announced that the case was closed, with the exception of some women witnesses who will depose as to the whereabouts of Mr. Stratton on the fatal Sept. 11, when Gamey says he was busy consummating the bribery plot at the Parliament Buildings.

NET RESULT OF THE FINISH.

The net result of the days developments was a rude shock to the Provincial Secretary's alibi, an equally hot surprise for Mr. Gamey, in the shape of a prize package handed him by the commission to cover into court the $1200 which he claimed to have borrowed from Frank Sullivan and some startling questions asked sundry bank employes about the mysterious disappearance of a large package of money in September, which Mr. Stratton was supposed to have removed, and failed to place a voucher for. No evidence, however, was received bearing out the idea conveyed by this question, each bank clerk deposing that he had not previously heard such a report. In putting the question, Mr. McPherson stated that "I have been informed that such is true."

CLOSE OF FAMOUS CASE.

And thus was practically concluded one of the most extraordinary trials in the history of the Dominion—a trial fraught with the most serious consequences to that political party whose skirts may be soiled by the mass of filth exposed. During the twenty-three days which the royal commission has consumed in the investigation, 119 witnesses have been examined. Nearly twice that number have been summoned, but for one reason or another have not been called. The known cash expended will aggregate five thousand dollars, paid out almost wholly as expenses for witnesses. Testimony has been sought as far east as Ottawa, as far north and west as Winnipeg, in the Manitoulin Islands, and over in the States. It is estimated that $25,000 will scarcely cover the whole expense of the trial. The evidence of the 119 witnesses will, when completed and put in book form necessary to the court's review, make three volumes equal in number of words to the Bible.

The adjournment was made indefinite, but it is understood that the commission will convene as soon as one of the three ladies who it is claimed were in Mr. Stratton's company Sept. 11, reaches Toronto from Winnipeg. Two days will be accorded each side to make their argument, though the prosecution asserts that a day and a half will suffice them to close their summing up. No decision is expected under several months.

GAMEY MUST DEPOSIT CASH.

From the view of the defence, the feature of the day was the order of the court requiring Gamey to deposit with the court $1200, which he testified he had borrowed from Frank Sullivan, and that it was part of the bribe money received from Mr. Stratton. Just what will be done over this feature is uncertain. During the afternoon, Gamey was in conference with his counsel, as to his obligation to produce this cash. He takes the position that this was an independent transaction, entirely apart from the case under consideration; that he has explained what he did with this particular cash; that the court is aware that it is not in his possession, and, therefore, he is not obliged under the law to account, under the court's orders, especially since the money cannot become a factor in the solution of the case.

BUT, ON THE OTHER HAND!

As viewed by the prosecution, the really important developments of the day relate wholly to the story of the hackdriver, who said that he called at the Parliament Buildings the forenoon of Sept. 11, and drove Mr. Stratton, who was accompanied by three ladies, around the city, returning about an hour later. This is a direct contradiction of Mr. Stratton's alibi story, and, while the counsel for the prosecution ridicule the matter, the savage manner in which the witness was attacked on cross-examination was evidence that the story had struck a vital spot.

LOOKED AFTER THE BOOKS.

George C. Bartlett, teller of the Ontario Bank, submitted a statement, covering transactions over a sum of $1000, which was privately examined. This showed the bank books, and brought out several cross-questions. When no evidence relating to sums that could be regarded as touching the bribe money was elicited, questions were asked concerning recourse to the treasury for larger sums, but the witness thought the sums would have to be very much in excess of the amount before a call would be made on that source. He also filed an exhibit, showing the sources from which the Ontario Bank received $50 and $100 bills from Sept. 9 to 11. There was nothing in this evidence to throw any light on the real point at issue.

BANK MANAGER'S EVIDENCE.

William Smith, manager of the Ontario Bank, swore that the bank officials had been unable to discover any trace of the three thousand dollars in Ontario Bank bills, which figure in the case. The source from whence they came and on whose account the cash was paid, remained shrouded in the deepest mystery.

The Chancellor, at this stage, asked Gamey to go on the stand again. He asked him about the disposition of the balance of the $1200 which he claimed he secured from Frank Sullivan, and, being told that $300 was paid the Crown Piano Company, the court ordered that the full amount be added at once to the boodle cash already deposited.

Henry M. Buther, ledger-keeper in the Dominion Permanent Loan Company; A. Atkinson, paying teller, and William Northgrave, were in turn examined as to a report which Counsel McPherson said he had received that about Sept. 11 a package containing a large sum of money had disappeared from the loan company's office, and after much excitement in the office Mr. Stratton had relieved the employes by explaining that he had removed the package and had forgotten to leave a voucher for the cash.

Each witness was positive he had never heard the story before, and nothing was brought out to support the purpose of the interrogation.

Patrick Maher, the liveryman, was called and explained that his books showed that a Victoria had been charged to Mr. Stratton for the forenoon of September 11. The driver was Weston Green, and he testified that for an hour he had driven Mr. Stratton and several ladies from the Parliament Buildings around the city. He could not be mistaken, but was somewhat confused by the merciless cross-examination.

THREE LADIES TO TESTIFY.

It was upon this point that the commission was asked indulgence by the defence until the evidence of the three ladies in question could be secured, and the adjournment was made indefinite for that purpose.

The Gamey exposure came in the House on Wednesday, March 11. The investigation incident to the charges close May 16, after 23 days' work of seven hours each. This is a brief narration of the story told by the commission's examination. Those who have watched the case closely have been rather impressed with the scope permitted by the commission. There has been little disposition to complain on this score by either side.

SOMEBODY'S DESPERATE GAME.

The aspect of the case that has provoked the greatest interest throughout relates to the desperate game which some man or some set of men are playing in connection with this case. Money has been used freely, and in view of the contradictory nature of the mass of evidence adduced, it is not too much to say that perjury has been a very handy weapon; but who is the perjurer and who is the briber? These are the queries that are freely indulged in. The confusing array of evidence piled up on both sides has established beyond doubt that a conspiracy existed either to bribe Gamey or to involve the government. This phase of the case is too plain to be disputed, but to distinguish between the two great variety of stories is the greatest difficulty of the affair.

WHENCE CAME THE MONEY.

But some strong facts are prominent and none more than the real tangible character of the $3000 now in evidence. From whence came that money of large denominations? That is the interrogation that has busied the prosecution since the plot developed. Here is the positive evidence of a felony. The contention of the defence is that Gamey was the plotter, and that this cash came from that source. The prosecution has sought to prove that Provincial Secretary Stratton delivered the boodle and that it was for the purpose of saving the governments majority. The suspicion has been provoked by the absence of any other ministers or members of the government from the court room or of apparent sympathy with Mr. Stratton, and that the Provincial Secretary had been left to play a lone hand, but there has been nothing positive to support this idea.

STRENGTH IN WITNESS BOX.

[illegible] chief actors on the stand is considered one of the most curious side lights of the case. The singular success of Gamey, Sullivan and Stratton in maintaining their stories practically unshaken in the face of a terrific cross-examination merely contributes depth to the peculiar puzzle presented, in the estimation of those who have sought to follow the case, and who are learned in the art of sifting evidence. It would appear [illegible] that of these three men the penetrating character of the cross-examination would have found a serious flaw if there had been one, in the story. Yet it is physically impossible that the three stories are true.

TANGIBLE EVIDENCE OF CRIME.

But the one fact that has attracted the bulk of attention, and which constitutes the certain and tangible evidence of a crime, relates to the cash deposited. From whence did it come and by whom was it handled and what purpose was it to serve. Three thousand dollars in $50 bills were taken out of some local bank at some time in the first week of September and used in connection with this case. A minute trace is kept by all Canadian banks of bills of large denomination. Daily the supply on hand is noted, and the payment of so large a sum could scarcely have been made without the knowledge of several bank employes. The searchlight of the whole court machinery has been turned upon this point.

SEARCHED BANK BOOKS.

Every banker in the city was was likely to have even remote knowledge of any such transaction has been on the stand or his books have been examined by experts. Detective talent has undoubtedly been used freely on both sides, and after weeks of the most persistent work of all this powerful force of brainy people, not a single absolute trace of the source of the boodle has been unearthed! This is a puzzling feature, which has caused wide speculation in press and public. Yet the money is in evidence. It was drawn from some bank on a cheque, or it passed through some express company or other common source, from which a leak would have been expected. Still, all the "fishing" expeditions of the prosecution in this respect have been complete failures.

GAMEY EXPOSED QUICK ENOUGH.

In contradistinction to the extraordinary mystery which surrounds this transaction, note the rapidity with which Gamey's connection with the fatal bank deposit slip was made public. He went to the bank at noon and made the substitution, and within two hours the fact was in possession of the lawyers for the defence, and in a day was known to the newspaper men of the whole city. The confidence with which bank transactions are supposed to be treated, and the mystery which bank employes are supposed to surround their customers with, did not protect Gamey in this respect. If the same conscientious devotion to duty should characterise the actions of those from whom the boodle funds were secured the guilty parties in this case could hardly escape identification.

NEW BILLS AND CLEAN.

The three [illegible]dence consists of new bills and their clean condition was positive evidence that they had been recently withdrawn from a bank. Every banking institution called upon to supply evidence has done so with a display of frankness that precludes the possibility of deception, and yet there has been deceit somewhere. In consequence of the failure to show the source of boodle, the most scandalous feature of the miserable affair promises to remain a mystery indefinitely. It is impossible that the acumen of the Royal Commission will enable their judicial minds to determine from whence came the bribe money from the evidence thus far submitted.

BOTH PRINCIPALS COMPLAISANT.

Secretary Stratton has stood the trying ordeal well, but no better than Mr. Gamey. There has been a marked improvement in the complacency of the Provincial Secretary since the compromising deposit slip incident and the flight of Gamey to Buffalo. But at no time during the trial has the "nerve" of the member for Manitoulin appeared to desert him, with the possible exception of the Buffalo trip. These two chief actors in the bit of play from real life, one day with a tragic tinge, and the next threatening to develop into a roaring farce comedy of the variety of the McFadden's Flats, have sat within a few feet of each other during the whole investigation. Not infrequently they have been seen gazing intently at each other. Frank Sullivan, too, has been near much of the time. At no time have they appeared to display any particular anger, but rather indifference towards one another.

One of the most damaging incidents of the evidence brought out as against the accused is that of Reporter Hammond's story of Mr. Stratton asking him to suppress certain things about the famous interview which the Provincial Secretary is alleged to have secured from Gamey for the Globe. That this statement came in the nature of a bomb shell to the defence camp is not disputed. However, it was not the proverbial bolt from a clear sky, for there was every evidence of an area of low barometer about that time in the immediate vicinity of the Parliament Buildings and distress signals were being displayed on more than one mast head.

The vigorous manner in which the members of the commission have sought to cast light on this or that obscure part of the evidence and the general scope permited, silenced much carping of "restricted investigation" heard early in the investigation. At the same time there was distinct disappointment that the presence of Frank Sullivan's father-in-law in New York and his sudden departure from Toronto when the House was ripped up by the Gamey exposure, was not gone into more thoroughly by the commission.

Altogether, it would appear that enough damaging evidence has been unearthed in the investigation to keep the friends of the interested parties busy explaining just how it happened, for a campaign or two.

TURNING TOWARDS UNIVERSAL PEACE

British House Discusses Reduction of Naval Armaments

NATIONS TIRED OF WAR

The Views of Responsible Statesmen on the Hope of Securer Days to Come

London, May 18.—The question of the reduction of naval armaments came up again yesterday in the course of a discussion of the navy estimates in the House of Commons. The speakers suggested that the Government take the first step in proposing a reduction to other powers.

Sir Charles Dilke (advanced Radical) said he thought this might be possible. In view of the improved relation between Great Britain and France those two nations might talk the matter over, and subsequently approach Russia. Even if Germany did not agree to a reduction the three powers migh effect something. It was not necessary for Great Britain to build against the United States. It would be as great a mistake to count upon the United States as an enemy, as to count upon her as an active ally, for the United States had always been the great defender of the rights of neutrals.

Mr. Arnold-Foster, the Admiralty Secretary, after having pointed out that it was the duty of the Admiralty to deal with facts as they were, and not as they might be, said that all the great powers were increasing their maritime preparations, notably Russia. He denied that the Admiralty's proposals were in excess of the requirements of the country. The Secretary added that he would not, on that occasion, express any view with regard to the position as affected by the United States—"that was a grave consideration which in future would have to be considered." The Admiralty's present duty was to give the nation a guarantee against attack, and more important still, against defeat by any combination of the powers.

Sir Robert Reid, formerly Liberal attorney-general, suggested that the Government endeavor to obtain an alteration of the laws of naval warfare, making food stuffs not contraband of war, and exempting personal property from capture.

Such an agreement, he thought, would withdraw all temptation for foreign nations to build strong navies.

GERMANY'S IDEAS OF THE DOMINION

MONTREAL FIRM'S LETTER

Canada Applied to End Tariff War She would be Courteously Treated Says a Paper

London, May 18.—The German papers are seeking consolation in the Canadian surtax, in the belief that President Roosevelt is working for the day when every European power will be driven from the American continent.

The Kreuz Zeitung says the whole tone of President Roosevelt's ideas is ultimately menacing to Britain as the possessor of Canada.

The Kolnische Zeitung, in an inspired paragraph says it has before it in a letter from a large firm of Montreal importers, written to friends in Germany, advocating that Canada take the first step towards an understanding between the two countries, since it was she that caused the German countermeasure.

The Zeitung remarks that on the German side, Canada would be met with complaisance so far as German interests permit.

FINDING OF OLD COINS

Pots of Them Green with Mold Discovered by British Workmen

London, May 18.—A workman who was digging a water trench for a wate rmain in Croydon, England, felt his pick smash through something which examination proved to be two earthenware pots filled with coins.

He immediately took part of his find to the authorities at the town hall, and steps were at once taken to prevent any loss of the coins still remaining in the trench. The earth that had been removed was carefully sifted. In all, some 3,700 bronze coins were recovered, with the fragments of the two round pots in which they had lain.

At the British Museum they were later on pronounced to have been struck between the years 337 and 350 A.D. A number of them appear to have at one time been gilded, for when cleaned with acid flakes of gilt were loosened.

Though quite green with age, the coins are in excellent preservation, the various designs having been skillfully executed. It is understood that the crown cannot claim them as "treasure trove," for that peculiar right exists only in the case of discoveries of gold and silver. The coins will be deposited in the town hall museum.

Comment of British Press on Philanthropist's Canadian Views

London, May 18.—The London Daily Chronicle ridicules Mr. Andrew Carnegie's talk about Canada, and says: "A country which can develop an external trade such as the Dominion has done in ten years from $241,000,000 to $423,000,000, is not in as much danger of absorption by a neighboring rival as Mr. Carnegie appears to anticipate."

THE WORLD'S POPULATION

Scientist Has Calculated that There are 1,544,510,000 People

Berlin, May 18.—New statistics on religion have been compiled by Dr. H. Zeller, director of the statistical bureau in Stuttgart. The total census of mankind, according to his calculation, amounts to 1,544,510,000. Of this number he allots to Christianity 534,940,000; to Islam, 175,290,000; to Judaism, 10,860,000; and to other religions, 823,420,000. Under this general heading he includes 300,000,000 followers of Confucianism, 214,000,000 Brahmins and 121,000,000 Buddhists. He estimates that out of each 1,000 of the earth's inhabitants, 346 are Christian, 114 Mohammedan, 7 Israelite and 523 adherents of other religions.

A GREAT LABOR CRISIS IN CHICAGO

Nearly 200,000 Union Workmen will Go on Strike

AN APPEAL TO THE STATE

Governor Yates will Interfere — A State of Anarchy May Result

Chicago, May 18.—Labor leaders interested in the strike of the negro waiters employed in the Kohlsaat restaurants declared to-day that they will tie up the whole city before they would allow the waiters to lose the strike. The threat is due to the assertion that the Employers' Association would force union labor out of all the hotels and restaurants if the waiters do not return to work. The Teamsters' Union numbering 30,000 men, offered to support the waiters by preventing any supplies being delivered to the bakeries and lunch rooms. Its officers declare that if the Employers' Association does not withdraw its aid from the Kohlsaat Company the entire union will go out against all the members of the Employers' Association. Conferences between the Deering strikers, the laundry workers and their respective employers were held to-day, but there is no prospect of a settlement of either strike.

One thousand blacksmiths on the Rock Island and Northwestern Railroads went out this morning to compel those companies to sign the new wage scales. The shopmen threaten to join them.

The local labor situation has become so grave that Governor Yates has caused the state board of arbitration to come here and open permanent quarters. The board has invited both sides of the several strikes now involving 23,000 workers, to submit their differences to that body, while Chairman Selfridge of the local board of arbitration has asked the laundry workers to submit their grievances to that body. But local unions charge that the local board is composed entirely of employers. The business men express a hope that the state board may inspire greater confidence, otherwise the city is menaced by a monster strike which will involve 150,000 union workers.

The rumor is current to the effect that all the hotels and restaurants have resolved to discharge all union help and employ non-union workers from the small towns.

TERRIBLE MASSACRE OF HEBREWS IN RUSSIA

Scenes at Kiskinaff are Too Terribly Revolting to be Adevually Describea

OVER THREE HUNDRED PEOPLE WERE KILLED

The Effect Will be to Hasten Movement of the Jews to Palestin ---Full Details at Hand

Vienna, May 18.—Detailed reports of the outbreaks against the Jews at Kishneff, Russia, have been received from official Zionist correspondents there, and far exceed in revolting horror and hideousness any previous descriptions. Systematic attempts were made by the Russian officialdom to suppress the truth, but in spite of the rigid censorship of the press and of the mails, special agents sent to investigate, have managed to evade the vigilance of the censor, and to bring the real facts before the world.

The first outbreak began at Kishineff. The Russian mob overwhelmed the Jews one hundred to one, carrying fire and devastation throughout the entire Jewish district of the city. Like fiends they sprang upon the helpless disarmed Jews massacring the victims and torturing with every hideous and indescribably outrage. Women were throttled subjected to every dishonor, or shot down mercilessly. Their children were thrown from windows, and butchered before their eyes. Jewish men attempted, even in their unarmed condition to defend their wives, children and homes, but were shot or butchered merilessly.

JEWISH QUARTER WRECKED.

For three days the brutal Russian mob roamed the streets, massacring, pillaging, torturing and outraging. No Jew in all Kishneff was unwounded. Not a house or store was left undemolished. The outbreak of 1881 was mere child's play compared with the present massacre.

The mob, after carrying off all the goods on which they could lay hands, destroyed the rest by pouring kerosene oil thereon and burning. The whole Jewish quarter is completely wrecked. Not a Jewish home or warehouse was left standing.

The police, whose duty it was to defend the Jews, only aided and abetted the mob, and when Jews approached the chief of police and demanded protection, they were fired out of police headquarters, and literally torn to pieces by the frenzied Russians. Every synagogue was wrecked. The scrolls of the law, after being desecrated with filth, were hurled into the flames. The military authorities, who secretly sympathized with the mob, remained perfectly indifferent, and only after the slaughter had become too horrible for the authorities to safely permit its continuing, were the soldiers them [illegible] stop to the fearful scenes.

STREETS LIKE BATTLEFIELD.

A few days later, in spite of all warnings, violence was renewed, and a still more violent outbreak took place at Tiraspol. Here, although but few in number, as compared with their assailants, the Jews made a desperate stand. They managed to seize a magazine of arms, and for several hours held their assailants at bay. Among their assailants were quite a number of police and soldiers, who were openly helping the mob, but notwithstanding the superior arms of the latter, the Jews fought so desperately that they drove the mob and soldiers back over and over again, and it was only after a long fight that the Jews were overcome by superior numbers, and were slaughtered almost to a man.

The streets of the town presented the appearance of a battlefield. Slain Jews, Russian soldiers, police and workingmen were lying commingled in heaps upon the ground.

It is estimated that during these outbreaks over three hundred Jews were killed, about seven hundred seriously wounded, and over one thousand slightly injured.

At present the whole district is under military control, troops having been tardily sent to restore order. The Russian Government pretends to be innocent of any complicity, but there is abundant proof of the falseness of this statement, as they were warned long before the uprising of the threatening condition of affairs in this district, but all representations of the Jews were treated with contempt. It is a significant fact, too, that the police and soldiers openly aided the mob as long as they dared to do so with safety.

Dr. Mandelstamm and Messrs. Kohan-Bernstein and Temkin, the Zionist leaders, are working indefatigably to succour the helpless Jews who survived the slaughter, and who are all reduced to absolute want. Mainly through the instrumentality of Dr. Mandelstamm and the Zionist associations on this part of Russia, carloads of bread and other provisions have been secured from Odessa and the survivors are relying entirely upon Zionist help to save them from actual starvation. Were it not for the aid which is being given to the sufferers from this source, the death rate would be much larger, as it is the hospitals are crowded with wounded.

RELIEF OF VIENNA.

Vienna, May 18.—The desperate outbreaks against the Jews in Russia has resulted in immediate action on the part of the chief executive of the Zionist movement here, and important measures are being planned of relief. It is stated that Dr. Herzl, the head of the Zionist movement, will at an early date visit Constantinople, and while the object of his visit is kept secret, it is surmised that he is taking active steps to arrange for the transportation to the newly acquired Zionist territory in Palestine, of a large number of the [illegible] that the territory recently acquired by Dr. Hertzl and the Zionists, between Succoth and Gaza, in Palestine, will easily accommodate a large population.

THE LONDON VIEW.

London, May 18.—The Zionist Federation here is endeavoring to have official steps taken to stop the outrages. Michael Davitt, the Irish home ruler, has accepted the task of visiting Russia, and investigating at the scene of the outrages the true condition of affairs. He is leaving for Kishneff immediately.

THE WAR CLOUD IS VERY OMINOUS

The Situation in the Balkans is Not Improving in the Least

THE TURKISH ARMY

London, May 18.—The ominous news from the East which reaches London daily, does not tend to peace. There is a feeling that war must come, and that, too, very soon. In the Balkans—that dangerous corner—are congested the fears and the ambitions of every great power except the United States; there, in Europe itself, the Turk's receding wave of invasion, which once carried him to the walls of Vienna, still retain autocratic dominion with the grim tenacity of a ruling, a militant and a fanatical race; there the Mohammedan, believing that death in battle with the Christian opens wide the gate to Paradise, and the Christian, with the mighty power of the Christian legions of Russia, Germany, Austria, France and Italy at his back, dwell in adjoining houses and meet everyday in the market place. Risings and throat cuttings and swift and terrible punishment by Turkish officials and appeals to Europe on the part of the punished are inevitable. This situation has caused three wars within the memory of men living—wars which illy re-paid their cost in blood and treasure.

"The Sick Man of the East," in so far as the phrase refers to the average Turk, is one of the healthiest and most virile men on earth. Any one who has seen red rivers of fezes—divisions, brigades, and regiments—spread out in skirmish order, and come forward, careless of all obstacles, to their objective with a skill that is modern, and with a fanatical confidence that is medieval, knows that however inimical Turkish rule in Europe may be to the interests of civilization, the Turkish army is a magnificent fighting machine, which may suffer for want of food, raiment and pay, but ever keeps its arms bright.

Turkish opinion of the Macedonians may be summed up in the remarks of an old Turkish sergeant: "These Macedonian Christians are swine," said he., "When the Padishah gives the word we will smite them as the rainstorm lays the dust. The Christians of far-away Europe are another matter. They are true fighting men—but not so good as Turks because they have not the true faith. And they are always stepping in and robbing us of our victories."

A SON'S SURPRISE

Found His Father Whom He Considered Dead

Belleville, May 14.—John Clarke, an old West Belleville boy, took Horace Greeley's advice forty years ago, and went west. He travelled a good deal and finally settled at San Jose, California. He started a fruit ranch and to-day he is wealthy. A short time ago he took a notion that he would like to see his birthplace and he purchased a ticket for Belleville. He found a good many changes in the city, but his greatest surprise was to learn that his father Patrick Clarke, whom he had thought had been dead for years, was living at the home. The old gentleman is too feeble to be removed but his son will see that every comfort will be provided for the old gentleman's remaining years.

Saw-Carriage Broke His Back

Ogdensburg, N.Y., May 18.—Thomas Cunningham, aged 55, while engaged in repairing the carriage to a saw-mill of the Gould Paper Company at Page, N.Y., near Lowville, was fatally injured by the carriage running against him and breaking his back. He died shortly after the accident.

PETERBOROUGH, MAY 18, 1903.

AROUND THE GLOBE IN 40 SECONDS

In "A Midsummer Night's Dream" Puck offers to "put a girdle around the earth in forty minutes." Now this miraculous performance, conceived in fancy and never expected to get beyond the bounds of fiction, is to be done in just one-sixtieth of the time named as the limit of fairy power.

The fact is that prosaic science in the twentieth century is beating the supernatural of earlier ages at its own game. The human mind offers nothing so improbable as the actual occurrences of modern times.

A tour de force is to be attempted—and undoubtedly with success—to celebrate the completion of the new Pacific cable by sending a message around the globe in forty seconds.

When Job asked if the lightning could be sent to give him answer he little could have dreamed that science would some day train the lightning to flash the answer "yes" around the earth in less time than he took to put his question.

And this message around the earth in forty seconds is not the end by any means. We may think it wonderful, but in reality it is a crude performance. It should not take forty seconds to send word around the earth. An electrical impulse will make the circuit several times in a single second. So there is much remains for man to do. He must more effectually get himself out of the way.

The delay in getting this message over the 25,000 miles of its transit is caused by the necessity of repetition. It will have to be picked off of the cables and forwarded over land lines, and vice versa, several times. The human element with its blundering and slowness still enters into the problem. Man must still further efface himself and leave the forces free to act unhindered before there can be instantaneous transmission.

Intelligence is a marvelous thing, but it is not the most marvelous. The forces of nature, of which human intelligence is but the groom and driver, are far more marvelous. They never blunder nor hesitate. When properly harnessed they do their work unerringly and without delay. All they require is that blundering man shall strive not to turn them from their ways, but to fit himself to them.

THE BATTLE OF THE TONGUES

There is a great battle going on to-day that has been waged for ages and will be waged until a triumphant victor puts his heel upon the chest of the last of his fallen foes.

There is no din to this battle, no roar of musketry or artillery, no clashing of steel against steel, no charges of brigade against brigade. The battle is a struggle of silence. It is the battle of languages.

Today there are four great factors to be reckoned with in this struggle for supremacy. They are the English, Russian, French and German.

Languages are the outgrowth of one common tongue. Time was when the earth, peopled by a handful of nomads, had but one language.

Why?

Because, being always together, necessity required that every article, every object, every living thing that was known to primeval man should have its particular name.

Isolation took place and as the tribes separated and acquired new habits and new customs, various branches of the human race adopted new and different names to designate the numerous articles and things created by the hand of man or discovered in their travels. Thus isolation gave to the world numerous tongues.

Today isolation is giving way to amalgamation, to centralization and to neighborly communication. Every immigrant who crosses the broad expanse of an ocean to another than his native clime, every tourist who visits in quest of pleasure or profit the realm of another race but adds a drop to the great, swelling whirlpool that will end in the amalgamation of all languages into one universal tongue.

Evolution is like a great revolving sphere that gathers as it rolls along. Ever increasing in dimensions, unwieldy and eccentric in contour, it will once more resume its original shape when it again reaches the fulcrum from whence it started.

When the theoretical sphere of evolving languages has reached its original plane we will again behold it in symmetry as when it first began.

The problem in which language shall predominate. The air of all the Czars from the time of Dmitri has been to Russianize the world. The slogan has been, "Be friends to all nations but one; crush that one, and then be friends to all the remainder but one, and crush that one," and so on until Russianism is alone.

This deep, prolonged game of conquest has met with a worthy foe.

The beautiful expressions of all lexicons blended together have formed the language that is to conquer the world.

What need to speak its name? Where, but a century ago, a mere handful of Anglo-Saxons conversed in common language, today hundreds of millions wield the Saxon tongue.

The future will see it the predominating speech of the world.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

The Bell Telephone Company is understood to be contemplating the starting of a rural telephone service in the Portage district in Manitoba. The plan under discussion is to form clubs of ten subscribers within ten miles of the town. The rental of each instrument is expected to be about $30 a year. Town subscribers, it is said, will be able to speak to rural subscribers free of extra charge.

The young Englishmen arriving in Winnipeg are getting work as farm hands with remarkable rapidity. On one occasion 46 got employment in an hour and a quarter, and in addition 70 left for Souris. So far the main line of the Canadian Pacific from Winnipeg to Brandon and the Souris branch have absorbed the larger number. Married couples find it especially easy to get situations. Well-to-do farmers are reported to be disposed to build a second house on their land for a laborer and his wife. The immigrants in general seem well satisfied.

How Are Your Kidneys?

This Simple Test Will Tell.

If any of your family have been troubled with kidney disease, make a test of the urine, and satisfy yourself whether you need a food remedy before the disease has caused serious complications.

To-morrow morning put some urine in a glass or bottle, and let it stand for twenty-four hours. If it shows particles or germs floating about, is milky or cloudy, or contains a reddish sediment, then your kidneys are diseased.

Commence at once to take Ferrozone to arrest these unnatural conditions. Ferrozone is especially intended for the immediate relief and cure of kidney and bladder troubles, and its health giving, strengthening properties will be felt at once in new pure blood, healthy circulation, good color, increased vigor, and a general strengthening of the system.

Ferrozone quickly corrects urinal disorders, headache, and pain in the back. It improves the appetite, digests the food, and makes it nourish the nerves, makes them strong and enduring, and fits one for lots of hard work.

Don't be misled by cheap so-called kidney cures offered by dealers for the sake of extra profits. There is only one safe and reliable specific Bladder, Liver, and urinal troubles, and its name is Ferrozone.

Refuse point blank to accept a substitute, and insist on your druggist supplying the genuine Ferrozone; it is the best. Price 50 cts. per box, or three boxes for $1.25. At all druggists or by mail from N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

AFTER TWENTY-EIGHT YEARS

A Story of the Boer War that is Stranger than Fiction

London, May 18.—Speaking at a yeomanry dinner at Colchester on Monday night, Col. Lermitte related an incident in the late war. Mr. Betts, who was serving with the yeomanry, picked up a pair of field-glasses which had been dropped by a Boer whom he was pursuing. They had the inscription, "H. J. Lermitte, Scotch Fusiliers." When the war was over Mr. Betts proceeded to make enquiries, with the result that a short time ago he was able to return them to Col. Lermitte. The glasses, it transpired, were lost twenty-three years ago at Laings Nek, and were attached to the saddle of a horse which was shot under Col. Lermitte in that engagement.

A DRINK FIEND

Terrible Wager Made which Cost a Frenchman His Life

Paris, May 18.—While a number of workmen were sitting in a wine shop in the Rue de Clarenton yesterday, one of them, a man of forty, named Negocier, made a wager that he would drink a dozen glasses of absinthe while 11 o'clock was striking. The wager was taken and twelve glasses placed on the table. On the first stroke Negocier swallowed his first glass, and the clock just finished striking when he drank the twelfth and last. While his companions were applauding the feat Negocier staggered and fell heavily to the floor. He was picked up dead.

NO POACHING ALLOWED

British and French Schooners Seized by a Cuban Cutter

Havana, Cuba, May 16.—Cuban revenue cutters have seized six British and French fishing schooners which were poaching in insular waters.

The American Medical Association committee here is satisfied that Cuba's sanitary conditions are such now as to favor suppression of all quarantine restrictions against the island.

Doris—Yes, she was furious about the way in which that paper reported her marriage. Helen—Did it allude to her age? Doris—Indirectly. It stated that "Miss Olde and Mr. Yale were married, the latter being a well-known collector of antiques."

TRANSFER OFFICE, BRISTOL, CONN.

This Company has a perpetual lease on 20 acres of proven oil land in SECTION NINE (9) of the Boulder district, and this section and the immediate vicinity have the best and largest number of producing wells in the entire district.

Our Well No. 1 came in, in January and is now pumping and shipping Oil regularly to the Refinery.

The Directors have decided to put down well No. 2 at once, and they now offer a block of the Treasury stock for the next 30 days at

10 Cents per Share, after that price will be advanced.

It is a well known fact that a 15 barrel well will pay over 100 per cent. profit upon its cost.

This is no longer a speculation for we have proved that oil is on our ground, and we now have oil in paying quantities, with two wells pumping we can soon pay dividends, and every well we put down increases our earning capacity.

This is a business proposition, managed by business men.

STOCK MARKETS

N. Y. CENTRAL CHEAP ENOUGH

New York, May 16.—Investors ought to take hold of New York Central stock at present prices. Speculators in our opinion can make no mistake either if they will also buy this stock. Relatively speaking New York Central is at present about parity. Consider the fact that New York Central absolutely owns outright 98 per cent. of the $50,000,000 of Lake Shore stock, which company has available cash surplus of about twenty million which is being increased at the rate of nearly $14,000,000 per annum. Lake Shore earns about 16 per cent. annually upon its stock. The equities of New York Central in other roads make the net earnings of New York Central fully 12 per cent. per annum, though it is at present only disbursing 5 per cent. The real estate of New York Central in the various cities through which the road runs is worth fully one hundred millions, or almost the par value of the companies entire capitalization. It is a standard Vanderbilt stock and at all times a most reliable investment and a perpetual money earner. Last year it sold close to 170. Its surplus is larger today than it was then and it is earning more money. It owns in its entirety the West Shore, controls the Boston and Albany, the Rome, Watertown and Ogdensburg, and various other lines, out of all of which it derives a profit. One thing is certain, those who will buy New York Central stock at present prices, even should it sag somewhat lower, will be, to all ostensible purposes afforded an opportunity in the immediate future to dispose of their holdings at a profit.

A SON'S SURPRISE

Found His Father Whom He Considered Dead

Belleville, May 14.—John Clarke, an old West Belleville boy, took Horace Greeley's advice forty years ago, and went west. He travelled a good deal and finally settled at San Jose, California. He started a fruit ranch and to-day he is wealthy. A short time ago he took a notion that he would like to see his birthplace and he purchased a ticket for Belleville. He found a good many changes in the city, but his greatest surprise was to learn that his father Patrick Clarke, whom he had thought had been dead for years, was living at the home. The old gentleman is too feeble to be removed but his son will see that every comfort will be provided for the old gentleman's remaining years.

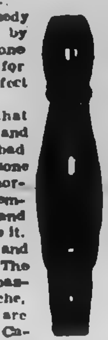
MINISTERS PRAISE
CATARRHOZONE

Rev. D. K. Smith of White Head, N. S. Was cured of catarrh by Catarrhozone.

The following statement coming from one of Nova Scotia's prominent churchman carries conviction of the fact that Catarrhozone is all right.

"For years I tried all the advertised remedies for Catarrh, but was unable to get relief until I used Catarrhozone. Before I had used the Inhaler half an hour my nostrils became free and clear so that I could breathe easily through them. In one day Catarrhozone helped me immensely, stopped my coughing and hawking and cured a dull pain that was continually over my eyes. I have great pleasure in recommending Catarrhozone. I have proved it the best remedy for Catarrh and diseases of the throat, lungs and bronchial tubes."



There is certainly no remedy that is so well spoken of by the clergy as Catarrhozone and this can be accounted for by the fact that it gives perfect satisfaction.

It is the only remedy that reaches all diseased parts and gives quick relief without bad after effects. Catarrhozone contains no cocaine nor morphine. It is nature's own remedy, soothing and healing, and pleases everybody that uses it.

Catarrhozone is a local and constitutional treatment. The Inhaler clears the air passages, stops the headache, and Ferrozone Tablets that are included in every complete Catarrhozone outfit, never fail to drive impurities from the blood. This builds up and strengthens the system so that Catarrhal conditions cannot exist.

The speediest cure for Coughs, Colds, Catarrh, Bronchitis and Asthma is Catarrhozone. Two months' treatment, price $1.00; small size, 25 cents; at druggists, or N. C. Polson & Co. Kingston, Ont.

The Canadian Westinghouse Electric Co., Looking for a Location

The great Westinghouse Electric Company, probably the largest manufacturer of electrical machinery in the world have decided to open a branch in Canada. It is said that Hamilton is likely to be chosen as the site for the factory, but this is, we understand, by no means certain. Peterborough's claims should at once be presented to the management of the company without delay. We have advantages that Hamilton has not, and a strong effort should be made to get the company to locate here. Then we would indeed be the electric city.

KILLED IN A RUNAWAY

Arthur Rowe, a Farm Hand, Accidently Kill d in Monaghan

On Saturday morning about 10 o'clock a fatal runaway accident occurred in South Monaghan, resulting in the death of Arthur Rowe, a farm hand employed by Mr. Robert Fisher, ex-Warden of Northumberland and Durham, who resides in South Monaghan, near Bensfort.

The deceased, who was 19 years of age, and belonged to Garden Hill, was employed with another man, in drawing manure from the barns to the fields. The two drivers, it is said, engaged in a race to see which would reach the barn first. Rowe's team became unmanageable, and ran away, with the result that the young man was instantly killed.

Dr. Turner, of Millbrook, was called, and communicated with Dr. Grey, coroner, in regard to holding an inquest, but the latter decided that one was unnecessary.

Sunday School Anniversary

The Sunday school anniversary services in connection with the George street Methodist church, took place yesterday. Special sermons were delivered by Rev. J. P. Wilson, pastor. A Coming Event

St. John's Choir Boys will give a concert in St. John's school room on Friday evening, May 29th. Those who were fortunate enough to attend the concert of the boys last year will have some idea of the treat that is in store. The music will be entirely new and an excellent programme is assured. The concert is under the direction of Mr. Jos. Halpany.

Annual District Meeting

The annual district meeting of the Peterborough District of Methodist Churches will be held on Tuesday in the George street Methodist church. The Ministerial session begins at 9.30 a.m., and the general session at 1.30 p.m. On Tuesday evening at 8 p.m. a public meeting will be held in the George street church, and will be addressed by Rev. Dr. Metzler, D. W. Dumble, Esq., and others. The subject will be "The Wesley Bi-centenary."

The Athletics will Have a Promenade Concert

The Athletic Lacrosse Club, the winners of the City League last year, are giving a grand promenade concert in the Brock street rink on Friday evening, May 22nd.

The Athletics have entered in the junior C.L.A. this year, which necessitates considerable expense, and the boys are also handicapped as to grounds, etc.

That the grand promenade on Friday night will be a huge success is only what the boys are entitled to, as the general public had the privilege of witnessing last season a score of good matches, at which the lacrosse put up by the Athletics was a credit to the players. This season the Athletics came out stronger than ever, and are determined to land the championship. Let the lovers of the national game in Peterborough turn out and do what they can to encourage and assist the team.

ESCAPED IN NIGHT CLOTHES

Passengers in Burning Pullman Car Run for Their Lives

New Haven, Conn., May 18. — A Sleeper on the Consolidated Railroad attached to a train on its way from New York to Boston, caught fire at the Union station from a defective gas pipe at 1 o'clock this morning. Twenty persons were in the car asleep at the time, and they had time only to rush out in their night garments. The interior of the car was destroyed, the passengers losing their clothing and valuables.

TORONTO STREET RAILWAY

A MASS MEETING OF EMPLOYEES FAVOR A STRIKE

Company Refuse to Recognize the Union—Further Attempt will be Made to Settle

Toronto, May 18.—It looks as though there was likely to be a tie-up of the Toronto Street Railway. The company has made no important concessions, and in the opinion of the men there does not seem much chance of securing from the company any of the two essentials asked for, recognition of the union, and an increase of wages. There have been also requests for extra pay for night and Sunday work. There have been several conferences between representatives of the union and the management, but the point of division have always been the two named.

It is believed the men would not press for such an advance in wages, or even for any, if the company would frankly recognize the union, but this it is said, the management of the railway positively refuses to do. The men are quietly preparing for a struggle.

The representatives of the men who have been attending the international convention, have come back, it is understood, with full authority to take whatever course they deem best, with the full endorsation of the international body.

Replying to the men's demands for increased wages, the management of the company told them that the extra cost of material and the higher wages now paid in all branches more than wiped out the increased earnings of the company since the last strike. Negotiations, however, are still being carried on.

Affectations

While a few persons are affected through and through, and can do nothing naturally, most of us are caught here and there by affectation. The affectation of possessing knowledge which is really wanting is one of the commonest forms of the failing. Do you suppose that half the people who talk enthusiastically about music understand or love it? It is the same with art and its fashions. A run on a particular set of books is, to a large extent, a similar pretence. Many readers will say honestly what they have thought as they read, but a very large number wait on public opinion—or rather what they conceive to be polite opinion—and follow [illegible] never tread of their own free will.

As to affectations of manner, is there not a tendency in some quarters to regard gruffness as a sort of virtue, to think that plainness and bluntness are the signs of sincerity and to cultivate a direct, blurting for of speech, which is supposed to imply truthfulness and thoroughness? Yet men who speak in this way are not necessarily more straightforward than those who gave more play to the graces of conversation. There is an affectation of honesty, which may be a cloak for as much double dealing as if speech were oily and looks humble. And then there is the opposite, and even more inexcusable, affectation of humility by those who wish to curry favor. They fall into mild speech and adopt downcast looks when the style will serve their purpose, though they do not really entertain any of the sentiments which their bearing and demeanor represent. What of the women who cultivate a fascinating delicacy and fineness, a timidity and appealing innocense? It is usually as much a pose as is the braggadocio of the men who boast of their courage and daring and feats, and very plainly hint to the world that they are mighty fellows. All such poses are affectations and they admit of no defense. Be what you are. That is the antidote to every form of affectation.

Little Health Hints

Try eating onions and horseradish to relieve dropsical swellings.

Try buttermilk for the removal of freckels, tan and butternut stains.

Try hot flannel over the seat of neuralgic pain and renew frequently.

Try taking cod liver oil in tomato catsup if you want to make it palatable.

Try hard cider—a wineglassful three times a day—for ague and rheumatism.

Try taking a nap in the afternoon if you are going to be out late in the evening.

Try breathing the fumes of turpentine or carbolic acid to relieve whooping cough.

Handsome Table.

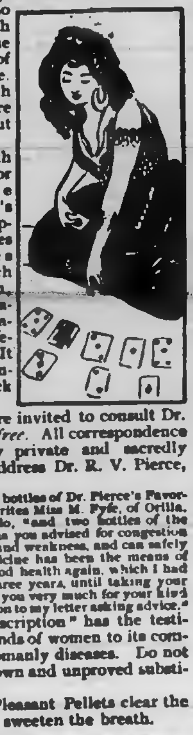
What do you do every week with the pictures that are printed in this newspaper? Did you ever examine them closely. Some of them are works of art for which the artist was paid a large sum.

If you have a little old plain wooden table, you can preserve these works of art and make an ornament at the same time. Select a pretty figure—of course a woman—and place it in the middle of your old table, having previously prepared it by a good scrubbing. Paste securely and, when finished, thert to a coat of this varnish specially prepared for the purpose.

You will be pleased with the effect which is very like that of enamel.

Fortune Telling

does not take into consideration the one essential to woman's happiness — womanly health. There is many a woman whose future seems absolutely unclouded who is marked by her own condition for future disappointment and distress.



The woman who neglects her health is neglecting the very foundation of all good fortune. For without health love loses its lustre and gold is but dross.

Womanly health may be retained or regained by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It establishes regularity, dries the drains which weaken women, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness. It makes weak women strong, sick women well.

Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter free. All correspondence held as strictly private and sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

"I have taken six bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription," writes Miss M. Fyfe, of Orillia, Simcoe Co., Ontario, "and two bottles of the 'Pleasant Pellets' as you advised for congestion of uterus, ovaries, and weakness, and can safely say that your medicine has been the means of restoring me to good health again, which I had not had for over three years, until taking your medicine. I thank you very much for your kind and prompt attention to my letter asking advice."

"Favorite Prescription" has the testimony of thousands of women to its complete cure of womanly diseases. Do not accept an unknown and unproved substitute in its place.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets clear the complexion and sweeten the breath.

AN IMMENSE OCEAN FLEET NOW OWNED BY THE C.P.R.

Great Improvements to Be Made in the Atlantic Service

SIXTY-ONE STEAMERS

Is the Total Strength of the Company's Ships

Montreal, May 19—Very few people are aware that the Canadian Pacific Railway Company has at its command at the present moment a fleet of sixty-one vessels.

Most people have been accustomed to think of the C.P.R. as, nautically speaking, an institution which has possessed for the past decade three ocean going crafts on the Pacific and a few lake boats, more or less pretentious, plying between Collingwood and Port Arthur, and which, more recently, has acquired by purchase a ready made Atlantic fleet from the Elder-Dempster Company.

That this popular conception in entirely erroneous was pointed out today by Mr. Arthur Piers, the newly-appointed manager of steamship lines for the C.P.R.

Mr. Piers was reminded that when he returned recently from Britain he had hinted that the latest acquisitions to the company's ocean-faring property was merely the nucleus of a still greater aggregation of vessels, and he was asked if he could not indicate, even approximately, when that expansion might be expected to commence.

"I can give no definite information on that point," replied Mr. Piers. "Any expansion which takes place will result from natural causes; it will be the outcome of the circumstances that may surround the company at the time. It stands to reason however, that additions to the Atlantic fleet, as at present constituted, must inevitable come. Out of thirteen vessels, although all carry passengers, we have only three which can be considered first class passenger boats. If, then, we find the public is anxious to travel by our line, it follows logically that we must give them accommodation equal to, if not superior, to that afforded by any other line doing business in this port. More vessels will then be demanded, and following the policy of the C.P.R. none but the best will be built. And, indeed, there is no reasons why vessels equal to any running out of Liverpool should not be devoted to the St. Lawrence."

"Will the same remarks apply to the Pacific service?" asked the reporter.

"The three Empress steamships are already as fine as any vessels of their class in the world," replied Mr. Piers. "Built in England, they have a speed of eighteen knots on the measured mile and 16 1-2 knots on a 400 mile sea trip. But the people demand new vessels every now and then. Though only twelve years old they are coming to be called [illegible] presses.' It is more than likely therefore, that new vessels will soon be demanded on the Pacific."

"Is it true that the Empress boats, when superseded on the Japan route, will be made to ply between Vancouver and Australia?" was asked..

"I scarcely think it likely," responded Mr. Piers. "There would be no money in it. It would be a purely one way route. While plenty of cargo could be obtained for the out-going voyage, there would be nothing to bring back, except a few bananas. In contradistinction to that we bring just as much back from Japan and China as we take out.. Some of the papers in British Columbia have asserted that the Empress vessels would be put on the Australian route, but there is no foundation in fact for these assertions."

"From what you have said, Mr Piers," suggested the reporter, it looks as though you would in a few years have under your command one of the largest fleets of ocean vessels anywhere."

"Do you know how many vessels are owned by the C.P.R.?" he asked, in reply. "Few people have any idea. All told we have sixty-one. Aside from those on the trans-oceanic routes we have them doing a coasting trade in the Pacific, on all the inland waters of British Columbia, and on the great lakes."

THE RACE PROBLEM

The Situation in the United States is Becoming More Acute

Washington, May 19.—The negro question in the United States is growing more acute every day. A few days ago in Tennessee, a colored rural mail carrier, who had obtained his appointment strictly under civil service rules, his name standing on the list of available candidates above that of any white man, was stopped on the road by masked and armed men, who told him that it would not be safe for him to try to hold the job. The Postmaster-General is applying a natural remedy—if such it can be called—to the case. He says that if the people on that route do not want a free delivery, they need not have it, but that he certainly will not replace the negro carrier. This time President Roosevelt had nothing to do with the case; he was as innocent as the flowers in the spring; but none the less the incident will add to the already considerable burden he is bearing in connection with the rights and claims of the negro element of the population. The situation is not improving either North or South. What to do with ten millions of unassimilable people is one of the most serious, if not hopeless, problems ever propounded..

THE SUDAN'S PROGRESS UNDER BRITISH RULE

Splendid Results from British Occupancy of the Sudan Country

New York, May 19—The Times says that a traveller who has just returnturned from the Soudan gives an interesting sketch of the transformation that has been effected in that region by British rule since the overthrow of the Khalifa. He says that Khartoum is no longer a dust heap, but a riverside, European, half-completed city on the Blue Nile. Gordon's College is nearly finished, but must wait for pupils. Meanwhile at Omdurman, the Dervish rival of Khartoum and only three miles distant on the White Nile, schools are at work; and among the scholars are gray-headed Soudanese. The Khartoum palace, with its charming gardens is inhabited and is hospitable. An [illegible] at work, and an English Church will be built as soon as funds are forthcoming. A little in the rear of the palace toward the desert, a noble mosque is being erected with the funds from the Wakf, the Mohammedan religious establishment. A capital club, a large post office, fine engineering works, many private houses of officers and officials, nearly all with gardens, a zoological garden, and one fine hotel, the Grand, already line the riverside for more than a mile. At the back, in the desert itself, a mile and a half from the river, are a dozen tribes, each in its own village with its own well. Nine of these tribes had for centuries—up to the battle of Omdurman, September 2, 1898—been hunted and caught and sold as slaves, while the other three tribes—Arab Mohammedans—were the hunters, captors and vendors. Now all these men earn daily wages in Khartoum as mason, bricklayers, carpenters, gardeners, or laborers, peaceably side by side; and in the twelve villages a few native policemen easily maintain order. In the woman market, where, till the battle of Omdurman, thousands of women and where the ears of a woman, whether dead or alive, were exhibited by the slave driver as proof to the slave owner that she had died on the road gum alone is now sold, sorted into heaps—white, pale, and brown.

MR. MCINDOO'S HANDIWORK

A Former Citizen of This Locality Builds a Launch

The Nanaimo, (B.C.) Free Press, has the following, which will be read with interest by many in Peterborough. Mr. Harry McIndoo is a son of Mr. William McIndoo, Pontypool, and brother of Mr. James McIndoo, of Springville:

A new Truscott electric vapor launch was successfully launched yesterday afternoon at Victoria, and made her trial trip to Esquimalt and return without a hitch. The new craft was built for Mr. H. McIndoo, of the Provincial Police Force at Nanaimo, by Harry Vollmars of Galiano Island, and is in every respect a model. Everyone in Victoria who has seen it expresses admiration for its steadiness in the water and for the perfection of its lines. The builder took a great deal of pains with the selection of the stock for the building of the frame. The timber was carefully selected by him, some of it being brought from Alaska for the purpose and then cut for that special purpose.

The machinery was put in her in this city by the Nesbitt Electric Co. She has been fitted up with a sixteen horse power Truscott gasoline engine of the very latest design. With this equipment, it is expected that she will be able to attain a speed of sixteen knots an hour.

Her trial runs were made at this city yesterday. They were in every way eminently successful, and were witnessed by a large crowd interested in watching how the hull and engine would acquit themselves. The first trip was made to the Victoria Arm. With a party of about a dozen on board, including Mr. McIndoo, Mr. Vollmars, the electricians, yachtsmen and others the vessel made the run from the Gorge Bridge to the Post Office in the quick time of eleven minutes. Later in the afternoon the trip was made to Esquimalt, a distance of about five miles. The party comprised nineteen, yet the run was made in about a half an hour each way, though the engine was not put to its greatest capacity.

The launch is 35 feet long by 6 feet 6 inches beam. She is very strongly built and proved herself capable of riding steadily even with a considerable swell on the water.

Mr. McIndoo is accompanied on his trip to Nanaimo by the builder, H. Vollmars, and Mr. Hutchinson, of the Nesbitt Electric Co. They expect to reach the city in about eight hours if the weather is favorable..

Rough weather prevented the party leaving today but a start will be made tomorrow morning if possible.

HE BRINGS DEAD TO LIFE

New York Physician Demonstrates Ability to Restore Heart Action

New York, May 18—Following a series of remarkable experiments made by him, Dr. Robert Coleman Kemp, of No. 107 East Fifty-seventh street, has declared to the medical profession that resuscitations of persons after death, under certain conditions, can be accomplished. In fact he has proved it beyond any doubt by operations performed upon dogs, whose hearts had ceased to beat. The results of these experiments was explained by Dr. Kemp at a meeting held in the New York academy of medicine. It is confidently believed by Dr. Kemp that his efforts will eventually be rewarded by having patients live and recover permanently after death has actually set in.

"The method is to make a small incision between two ribs," Dr. Kemp said, "and to thrust in two fingers until they actually touch the heart itself. The heart is then pressed against the ribs, giving it the same motion of the natural beat. At the same time a saline solution is infused into the patient and respiration is induced by means of a pump invented by Mr. Hoyt, the general electrician at the college of physicians and surgeons. The intubation tube, practically the same as the O'Dwyer tube used for croup, is attached to the pump and thrust down the patient's throat as far as the windpipe.

"The massage of the heart starts the human mechanism, and the other methods restore the other functions, so that the patient, who was dead, actually lives again. Of course, the vital spark must be present, but in the experiments we have made upon dogs, it was shown that even the slightest pulsation of the heart had ceased."

RUSSIA STILL HOLDS ON

She is Apparently Determined Not to Vacate China

Shanghai, May 19—A British official here has received from the Imperial Chinese Telegraphs a memorandum which is as follows.

"In regard to the charges to New Chwang formerly these were 38 cents per word, but since the Russian has occupied at Manchuria charges have been increased to a dollar and ten cents, as they treat Manchuria the same as Russia and Asia."

This official intimation is considered here to be significant.

NEXT GOVERNOR-GENERAL

Report that Lord Northcote Will Come Cannot be Verified

Toronto, May 19—The Government has no information as to the report that Lord Northcote, the Governor of Bombay, is to succeed Lord Minto, whose term as Governor-General of Canada expires this summer. The fact that Lord Northcote is married to a daughter of Lord Mount-Stephen connects him in a sense with Canada and gives an air of probability to the report. His Lordship is a son of the late Baron Iddesleigh, better known as Sir Stafford Northcote.

NAVAL DEFENCE

Mr. Prefontaine Preparing a Bill Dealing with the Matter

Toronto, May 19—It is rumored that Sir Frederick Borden will not proceed with his Militia Bill this session, the reason being that another bill to provide for naval defence is being prepared by Hon Raymond Prefontaine. As the bill now stands, the organization of naval militia is under the jurisdiction of the Department of Militia. It is, however, to be taken from this department and placed under the Marine and Fisheries. This will require the authority of Parliament. The reason for assigning naval defence to the Marine department is because the department has already the nucleus of a fleet under its control, and, moreover, the British Admiralty thought that course would be a better one.

SOUTH AFRICAN TENDERS

Canadians will be Given an Opportunity to Compete

Ottawa, May 19—Sir Wilfrid Laurier has received a letter from Lieut-General G. Lyttleton, officer commanding the troops in South Africa, dated Pretoria, April 6, in which the latter says: "I have the honor to inform you that tenders are being called for the supply of bread and forage to the troops for certain stations in Cape Colony, and for bread, forage and groceries for all stations in the Transvaal and Orange River Colony for a period of six months, commencing on October 1. I enclose forms of tender for each Colony, for distribution to any applicants there may be. Would you kindly send me a list giving the names and addresses of those to whom forms have been issued. General Lyttleton encloses a form of advertisement for insertion in the leading papers, and asks that [illegible] Should there not be any tenders in he proposes to send the names and addresses of successful tenderers, so that merchants in Canada may have an opportunity of offering their flour to the accepted contractor in South Africa.

Lived for a Century

Brockville, May 19—The death is reported from Westbrook, of Mrs Samuel Dick, probably the oldest resident of these counties. She had attained her 100th year. She was born in the county of Armagh, Ireland, where she lived until 1868, she then having come with her husband and family to Canada. For 35 years the deceased had been a permanent resident of Westport.

New Cars for C. P. R.

Montreal, May 19—Messrs. Barney and Smith, of Dayton, recently furnished the C.P.R. with six of the finest sleeping cars that were ever turned out on this continent for ordinary traffic. These cars are already in service. Six more are in process of construction at the Hochelaga shops. The names of the American cars, following the company's precedent of utilizing names which have some significance in history, legend and story, will be the following: Shuswap, Sicamans, Sirdar, Savanne Souris and Sanden.

Press Association Trip

Ottawa, May 19—Mr. J. O. Osborne, of Brandon, Vice-president of the Western Canada Press Association, is in town making arrangements for that Association's annual trip. The intention is to join the Kentucky Press Association at Sarnia and to accompany it through the Muskoka lakes east to Quebec. The party will be in Toronto about the beginning of July during the old home festival. There will be 75 to 80 from the west. The G.T.R. will have two Pullmans at their disposal free.

Lacrosse Items

Fred Dobbin, the old Peterborough goal keeper, will occupy the same position for Oshawa this season.

Lou Dobbin will turn out with the Athletics this season.

The T.A.S. seniors will line up against 15 of the juniors on Wednesday night

Mr. Joe Muldoon, of Smith's Falls, will play with the T.A.S. twelve this season

The T.A.S. had a good turnout at practice last night. Both juniors and seniors are working hard for their game on the 25th

The Athletics' prospects for the coming season are remarkably bright. The boys are turning out with a determination to keep up their past reputation. In fact the practices each evening show that the team are playing faster and better lacrosse than ever.

DIXON'S PARK

Must be Kept in Good Condition by the Town, or it will Revert Again to Mr A. E. Dixon

The Town Council met in Committee of the Whole Council last night

A deputation asked that the water service be extended to the Roman Catholic cemetery. The Committee promised to give the matter their earnest consideration.

The question of the Dixon Park at the north end of the town was gone into, and Mr. A. E. Dixon explained that as the conditions under which he had conveyed the land to the town had not been complied with, the property reverted again to him, on the 15th on June next. He regreted that proper attention had not been given to the park, in the interests of north-enders. A petition was read from property owners in the neighborhood in question, pointing out that a reconveyance of the park to Mr. Dixon would seriously depreciate the value of adjoining property.

The Mayor gave as a reason for the park not being kept in a satisfactory condition, that a year after its conveyance to the town, the Nicholls and Jackson parks were conveyed to the public, and the several Councils felt that the citizens in No. 4 ward had their share of park property, and that an additional expenditure on the Dixon park would prove an injustice to citizens in other wards. However, he did not wish to see the latter park closed to the public, and hoped the Council would be able to meet Mr. Dixon's views in the matters. Mr. Dixon decided that if the Town would agree to an expenditure of $50 a year on the park, and $50 a year on the streets and for water service in that locality, for 10 years, he would be willing to reconvey the property back to the Town. Messrs. Wm. and J. C. Smith and Mr. Fife addressed the Committee and urged that every effort be made to retain the park for public use. He also thought they were entitled to fire protection in that neighborhood as well as other citizens. It was pointed out that an extension of the water main to that part of the town would mean the maintenance of three hydrants at a permanent cost of $105 a year. The whole question was referred to the Property committee, and in the meantime the Water Commissioners will meet a committee of property owners from the neighborhood of Dixon's park to go into the question of extending the water system to that locality.

THE GERMAN SURTAX

Representative of Wholesale Dry Goods Men Sees the Ministers

Ottawa, May 19—Mr. J. D. Allen, of Toronto, on behalf of the wholesale goods section of the Board of Trade, interviewed the Minister of Customs and the Minister of Finance yesterday in regard to the effect of the surtax upon Canadian orders for goods in Germany placed prior to the surtax going into force. Mr. Allen pointed out that it would be a great hardship to impose an extra duty on the goods so ordered, and he urged that wherever the impossibility of complying with the present regulation as to date of importation and entry could be clearly shown the date should be postponed until September [illegible] and the Ministers seemed to be impressed with his statement.

HONEST LETTERS

Still Tell the Joyful News That

PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND

Cures When Physicians Fail.

A TARA, ONT. GENTLEMAN SAYS "AFTER I HAD FINISHED THE THIRD BOTTLE OF THE COMPOUND I CONSIDERED MYSELF A NEW MAN."

For years, men and women in every rank and walk of life have been sounding the praises of Paine's Celery Compound, and telling of its victories over disease and death. Those who were most heavily burdened with disease, victims of suffering pronounced incurable by doctors and who stood on the brink of the grave, are the people who most gratefully remember Prof. Phelps, of Dartmouth College, the eminent physician and scientist who discovered Paine's Celery Compound, the medicine that never fails to conquer blood diseases, dyspepsia, rheumatism, neuralgia, liver and kidney troubles. Mr. T. Young, of Tara, Ont., happily rescued from a complication of dangerous ailments, writes as follows:—

"After suffering for years with dyspepsia, sleeplessness, nervous prostration, loss of appetite, and a weak and tired feeling, and after consulting the best physicians in my locality and having tried a great many so-called cures advertised in the papers, and receiving no benefit from any of them, I was persuaded to try a bottle of Paine's Celery Compound. I noticed an improvement before the first bottle was finished; and after I had finished the third bottle I considered myself a new man; all this was done by Paine's Celery Compound. I can now go about my work with my old time life and vigor; my sleep is sweet and sound, and my appetite good."

Buys Electric Light Plant

Sherbrooke, May 19 —Coaticooke ratepayers this week voted on the question of municipal ownership of the electric light plant and declared in its favor by a large majority. The Council met Wednesday night, and an arrangement was made by which the town acquires the local plant for $35,000 and enters upon the field of municipal lighting in October next.

NOW A LIVE ISSUE IN BRISISH POLITICS

The Policy Hereafter Will be One of Closer Union with the Colonies

MR. CHAMBERLAIN IS GREATER THAN PITT

His Great Birmingham Speech Has Created Great Enthusiasm and Much Comment

London, May 19—The speech delivered at Birmingham last night by Mr. Chamberlain was one of the most important utterances made by a British statesman in recent years. Rather hastily, it has been assumed by the Daily News that the speech marks a revolt of Mr. Chamberlain against the leadership of Mr. Balfour. Mr. Chamberlain's outspoken declarations to his constituents have been contrasted with the Prime Minister's cautious reply to the delegation which waited upon him yesterday to protest against the remission of the corn duties. The statements of both the Ministers were characteristic of the men and of the political elements they represent respectively, but there was no important and essential divergence between them. True, it is that while Mr. Chamberlain declared himself boldly in favor of preferential trade within the Empire, and of a considerable modification of the doctrine of free trade, Mr. Balfour gave the delegation not the slightest reason to hope that the corn duties would be maintained and thus give the Government an opportunity to make a practical application of Mr. Chamberlain's theories. But at the same time the Prime Minister was careful to say that he did not intend to convey the impression that the present system was necessarily permanent. He pointed out that new conditions had arisen since the old free trade policy was adopted, and that he could imagine circumstances under which Great Britain, by way of rehabilitation would no longer consent to be made a passing target for the countries living under different conditions. He declared himself a believer in universal free trade, which is not by any means the same thing as free trade of the Cobden Club brand. Mr. Balfour finished by saying he would welcome a closer fiscal union of the Motherland and the Colonies. The principal difference between the two statesmen is that Mr. Balfour is not so "pushful" as the man from Birmingham. Intensely characteristic of the Balfour-Salisbury school of statesmanship was the declaration that if protection is to be introduced in England it must not be silently and as if by accident, but as the result of a broad, public endorsement of a change in the national policy, and must come from the heart conscience and intellect of the great masses of the people. One thing is reasonably certain, and that is that imperial preferential trade now becomes a live issue in British politics.

HIS WORDS ECHO ROUND THE WORLD

Chamberlain's Speech the Chief Topic of Interest

London, May 19.—Mr. Joseph Chamberlain's speech at Birmingham on Friday night continues to monopolise conversation in political circles as well as the attention of the press.

The Times had an editorial article yesterday, in which it said, "This great, stirring speech has awakened echoes throughout the civilized world. It is a pity that more of our rulers [illegible] thing of the Empire. Mr. Chamberlain wants the Empire to present a solid fiscal front to the outside world, but this consolidation of the Empire is delayed because the motherland will not show a preference to the colonies."

BRITISH FARMERS ARE READY.

Mr. Henry Chaplin, M.P., the leader of the agitation against the repeal of the corn duties, is in complete accord with the views expressed in Mr. Chamberlain's Birmingham speech. He says: "I am certain that the agricultural interests would not object to a remittance of the corn tax in favor of the colonies. In fact, everybody favors fiscal Imperialism if a scheme is forthcoming under which the Motherland would not increase the present oppressive taxation or jeopardize her foreign trade, which is now three-fourts, as against one-fourth with the colonies."

THE LIBERAL VIEW.

Canadians here who are in sympathy with British Liberals do not expect any tangible result to follow Mr. Chamberlain's speech. His influence, joined to the tremendous pressure brought to bear upon Premier Balfour by the anti-corn tax repealers, may retain the corn tax, but England is not ripe for any comprehensive Imperial scheme. Her domestic legislation is medieval compared with the progressive laws of the colonies. Here education, not Imperialism, is the live question of the day.

The Westminster Gazette (Radical) says that Chamberlainism neglects home problems; in fact, it is Imperialism gone bad.

THE SENSATION OF EUROPE.

London, May 18.—Mr. Chamberlain's new policy is the sensation of Europe.

Speaking generally, Ministerialist journals throughout the country applaud Mr. Chamberlain's programme. The Times has another editorial echoing Canadian appreciation of the Imperial largeness of Mr. Chamberlain's conceptions. German telegrams indicate that the speech caused a profound impression there. Leading Berlin journals are awaiting official inspiration, but other journals forecast a political and commercial upheaval, the issue of which it is impossible to foresee. They plead that Germany has no desire for a tariff war with Canada.

English Liberal journals, with a few Imperialist exceptions, attack Mr. Chamberlain.

A British blue book has been issued to-day, showing that Great Britain imported last year merchandise to the value of £421,000,000, and colonial merchandise to the value of only £106,000,000. The Liberals argue therefore that Mr. Chamberlain proposes to penalise four-fifths for the benefit of one-fifth.

The cases prepared by the respective agents for Great Britain and the United States for submission to the joint commission on the Alaskan Boundary dispute have been duly filed. According to the reports the representatives of both countries have found the time alloted for the preparation of their cases none too long, although it may be assumed that the work was more the arrangement and selection of the evidence that had been previously collected, than the discovery and presentation of any new testimony.

The date for the meeting of the [illegible] tember 3rd, and with reasonable celerity on the part of the Commissioners their report on the subject should be forthcoming in the early part of 1904.

TWO IMMENSE LOCOMOTIVES

For the C.P.R. and are the Largest in the Whole World

Montreal, May 19—It was intimated at the headquarters of the C.P.R. yesterday that the company was now in possession of two of the most powerful locomotives in the world. They will be used in ore hauling from the Pheonix Camp to the Granby smelter on the C. and W. divisions. The engines work on the cog system, so that a train may be let down the steepest grades with the utmost safety. The engines were built at the Shay Engine Works, Schenectady, N.Y.

The dimensions of these monsters of locomotives may be judged from the fact that on the track the length of the engines is seventy feet over all. On a level track the hauling capacity of each engine is stated by be sufficient to draw a train of loaded cars a mile and a half in length.

A Year of Terrible Omens.

"Town Topics."

A comet, named after Professor Perrine, its discoverer, is added to the omens of this terrible year of earthquakes, floods, eruptions, cyclones, fires, murders, coal famine and the increase of the prices of beef, milk and bread. At first telescopic, the comet is approaching the trembling earth with such automobile speed that it is now plainly visible. What further horrors it portends, the Lord only knows.

THE ALASKAN BOUNDARY COMMISSION

The cases prepared by the respective agents for Great Britain and the United States for submission to the joint commission on the Alaskan Boundary dispute have been duly filed. According to the reports the representatives of both countries have found the time alloted for the preparation of their cases none too long, although it may be assumed that the work was more the arrangement and selection of the evidence that had been previously collected, than the discovery and presentation of any new testimony.

The date for the meeting of the Commission [illegible] September 3rd, and with reasonable celerity on the part of the Commissioners their report on the subject should be forthcoming in the early part of 1904.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

Roanoke college at Salem, Virginia, which has had more foreign students than any other college in the South, will this year graduate the second Korean to take the degree of bachelor of arts anywhere in the world, the first one being Kin Buen Surh, who received his A.B. at Roanoke in 1898 and him A.M. at Princeton in 1899. An Kinsic Kimm, who will be graduated this year, is so good a speaker that he won a prize in declamation several years ago. it is expected that his graduating address on "Russia in the Far East" will be one of the most interesting features of the semi-centennial commencement of the college on June 11. The Korean Minister in Washington, Mr. Min Hui Cho, has promised to be present.

Rev. W. Baxter, Editor of the Christian Herald, has been telling the people of Leeds, England, that "the world will come to an end in 1929. In 1924, or five years before the end of this age, said Mr. Baxter, Christ will be seen coming in the air. "You will not want any grave. If your are ready you will be caught up in the air, and in a moment of time, instead of a body of corruption you will have one of incorruption, and a body of immortality instead of mortality." A hope of this kind, said Mr. Baxter, is worth more than the millions of Pierpont Morgan.

Ulysses Altheimer was a witness in a case at Pine Bluff, Arkansas. He was asked if he did not frequent gambling houses. "I go into gambling houses," he said, "like the judge there, or any other man." "Twenty-four hours for contempt of court," said Judge A. B. Grace. Altheimer called up Governor Davis on the telephone and the governor ordered the sheriff to release him. Judge Grace caused Altheimer to be marched into court again, and ordered the sheriff to lock him up for thirteen hours and twenty-three minutes — the residue of the original sentence. The judge also remarked that the governor, whom he called "one Jeff Davis," would find that he could not dictate to the courts of Arkansas.

It is stated that the British Admiralty is about to acquire a site in Sydney, B.C., for the purpose of establishing a naval station, to aid in safeguarding the Gulf of St. Lawrence. Granting that the report is correct, the interesting question is whether Canada is or is not co-operating in this work. If she is not, it means that the money of British taxpayers will be spent in Canada, not only to keep up the navy which is the guarantee of our nationality, but for the actual guarding of our most vital trade route. If we insist on the British taxpayer buying a wharf at Sydney to enable his ships to protect our Gulf, the ignominy of our position will be accentuated.

Picture Postcards to Go.

The picture postcard, it would appear, is doomed, and M. Rouvier, French Minister of Finance, has decreed that the portrait cartoons representing European sovereigns are no longer to be sold. The nature of these cartoons has aroused public curiosity, and a research in the domain of caricatured sovereigns is at least interesting. Thus, we have King Alfonso and Queen Wilhelmina dressed in schoolroom style, the picture bearing the legend "Les Deux Gosses," and Kaiser Wilhelm as a sauerkraut hawker drinking with M. Loubet, who wears a biretta, notwithstanding that he is in the garb of a nougat merchant. Then there is the Sultan frantically dancing a fandango in the midst of his harem, and Leo XIII. dressed in dude fashion, holding in his hand a superb looking-glass and the latest thing in sticks, and with a magnificent gardenia in his buttonhole.

Close on the heels of this motley crowd comes King Carlos, who would appear to suffer from goitre, as well as from abnormal girth of waist. Underneath his picture are the words "Ready for the slaughterhouse." Nicholas II. is, of course, of absorbing interest for French people, but his portrait is anything but complimentary to His Majesty, who appears horribly disfigured, and is described as "The least intelligent of all tyrants." These are, perhaps, the pick of them all. As the decree applies merely to foreign sovereigns, postcards portraying M. Loubet being "spat" upon by Jesuits are still sold, but they, too, will no doubt eventually be suppressed.

Kidney Disease

Every Year Thousands Suffer and Die from Kidney Disease, That Never Knew the Exact Nature of their ailment.

Among the Most Easily Noted Symptoms are Pain in the Back, Frequent Desire to Urinate, Constant Headache Sleeplessness, and Nervousness.

When these signals of danger are unheeded, and proper precaution is not taken to avert more serious results, the very worst form of kidney trouble will develop, namely, Bright's Disease, which is almost incurable.

To obtain quick relief and a sure cure you must at once commence to take Ferrozone. It is a treatment for kidney and bladder troubles of undoubted merit and is prescribed now by all doctors and physicians who are abreast of their profession. Hospitals, Sanitariums, and all public health institutions rely on Ferrozone in all derangements of the kidneys, and claim that it affects more cures of chronic cases than any other remedy.

The action of Ferrozone is very mild and efficient and can be depended upon to give satisfactory results in every case. It brings about a healthy condition of all the organs of the body, causes the kidneys to eliminate all poisonous products and wastes of the body. It purifies and enriches the blood, reconstructs wasted tissues, excites healthy appetite and promotes good digestion. By the regular use of Ferrozone nutrition is improved, and strength to ward off disease is established and maintained.

No remedy for the alleviation and cure of kidney disease can possibly equal or surpass Ferrozone. This fact is conceded by all those who have used it, and a trial will convince you of its merits. Don't be misled into accepting a cheap, unworthy substitute, but insist on having the genuine Ferrozone. It is the very best that money, brains, skill and scientific research can produce, and that is the sort of remedy you want. Price 50c per box, or three boxes for $1.25, at druggists, or N. C. Buried Gold

By FRED WHISHAW.

Author of "A Boyar of the Terrible," etc.

All this might have been dangerous if Eddis and Blythe had been popular characters on board, or if the crew had been of a mutinous disposition and easily inflammable. Fortunately, this was not the case. As a matter of fact, no one paid any attention to the hints so vaguely let fall, and they failed to take root.

Nevertheless Fry, the bosun, deemed it advisable to speak to the first mate on the subject.

"There's a couple of silly fools on board," he confided to Keith, "that seem to know more about this 'ere island than is good for them. From what they say one would think they'd been there and came away with Robinson. They're tryin' to persuade the men that there's wrong being done and hintin' that it wouldn't matter if anything was to happen to you, sir, because there's others on board has the bearings of the island as well as you and has a better right to what's on it."

"What in thunder do they mean?" exclaimed Keith. A moment later he added with a start, "Good Lord, could it be them? See here, Fry," he added. "You'll have to keep an eye on those chaps, my man, they're dangerous. See they don't corrupt the men. Soon as there's the slightest pretext, arrest them and clap them in irons. The crew know we're to fetch back gold, do they?"

"All Southampton knew that, sir. There wasn't no secret about it."

"Tell them the owners have promised every man a share if we get it. The clerk on board, Mr. Warden, will make all that clear before we go ashore. Should you be surprised if I told you those two chaps are two of the 'Hecuba's' men and came off the island soon after Robinson? They have the bearin's of the place, no doubt, just as correct as he had—which means as correct as I have, for I hold Robinson's chart. But once they got rid of me, which is what they're hintin' at, they'll never take you there—not they—not to let the bank get back the gold. Their game is to leave it for their pals and take their share later when they've shook us off. That's their game."

"Well I'm damned!" exclaimed Fry. "You do surprise me, sir. Them chaps wants an eye kept on them, as you say, and they shall have it. Lord, now, who'd have thought it?"

"I deserve this," thought Keith, "for not thinking they might join the ship. Of course they were bound to do it, and I ought to have known it!"

Mr. Bosun kept a strict watch upon his men from this hour, but it was not until a week later that they were caught tripping.

One night Keith, asleep in his bunk, was awakened by a rustling in his cabin. Cautiously opening his eyes he distinctly saw the cabin-boy ransacking the pockets of his jacket, which he had thrown off on lying down. Jumping up suddenly Keith collared the lad.

"Now, then, you little villain. What's the meaning of this?" he roared.

The thief whimpered and wept and bellowed out that he had been threatened with murder if he didn't find a certain chart in Mr. Adams' pocket.

"Who by?" cried Keith, shaking him. "Come, the truth!"

"Eddis," the boy blubbered, "Eddis and Blythe. I swear I haven't took anything, sir."

This escapade cost the two men their freedom, and thus proved the means of saving Keith and, perhaps, the whole ship's company from further dangers.

By this time the "Penelope" was riding within a hundred miles of Robinson's Island. The skipper and Keith were constantly busy with charts and compasses and scientific instruments. Robinson's invaluable list of instructions, together with his chart of the island, lay open on the table before them.

A few hours later both men agreed that if they were making no mistake, the island should now be within a few miles. A lookout man was sent aloft, armed with a telescope, but night came and no land had yet been made out.

Two whole days were spent cruising in a circle and backwards and forwards. The good ship plowed her furrow over every acre within a radius of twenty miles, but the island was not found.

Then the crew began to show signs of impatience. Fry, the bosun, approached the skipper, and respectfully desired, in the name of the crew, to be informed whether there was any mistake in the reckonings.

"Tell them we shall fetch the island presently," said the captain. "We're just about right, but it's difficult to hit off the spot to an inch."

"What are they afraid of?" added Keith. "The island will stay where it is till we find it."

"The fact is, sir," said Fry, "you did say something about treasure and each man to have a share. If I may make a suggestion, if Mr. Warden was to come forward and tell 'em what his people intend to do for the crew, it'd give them something to think of while we cruise about looking for the island."

This proved a good suggestion. Mr. Warden went forward with the bosun and addressed the men.

"As they were now getting near their destination," he said, "it was time he informed them that his employers intended to deal generously with all those who should assist in recovering their property. He was empowered to offer each man thus assisting one hundred pounds and three times the amount of his pay."

This announcement was received with cheers, though some seemed dissatisfied. "We'd rather find the stuff first and recover it, and leave it to the owners to do justice by us afterwards!" said one, and the men cheered this also.

"Well, you can have it that way if you prefer it!" said Mr. Warden. "The principal thing is to hang all together till we've got it. From what I'm told there are those who intend to assert their right to the whole. None of us can afford to let them make fools of us, now we've come all this way to fetch the stuff!"

All this gave plenty of food for conversation and argument, and the men became too busy discussing financial matters to take much note of other things. Had the crew been mutinously disposed, this would have been a dangerous moment. Even as things were, the malcontents seemed to be gaining the upper hand. The discussions grew louder by degrees. Mr. Warden was constantly approached and referred to. If this should continue much longer, the skipper remarked uneasily, the men might become nasty. The best of crews were capable of losing moral status when there was talk of treasure in the air.

But at the critical moment, at about six in the evening of the third day of close cruising, the lookout man up aloft saw land.

Far away in the horizon, floating between sea and sky, lay a thin blue line. The men cheered and waved their caps.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES

PIE GOING OUT OF FASHION.

At Least That Is the Experience of Chicago.

Pie is becoming extinct. In the better hotels and restaurants it occupies a less and less conspicuous place on the bill of fare, and very often is not even mentioned in any one of its infinite varieties. In private home, too, the pie-eating habit is distinctly on the wane, and its place at dessert is taken by puddings, custards and ices.

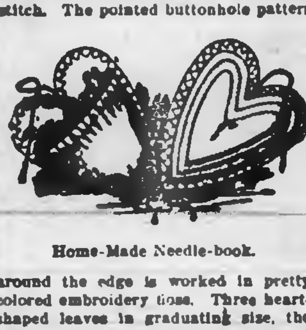
The lunch counter is really the only place in which pie holds its old-time position and forms the crowning bite of a hasty lunch. The millionaire and the callow office boy were always most given to the pie habit, and many of them are still faithful to the standard cuts, but the great majority have given up allegiance to the dyspeptic dainty.

"Yes, pie is going out of date," an old restaurant man said regretfully. "Time was when six kinds of pie were not considered too much for one day's bill of fare, and now our pastry cook makes but two varieties per day. What causes this decline of pie?

"Well, that is a hard question to answer, but I think the great outcry about its unhealthfulness has had a good deal to do with it. For years the doctors and the papers have been telling Americans that they were becoming a race of dyspeptics because they loved pie, not wisely, but too well. The New Englanders and New Yorkers were wont to think no meal was complete without pie, and they used to tell a story of an old man, who, when he was dying, said that he felt proud to say that he had been married for fifty years, and had never sat down to a meal without pie."—Chicago Chronicle.

Heart-Shaped Needle Work.

The winter work bag or basket requires all sorts of handy contrivances, and the most indispensable is the needle-book, which will hold pins as well as assorted needles. A pretty heart-shaped design is made of bright-colored velvet and satin. A double piece of cardboard is cut heart-shaped for the foundation. The upper leaf is covered with velvet and lined with satin, and the edges are turned over and neatly joined with the close overcasting stitch. The pointed buttonhole pattern around the edge is worked in pretty colored embroidery floss. Three heart-shaped leaves in graduating size, the edges cut in tiny points, are fastened at the top within the book. The under part just inside the edge is covered with satin ornamented with a vine-worked brier stitch, and the pointed buttonhole is used around the outer side.



Home-Made Needle-book.

A small, pointed pocket of contrasting silk slightly fulled and drawn across with an elastic, made to hold a few papers of needles, is fastened within the lower half of the book. The two parts are joined at the point with a small cord or tassel, and a piece of cord or baby ribbon is attached to each of the upper points of the heart. This ties the two hearts together when the pocket is closed.

How to Roast a Turkey.

This is the way the New Englanders prepare and wash a turkey: Lay it on its side on a meat board and cut off the head. Next slip a slender, sharp knife between the skin and flesh of the neck, run it round carefully till the skin is loosened. Next slip the skin down over the neck and cut the neck off to within an inch of the body. Having removed the crop, turn the turkey on its back and cut off the legs at the first joint above the feet. Next singe the hairs from the turkey and pick out the pin feathers. Cut a gash above the vent and slip one hand in and draw the turkey, taking out everything inside, being careful not to break the gall bladder over the liver. Cut the gizzard, heart and liver from the entrails, clean them well and put them in a stew pan. Pour cold water over them and set it with the stuffing through the gash cut to draw it. Sew this gash up and truss the legs down; then stuff the hollow of the breast through the neck and sew this up, and truss the wings down. Sprinkle well with salt and pepper and put the turkey in a hot oven.

Do not put water in the pan. When the bird begins to brown and sizzle pull the pan forward and dash some of the water on it from the pan in which the giblets are. Let the turkey roast till it is a dark, delicious brown all over and the flesh begins to cleave from the bones round the end of the drumsticks.

It is almost impossible to give just the time to roast a turkey. That depends on the degree of heat and on the turkey. But be sure to have it done. Baste it often while roasting.

To make the gravy: After the turkey is out of the dripping pan place the pan on the fire, mash the liver in the bottom of the pan, stir in a little flour and pour in the water from the giblets, and let it boil till quite thick. Then pour it into a gravy boat.

Matrimonial.

If a man wants his wife to notice that a button is off his coat let him put a woman's hair where the button should be.

When a married woman goes away on a visit and comes earlier than she intends it is usually a sign that she loves her husband though sometimes she comes back to see if she can catch him at anything.

CARNEGIE AND CANADA

Comment of British Press on Philanthropist's Canadian Views

London, May 18.—The London Daily Chronicle ridicules Mr. Andrew Carnegie's talk about Canada, and says: "A country which can develop an external trade such as the Dominion has done in ten years, from $241,000,000 to $423,000,000, is not in as much danger of absorption by a neighboring rival as Mr. Carnegie appears to anticipate."

Mainly About People.

A visitor to an asylum recently saw a man capering along the hall astride of a stick. "Ah, ha!" said he, wishing to be pleasant, "I see you are having a fine ride on your horse." "This isn't a horse," answered the lunatic, contemptuously. "Not a horse—what is it, then?" "It's a hobby," was the reply; "if it was a horse I could get off."

A long-winded visitor once asked Bismarck how he got rid of visitors who bored him. "Why," said the chancellor, smiling, "I have an arrangement with my wife. When people stay too long, she sends a servant to say that she needs me." At that moment entered a servant, saying that the princess would speak with the chancellor. Bismarck gravely made his excuses, and the bore his exit.

A small boy in a Victoria County school was asked by his teacher to write what he knew about the peace in South Africa. Result: "The Boers fought against England, and Colonel Hughes went to Africa and fought them. By-and-by everyone thought it time to stop, but the Boers wouldn't. So Colonel Hughes, who had come back home, sent word he would go and fight them again if they would not make peace, and they did, providing he would be their Governor." Which is about as true as many accepted chapters of history.

A committee once called on Wu Tingfang to request him to address a society connected with one of the fashionable churches of Washington. Casual mention was made of the fact that the youthful pastor of the church had recently resigned, to enter upon a new field of labor on the Pacific Coast. "Why did he resign?" asked Mr. Wu. "Because he had received a call to another church," was the reply. "What salary did you pay him?" "Four thousand dollars." "What is his present salary?" "Eight thousand dollars." "Ah!" said the disciple of Confucius; "a very loud call!"

Six-year-old Tommy was sent by his eldest sister to the grocer's to buy a pound of lump sugar. After the proprietor of the shop had served the little lad, he engaged Tommy in conversation. "Tommy," said he, "I understand there is a new member of your family?" "Yes, sir," replied the boy, "I've got a little brother." "Well, how do you like that, hey?" enquired the grocer. "Don't like it at all," said Tommy; "rather have a little sister." "Then why don't you change him, Tommy?" "Well, we would if we could; but I don't suppose we can. You see, we have used him four days now!"

Dr. Henry Van Dyke tells a story of an old Irishman who was engaged in the business of chicken-raising near Princeton. One day a traveling man expressed surprise at the use of so much cornmeal at feeding-time, and suggested that the meal be mixed with sawdust, insisting that the hens would not know the difference. A few months later the traveling man was again in the community, and he asked if the new diet had been tried, and what the result had been. "It works beautifully," was the reply. "See that old yellow hen? Well, I tried her on half-and-half and she liked it so well I changed it to all sawdust, and the last time she hatched, three of the chicks had wooden legs and a fourth was a woodpecker."

George Stickney, who lives in Lancaster, New Hampshire, has a boy who is coming along like a three-year-old trotter under training. Mr. Stickney asked the superintendent of schools when it would be advisable to send the boy to school. The superintendent said that the fall term would be a good time, but advised Mr. Stickney to teach the lad that two and two make four and how the letters of the alphabet run before he let him out. A short time afterward the superintendent met the boy and asked him if he knew his letters. "Sure," said the boy. "Well, sir, what is the first letter." "A," was the answer. "Cor[illegible] what comes after A?" "All the rest of the push," said the boy.

Amongst the stories now coming out of young King Alfonso's recent tour of Spain is the following: At the cathedral of the old town of Oviedo, the bishop was showing the king the jewels, one of these being an ancient Gothic cross called the Angels' Cross. "Why is it called so?" enquired Spain's sixteen-year-old monarch. "Because, it is said," replied the bishop, "the angels made it as a reward for Alfonso the Chaste." "That's all very well," remarked Alfonso; "but what foundation have you for this belief?" "None, sire. The time of legends is past." Further on the bishop called the king's attention to a small antique chest which was locked. Tradition says that whoever opens this chest will die suddenly. The king, with the abruptness of youth, exclaims, "Well! I don't mind opening it." And the bishop, imitating the independent spirit of the sovereign, answered: "Neither do I, your majesty; and if I have failed to do so before it is because—the key is missing!"

"Not Miss Diana."

Sir John Sinclair, in his time one of the foremost men in Scotland, lived at Edinburgh, and his house there, some forty years ago, was the home of his four daughters, all noticeably tall women. They made up, as the father said, about "four and twenty feet of daughters." A good but not a romantic story is told of one of them, in connection with Lord Glasgow, who, when dining one day with Sir John, told his host that he had made up his mind to be married.

"I have decided," said he, "after careful consideration, that I cannot do better than to secure the hand of one of your daughters."

Sir John bowed, and expressed his gratitude for the compliment. "And may I ask, Lord Glasgow," said he, "which of my daughters has attracted your choice?"

"That, Sir John," returned his lordship, "I leave entirely to you. I feel that your knowledge of your daughters will enable you to make a far wiser selection than I could make."

"Your prudence is highly to your credit," said the father. "Let us join the ladies upstairs, and I will at once indicate to you, in a manner you will understand, the choice which I advise you to make."

They walked upstairs to the drawing-room, but just as they were about to enter one touch of nature asserted itself. Lord Glasgow plucked at the tail of Sir John's coat.

"One moment, Sir John!" said he. "Not Miss Diana!"

Sir John bowed, and they entered the room. A gesture indicated Miss Julia, and the matter was settled.

THE WORLD'S POPULATION

Scientist Has Calculated that There are 1,544,510,000 People

Berlin, May 18.—New statistics on religion have been compiled by Dr. H. Zeller, director of the statistical bureau in Stuttgart. The total census of mankind, according to his calculation, amounts to 1,544,510,000. Of this number he allots to Christianity 534,940,000; to Islam, 175,290,000; to to Judaism, 10,850,000; and to other religions, 823,420,000. Under this general heading he includes 300,000,600 followers of Confucius, 214,000,000 Brahmins and 121,000,000 Buddhists. He estimates that out of each 1,000 of the earth's inhabitants, 346 are Christian, 114 Mohammedan, 7 Israelite and 523 adherents of other religions.

PORTLAND CEMENT IS CREATING INDUSTRIAL REVOLUTION

The Immense Importance of This Industry---Great Capital Required to Conduct It, but Profits are Correspondingly Great.

Partial View of the First 4000 Barrel per Day Unit of the Great Northern Portland Cement Company, Ready to Make Cement

INTERESTING FACTS ABOUT THE LEADING INDUSTRY IN MICHIGAN

WONDERFUL DEVELOPMENT.

No one industry in the history of this country has made such remarkable strides as has Portland Cement, and this is due to its [illegible] superiority in the multitude of uses ranging from its use for floors, walls, sidewalks, paving, bridges, tunnels, etc., to its complete adaptability for the entire construction of even the largest buildings. So important has this matter become, that it is now the principal topic of discussion by engineering societies at their regular meetings. The quality of the Portland Cement produced here (and especially such as is made from marl in Michigan) tests higher than the very best German Cement, and is preferred by our leading architects and engineers and the only only reason that this country imported almost 1,800,000 barrels this last year was the inability of our manufacturers to produce enough to supply the demand.

It is not possible to build a cement plant in a hurry, as can be done in almost any other industry. The manufacture of cement is a complicated process, requiring expensive and ponderous machinery. New methods and improvements are constantly being invented. Plants that a few years ago would be considered profitable are no longer put up. Even a moderate sized plant will cost almost a million dollars. It must be seen from this that the highest engineering skill and great outlay are required, [illegible] materials sufficiently near at hand to keep such a plant in operation.

Cement & Engineering News, Chicago, says: The portland cement mill of the future must be sustained by abundant capital and have a large daily output. Actual experience has demonstrated the fact that the cost of manufacture is reduced directly in the ratio as the capacity of the plant is increased. Such a plant must have been carefully planned for an economical output by competent engineers of the highest standing and strictly on the American system of manufacture and be operated by trained experts. The fixed charges for expert service distributed over the output of a large plant will be less per barrel of cement produced than with smaller mills. This will apply as well to the other departments of the plant. It is therefore entirely safe to assume that the large plants are the ones that will really control the business in the future.

In view of the fact that very shortly now one of the greatest cement factories in the country will be in operation in Michigan, that of the Great Northern Portland Cement Company, at Marlborough, Mich., it may be of interest to mention its particular advantages and what prominent newspapers and experts have to say about it.

The plant of the company is planned on the most extensive scale of any in the entire country, or, for that matter, in the world. When the three units are completed it will produce 12,000 barrels per day. The first unit, with a daily capacity of 4,000 barrels, has already been built, and is sufficiently equipped to begin operations by May 20. The raw material owned by this company is of sufficient magnitude to supply 12,000 barrels per day for over 100 years. [illegible] cludes every device possible for the reduction of expense.

Capitalists and investors have followed with approval the deliberate and thorough-going manner in which the Great Northern Portland Cement Co. has carried forward the work of getting its great plant ready for action. Rather than rushing together some semblance of a factory just to make a showing for stock selling purposes the Great Northern seems to have adopted the plan of building to last and of paying as it goes. The well-known and reputable business men who are at the head of it are giving this and making the benefit of their own successful business experience.

By putting up a cheaper and smaller plant the company might have been in a position several months ago to take advantage of the most alluring prices that have prevailed in the cement market; but, feeling sure of the unrivalled extent of their supply of marl and the continuing high range of prices, this concern has moved with deliberation and conscientious care in constructing a factory on a scale that will assure its permanency and profitable productivity through all coming years.

When the plant is in operation it will make up for whatever portion of the great season of 1902 it may have missed by the immense volume of its capacity. The plant is planned on a system of three units—each unit being good for a daily output of 4,000 barrels. If one of the smaller factories of Michigan could make $10,000 in August alone, what must be the golden harvest of a concern projected on the scale of the Great Northern Portland Cement Co.?

As to the permanency of the present price of over $2 a barrel, the rapidly widening use of cement seem to give abundant grounds for confidence [illegible] and increasing call for this constructive commodity. The builders of fine dwellings and sky-scrapers, of public buildings and industrial plants want it; railroads are finding new uses for it; experiments are daily disclosing new fields of utility for this material. Ten years ago this country produced half a million barrels of cement in a year; now it uses twelve million barrels. Ten years ago we imported two million barrels annually; even now we import 1,800,000 barrels, showing that the domestic production is under the domestic demand.

These figures argue for the continuing profitable production of cement by a plant built on the scale of the works of Marlborough.

Wm. Frank Hall, a prominent civil engineer of New York, and an expert on cement matters, is thus quoted in an interview published in the Grand Rapids Herald: "I have just returned," said he "from Marlborough, where I inspected the plant of the Great Northern Portland Cement Company. I was amazed at what I saw. Of course plants and plans on paper are all well enough, and very necessary, but it is the real thing that tells the story. I have visited all the cement plants in Michigan, but this is far and away ahead of anything I ever saw before, and I believe I have seen everything in the country. I firmly believe that this will be the largest, most modern and most complete plant in existence. I am pretty thoroughly informed as to all the Michigan cement propositions," continued Mr. Hall, "and I tell you candidly that this should return a large profit on the investment."

Prof. R. C. Carpenter, who is professor of experimental engineering in Cornell University, says of the Great Northern Portland Cement Company: "The natural advantages [illegible] the magnitude of this plant will render it possible to produce cement for lower cost than has heretofore been done."

Speaking further of the cement industry, Professor Carpenter said: "There never before was such a shortage in the supply of Portland cement as at present. Nearly every mill in the country has sold out its winter stock, and entered on business without any surplus. Even now their product is sold for months ahead. I would not be surprised to see a cement famine. There is opportunity to sell all of the cement that can be made in this state, in Chicago and [illegible]."

Concerning the standing of the gentlemen that compose the officers of this company the Detroit Times says: "The officers of this company are among our best known, most substantial and reliable citizens." The following statement may be of interest, as showing the class of men that have the management of this great institution.

Hon. Clarence A. Black, the new President of the Great Northern, is an officer and director in a large number of important business enterprises of Detroit, among the number being the Farrand Organ Company, Nelson Baker & Company, Wholesale Chemists; Cadillac Automobile Company, Sanilac Sugar Company, the Detroit & Toledo Electric Railway.

He is also one of the principal owners of the Seattle Hardware Company, Seattle, the largest hardware concern in the northwest. Mr. Black is a man who has never allowed his name to be used in connection with any enterprise without giving it much personal attention.

Col. F. E. Farnsworth, the secretary of the Great Northern, is well known to the bankers of Michigan and the United States, as he is Secretary of [illegible] Secretary of the Bankers' Association of Secretaries, Secretary of the Clearing House Conference of the United States, Secretary of the Bankers' Club of Detroit, and Director of the Union National Bank of Detroit. He is a man of recognized ability, as is evidenced above.

John M. Mulkey, the new chairman of the Executive Committee, is eminently fitted for the office. He is President of the Detroit Salt Company and is interested with Mr. Black in the D. & T. Electric Railway.

Dr. C. W. Munson, of Toledo, Ohio, well known in the Dental Trade throughout the U. S. and Canada for 15 years, and is connected with a number of large enterprises, as Director or General-Manager, is another of the new directors. He has made large cash investments himself, and is Stock Agent for the Company.

The stockholders of this Company are especially fortunate in that they have such men available for officers and directors, to conduct the affairs of the Company —men whose personal business reputation, and character vouch for their integrity, whose experience in business affairs assures success. This, coupled with the Company's position in the manufacturing field, their immense deposits of raw material, their splendidly equipped plant, their freedom from debt, makes an investment opportunity which is quickly taken advantage of by those who appreciate the facts.

Price of Stock $100 per Share

The stock of the Great Northern Portland Cement Co. is $100 per share. First preferred guaranteed 7 per cent. dividends, or Common stock $100 per share, and dividends paid out of net earnings, from 10 to 20 per cent. for 1904, and estimated 20 to 30 per cent. each year after 1904.

There is nothing in the world that shows such good investment possibilities as Portland Cement, and anyone who desires to make a safe, conservative and profitable investment, will find it well worth while to investigate The Great Northern Portland Cement Company.

View in Power Plant—1500 horse-power Engine and 40 ton Drive Wheel in foreground, two 500 horse-power Electric Generators beyond.

Some Reasons Why Great Northern Portland Cement Company's Stock will Pay Good Dividends:

IT OWNS 4000 ACRES of finest marl and 1000 acres of fine clay—the two elements of raw material to make first-class Portland Cement, enough to run full capacity for 3 generations—all paid for and clear title in the company.

IT OWNS 1000 ACRES of town site, where a town of 3000 or 4000 population will be built up, entirely supported by this immense industry.

THE FIRST complete mint or plant is built, and buildings paid for, for over 4000 bbls. a day. The machinery is in and complete to make about 1200 barrels a day, all new, and up-to-date, and all paid for.

There is no bonded or other debt of any kind on the output of 1,200 barrels a day. The cost is 85 cents a barrel, selling price $2 to $2.25 at the plant, profit $1.15 to $1.30 per barrel—or about $1,200 a day. By July 15th the plant will be making 1,500 or 1,600 barrels a day, with cost price reduced to 80 cents a barrel; profit per day $1,800 or $2,000.

By January, 1904, the machinery will be installed to make 4,000 barrels a day, at a cost of 65 to 70 cents, and with the present market price will make over $5,000 a day profit, or over $1,600,000 profit for the year. The company can pay 15 or 20 per cent or more for 1904, after providing for all demands.

STOCK MARKETS

UNCHANGING MARKET FEATURE

New York, May 18—The character of the current stock trading fails to materially change, and at the same time favorable factors continue to exist. It is more or less an anomoly and the situation is to say the least, paradoxical.

The market remains drooping and listless, while at the same time gross earnings continue at their high water market volume, and mechanical business keeps right up, while money is plentiful and easy. We suppose like traditional swallows that come in a flock when money again grows interested in stocks it will do so at once, and then the pace will be lively. Wall Street literature issued to the public seems to fast be losing its optimistic closing. This is one indication that the present "Doldrums" are nearing a finish. Even certain large newspapers which were hopeful for a year past in their Wall street reviews, at the moment assume a discouraged tone. It is well to remember that it is darkest before dawn, and that nine out of ten advances in prices usually commence in gloom and at a time when most people's hopes are at lowest ebb. Were not such the case insiders could not accumulate the stocks with their customary facility. When insiders most desire to buy stocks their journalistic organs are usually discouraging. When reviewing conditions and the general outlook, when they desire to sell their stock to the public rainbows are to be seen everywhere and permission is regulated to the background. As a general rule it is well to buy into standard issue when prices for them are below their average as they are at present, irrespective of the apparent lack of desire of others to do so. Profits will always be made by such as follows this Wall street axiom.

While it is impossible to say exactly when the market will take a decided turn for the better, it will need no great prophet to hazard the opinion that those who will buy the better class of stocks at going prices stand more than a fair chance of deriving food profits for so doing.

Summary—Drive against prices was engineered by the bear forces. A drastic searching for "stop" orders was carried on all day and many were reached. St. Paul was selected as a private stock and beaten down. The Pacifics were sharply attacked on the illness of Mr. Harriman. The entire list was heavy and considerable large [illegible] House Sales were heavy in preponderance to their purchases. This is usually the case when prices are near bottom, and seldom the case otherwise. Money closed 2 2-4 per cent Total sales, 675,200.

HAIGHT & FREESE.

Unconventional Criticism.

In a paper contributed by Mr. Hugh Clifford to "Blackwood's Magazine," in which he relates some of his experiences in attending upon Malayan royalties, we find this amusing passage about the literary taste of the Sultan of Perak:

"When his nephew related to him the plot of Mr. Stephen Phillips's 'Paolo and Francesca,' a performance of which he had witnessed, the Sultan shook his head. 'That is an evil tale of a very degrading character,' he said. 'It is not fitting that such a story should be told, far less acted, more especially in the presence of ladies!' And when he was informed that the incident was historically accurate, that only served to increase the gravity of his disapproval. 'That such a thing should have happened is very shameful,' he said, 'and surely it were better to suffer it to be forgotten. Why revive these ancient scandals? And why should our pity be asked for folk so utterly depraved?'"

"Why, Willie, you didn't take off your cap to the minister!" "To him? Great Scott! I'm his caddie!"

The Telephone in Chinatown.

One of the unique features of the far-famed Chinatown of San Francisco is the Chinese "hello girl." The Oriental folk, quick to adopt the ways of the American, have long recognized the convenience of the telephone. For several years most of the rich Chinamen have used telephones, but pidgin English talked over the wire to central had its disadvantages. "You catchee him, led-fi seblen—you sabe—fi seblen-led, led fi—oh, you heap sassy now—you sabe him—fi, et cetera," with four others on the ten party line trying to get a number, not only created trouble with central, but also encouraged profanity along the line. However, to business-like "John" time is just as valuable as it is to the American financier, so he decided to waste no more time with the "Mellican" central. An appeal was made to the telephone company. The result was the establishing of a branch office situated in the heart of Chinatown and the employing of Chinese operators.

That was two years ago. Since that time over five hundred 'phones have been placed in the Oriental quarter, nearly every business house of importance being a subscriber. The office is fitted up in luxurious style, with polished floors, ebony furniture, and elaborate carvings so dear to the Chinaman. At the switchboard five girls and as many boys, all native sons and daughters, are employed. The girls, with their elaborate coiffures, their jewels, and pretty flowing gowns of gay colors, present a charming picture. Voices of clear falsetto ring over the 'phone with metallic precision. There is no fussing, no flirting, each little maid being as demure as a nun. There is no trouble about wrong switches, for one of the characteristics of the Chinese is that, when a duty is once mastered, it is always performed with mechanical accuracy. The officers of the company say that a mistake in the books of a Chinese bookkeeper is a very rare occurrence, and that a complaint of central is absolutely unknown. On the side of the room opposite the switch-board a joss is installed, and from the incense-burners tiny columns of perfumed smoke curl up, pervading and purifying every corner wherein an evil spirit might lurk in contemplation of mischief.

CATARRH

The Mother of Consumption

How this dread disease may be prevented and cured—the opinions of people who have been cured by

CATARRHOZONE

Catarrh is very often spoken of as the mother of consumption, because when unchecked it extends from its place of beginning to the bronchial tubes then deeper and deeper, till finally the disease become consumption of the lungs.

The safest and best remedy for any form of Catarrh is Catarrhozone. It is inhaled to all parts of the breathing organs, kills the disease, and drives it completely out of the system.

Mrs. Mary J. Whitney, of Clay Street, Topeka, Kansas, was cured of nasal catarrh, after twenty years' suffering by Catarrhozone. She says:—

"I owe to Catarrhozone an immense debt of gratitude. It cured me of Catarrh of the most disagreeable kind after doctors without number had pronounced my case incurable. My breath is pure and my respiration regular, and I do not cough any more since using Catarrhozone. It has cured me perfectly."

Another case of Chronic Catarrh that was cured quickly by Catarrhozone is that of Mr. G. S. Luce, of 1,700 Navasota Street, Austin, Texas. Mr. Luce says:

"I tried for four years to get rid of Nasal Catarrh, used salt douches, atomizers, tablets, stomach medicines, etc., but they didn't do me much good.

"Then I tried Catarrhozone, and received relief in a few hours. It cured in a week, so that I never had a recurrence of my former trouble."

Miss Winer, who resides on May Street, in Hartford, Conn., was cured of throat trouble by Catarrhozone, and speaks of her recovery in the following words:—

"Repeated colds finally resulted in a Catarrhal condition from which I suffered more or less every spring and fall. Catarrhozone was the only remedy that relieved and cured me. I recommend it."

No treatment is so good for Catarrhal affections and Bronchitis as Catarrhozone. Its success is quite unequalled in the history of medicine. It will cure you quickly and surely, and is well worth a trial. Two months' treatment guaranteed to cure, price $1.00; small size 25c. Druggists, or N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont. Buy it to-day.

CIRCUS NOT COMING

Ringling Bros Will Not Visit Peterborough This Year

Ringling's circus, which visited Peterborough last year, will not do so this season. The show is one of the largest on the road, and will appear in Toronto, Belleville, Kingston, Ottawa, and other places. This will be a great disappointment to the small boy, who loves a circus.

It is very probable, however, that Main's circus, which is said to be less pretentious than the Ringling show, will exhibit in Peterborough, although this is by no means certain.

RAIN TO-DAY

Some Welcome Showers are Promised for To-Day

Welcome showers are promised for to-day, which may terminate the torrid wave. The country needs rain, and needs it badly. The ground is parched and dry for the want of the gentle drops which bring life and strength to earth's green covering.

Reports received by The Times from the country indicate a great need of rain. It may be possible that rain will not reach us to-day, as local thunderstorms only are scheduled to appear. Let us hope that the showers, when they come, will be general.

A SUCCESSFUL ENTERTAINMENT

Given Last Night in the Charlotte Street Methodist Church

The entertainment given last night in connection with the anniversary of Charlotte street Methodist church Sunday school, was a great success. A large audience was present. The programme was one of rare merit, the following talent taking part: A chorus of 120 voices under the direction of Mr. Keough, Mr. and Mrs. Keough, Mr. Sorsoleil, Miss Mabel Christie, and others.

The affair was very enjoyable, and very creditable to those who got it up.

THE LATE WM. KENT.

Demise of One of the County's Oldest Pioneers

There passed away in Otonabee on Monday morning, Mr. Wm. Kent, one of Peterborough's oldest and most respected citizens. Mr. Kent was born in Otonabee, where he lived most of his life, 78 years ago. Mr. Kent was greatly esteemed and respected, and his demise, although naturally not unexpected, will be greatly deplored. He was identified with the Methodist church and also took great interest in the work of the Salvation Army. He was fond of doing good, and was never known to cherish ill-will or malice against anyone.

Mr. Kent leaves six children, as follows: Mrs. Martin, Detroit, Mich.; Mrs. Frank Henderson, Toronto; Mrs. John Counter, Cleveland, Ohio; Mrs. John Phelan, Toronto; George, Victoria Harbor, and Andrew, Otonabee.

He had been in good health up to a few months ago, when his rugged system gave way under the strain of years. The funeral will take place to-morrow, Wednesday, 20th instant, from the residence of Mr. Andrew Kent, and proceed to St. Mark's church cemetery, Otonabee, for interment.

Provincial Appointments

D. S. Austin, Wooler, has been appointed clerk of the tenth Division [illegible] thumberland and Durham, vice W. F. Scott, resigned. Adelard Filiatrault, Alfred, is appointed a bailiff of the ninth Division Court, Prescott and Russell, and Alfred Laidley, Mountain Grove, bailiff of the sixth Division Court, Frontenac.

A Disgraceful Scene

On Friday evening, shortly after five o'clock, a shameful exhibition of feminine degradation was witnessed by a number of citizens, when an elderly woman, between the age of 60 and 65, in a state of inebriation, was marched to the street from a back yard by another of her sex, who was without boots or stockings, and with whom she was involved in a quarrel. The language used is inexpressible, being of the lowest and most degraded that human tongue could utter. Such base incidents are rarely witnessed on the streets of Peterborough.

A Runaway

Mr. Edward Butler, who drives a team for Mr. Alfred McDonald, was returning from the west end of the town, where had had been delivering a load of wood, when his team suddenly became frightened and ran away. The heavy draught team ran at full speed down the street and turning suddenly at the corner of King and Stewart streets upset the heavy wagon completely over, throwing Mr. Butler heavily on the hard ground, partially stunning him and inflicting a very severe bruise on the right side of the head. The damage to the wagon and rigging is not extensive, and beyond a few scratches and slight bruises the horses are practically unhurt.

FROM THE BENCH

A Judge Commends Pure Food

A Judge of the Colorado Court said: "early one year ago I began the use of Grape-Nuts as a food. Constant confinement indoors and the monotonous grind of office duties has so weakened and impaired my mental powers that I felt the imperative need of something which neither doctors nor food specialists seemed able to supply.

"A week's use of Grape-Nuts twice each day convinced me that some unusual and marvelous virtue was contained therein. My mental vigor returned with astonishing rapidity; brain weariness (from which I had constantly suffered) quickly disappeared; clearness of thought and intellectual health and activity, which I had never previously known were to me the plain results of a few months use of this food.

"Unhesitatingly I commend Grape-Nuts as the most remarkable food preparation which science has ever produced so far as my knowledge and experience extends." Name and address furnished by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

The judge is right. Grape-Nuts food is a certain and remarkable brain builder and can be relied upon. There's a reason.

Found His Money

A well known carter had the misfortune a few days ago to lose a roll of bills, amounting to $28, out of his pocket. He had placed the wad in an inside pocket for safe keeping but forgot there was a hole in the pocket. Naturally when he discovered his loss he felt very badly, and searched high and low for the missing bills. On the following day he was again searching over the ground he had travelled over when the money disappeared. When patience had well nigh become exhausted, and he was about to give up in despair, his perseverance was rewarded. He picked up his money just as it had fallen from his pocket. It was lying on the side of the road in full view of passers by.

WEATHER NOTES

Moderate to fresh southeast winds; some local thunderstorms, but generally fair and warm.

A Complicated Case

At the police court yesterday morning, a case was presented to the [illegible] which [illegible] complicated. The Chief summoned a local hotel keeper for permitting his premises to remain in an unsanitary condition. This charge was proved, but in the meanwhile the landlord had laid an information against the tenant, whom the Chief had arraigned charging him with not keeping the sewer connections in proper repair. The tenant disclaimed responsibility and sought to make the landlord responsible. The argument over this point which took place between the lawyers, Messrs. R. E. Wood and E. B. Edwards, occupied a large part of the morning. The Magistrate withheld his decision, and the case was enlarged till Friday in order to permit a compromise. In the case of the charge brought forward by Chief Roszel, Mr. E. H. D. Hall, town solicitor, represented the prosecution.

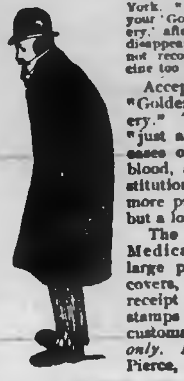
COURTING DANGER

It is courting danger to stand under icy eaves. Not a few have learned this to their cost. Every winter injury and even death are reported as the result of this carelessness. But there is a far more popular way of courting danger. Every man or woman who neglects a cough is inviting sickness, and many a fatal sickness has its beginning in a slight cough.

The timely use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will cure the cough. Even when the cough is obstinate and there is hemorrhage with emaciation and weakness, "Golden Medical Discovery" always helps and almost always cures.

"I was troubled with a bad cold, which settled on my lungs and left me with a miserable cough," writes Mr. Joseph D. Burns, of 318 Huestis Street, Ithaca, New York. "I used two bottles of your 'Golden Medical Discovery,' after which my cough disappeared entirely. I cannot recommend your medicine too highly."



Accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery." There is nothing "just as good" for diseases of the stomach, blood, and lungs. Substitution means a little more profit to the dealer but a loss to you.

The Common Sense Medical Adviser, 1008 large pages, in paper covers, is sent free on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps to pay expense of customs and mailing only. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

BRITAIN AND JAPAN WILL FIGHT RUSSIA

If the Latter Persists in Her Present Policy of Dealing with China

THE LITTLE KINGDOM HAS THE WAR FEVER

And Would Tackle Russia Single Handed without a Doubt if Not Held in Restraint by Britain

London, May 20—Late advice from Tokio confirms the newspaper reports that Japan is most anxious for war with Russia. The feeling throughout the country is intense, and it is only the restraining influence of Great Britain that keeps the Japanese from declaring war.

Tokio, May 20—The statement of Lord Cranborne, Under Foreign Secretary, in the House of Commons on the Manchurian question, and The Times' editorial on the same subject have caused much comment in the Japanese capital. Some publicists are disposed to think that the British Government does not appreciate the gravity of the situation, and that it puts too much trust in Russian assurances, which flagrantly conflict with actual facts. Leading journals, however, assert that the obvious existence of a full understanding between the Cabinets at Tokio and London, and are convinced that if the interests of either power is seriously threatened, the potency of the British-Japanese alliance will be forthwith felt.

St. Petersburg, May 20—The Russian officials express themselves as being deeply hurt at the criticisms of the American press on the subject of Manchuria, and say that "considering the friendship extended 40 years ago, when America needed friends, America might at least enquire whether the Anglo-Japanese news was not colored in the Anglo-Japanese interests."

The Manchuria incident threatened at one time to cause serious trouble on the Bourse. When the excitement was at its height Finance Minister Witte visited Foreign Minister Lamsdorf, and informed him that, under the influence of American representations, Japanese truculency and American newspaper attacks, in addition to the Balkan troubles, the Bourse was dangerously weak. The Finance Minister also declared that a continuance of the foreign attacks would threaten Russia's credit.

There is a widespread belief here that M. Planeon, the Russian Charge d'Affaires at Pekin, represents the Grand Duke Alexeiff and the war party.

VISIT TO SPION KOP IN SOUTH AFRICA

Interesting Letter from Canadians Now in South Africa

THE HEROES' GRAVES

What the Battlefields Now Look Like

THE TOP OF SPION KOP
March 27th, 1903.

We arrived here yesterday after visiting Majuba Hill, Laing's Nek, Mount Prospect, and other places, but those make another story. Just now we are on "Spion" 4,800 feet [illegible] supreme. Ranges of mountains 100 miles off seem so very near. We are nearly 20 miles out of Ladysmith by road and yet the historic battlefields surrounding this low lying battle scarred town can be plainly seen from Spion. The day is perfect, as nearly all African days are, at least in the past four months. As we climbed the ridges just now, 11 a.m., being on the north side, the sun beat down on us unmercifully, but once we gained the summit, a cool, bracing breeze was blowing that soon filled us with new life and vigor. One's heart beats about fifteen times more per minute up here than at the coast, and it makes you feel full of go. But how the sad sights depress us! In visiting battle ground after battle ground the British general's expression "war is hell" has kept ringing in our ears. At 12 o'clock we stood on the spot where 40 British killed were laid side by side while the trench was being dug for their burial. Until recently the grass and rocks showed blood stains. A beautiful monument marks the spot where these heroes fell on Jan. 24, 1900, and were interred. The long list of numbers and names is inscribed on the octagon side facing directly east. The whole is surrounded by a whitewashed barbed wire fence and it is kept in fine order by the Natal government. A white man with a gang of Kaffirs travels all over the district, keeping the graves of soldiers trimmed and cleaned and some flowers growing. We were fortunate enough to meet the land owner of Spion Kop, a Mr Charles Coventry who, with his four brothers owns some 18,000 to 20,000 acres of land in this vicinity. We are now facing south and looking down a few thousand feet on the Tugela river with its branches, now so celebrated on account of General Buller's march from Colenso and then his retreat, not realising that he had really won Spion Kop.

It seems one of those inexplicable misfortunes of war. The Boers trekked off to the northeast towards the historic Van Keenan's Pass, feeling that they were defeated. The besieged on wagon Hill near Ladysmith could see them go and, marvel of marvels, they also saw Buller's army was retreating in a southerly direction. Each army was hid from the other's view and it was too misty to heliograph or to signal the British that the Boers were in full retreat. One of the Boer cavalry came back to aid a wounded comrade that he missed, and finding the British were retreating gave the signal to the Boers in the rear and in two hours the whole Boer army had again taken up their positions on the kopje. The mobility of the Boer army passes comprehension. When one sees what Buller and his army had to contend with, it is simply wonderful how our men fought their way up and up, the view points are so circumscribed. Spion is a series of saddle shaped kopjes. You mount a saddle feeling you are on rods up to the next saddle peak, and find Boer sharpshooters are concealed behind the boulders on the peak just above, but whether 5 or 500 you would be unable to determine, and when Tommy has found his way inch by inch over the next peak, he finds still another with always that aggravatingly circumscribed view, and more especially so when one's comrades are falling so quickly in their tracks at every step gained. What a quiet, peaceful scene, the Kop presents today with the Tugela flowing so lazily along, winding in and out just as if it were following up and down and around the thumb and fingers of one's hand. That's the shape it seemed like when we were attempting to sketch it on paper.

(Concluded in to-morrow's issue)

Unionism Gone Mad

Buffalo, May 19.—During President Roosevelt's ride through Kansas City the reception committee had planned to have him occupy a carriage belonging to a wealthy woman whose coachman had neglected to join the hack drivers' union. The officers of the union promptly notified the committee that no union driver would appear in the procession following a non-union driver, and so the committee changed its plans and hired a carriage [illegible] requirements of the union. But this incident is not to be compared with the performances of the hack drivers' union in New Haven on Saturday, when they held up a funeral procession for two hours because some of the horses were driven by non-union men.

The New York Times says a Grave Diggers Union has been organized for the city. It is said that no grave is to be dug for any able-bodied workman who was not in life a member of some labour union.

CHAMBERLAIN'S SPEECH SENSATION OF EUROPE

The Comment of the Press of the Press of the British Empire is Very Favorable

HE IS CERTAIN TO SWEEP THE COUNTRY

And Will Probably Succeed Premier Balfour — The Next Election is Not Far Off

London, May 20—The new policy of Right Hon. Joseph Chamberlain is the sensation of Europe.

Speaking generally, the Ministerialist journals throughout the country applaud Chamberlain's programme. The Times has another editorial echoing Canadian appreciation of the Imperial largeness of Chamberlain's conceptions.

German telegrams indicate that a profound impression has been made. Leading Berlin journals are awaiting the official inspiration, but the other forecast a political and commercial upheaval, the issue of which is impossible to foresee. They plead that Germany has no desire for a tariff war with Canada.

English Liberal journals, with a few Imperialist exceptions, attack Mr. Chamberlain and quote against him the British Blue Book issued to-day, showing that Britain imported last year foreign merchandise to the value of £421,600,000, and colonial merchandise to the value of only £106,000,000. They argue that Chamberlain proposes to penalise four-fifths for the benefit of the fifth.

The Westminster Gazette tonight deplores Chamberlain's attitude as inevitably making colonial questions subject to partisan strife in the Motherland.

No one here doubts but that Mr. Chamberlain is sketching his own electoral programme. The question is whether the Ministry will ultimately assent, despite Mr. Balfour's present hesitation of whether Mr. Chamberlain will start the campaign of his own accord.

The Chronicle says: "It looks as if Mr. Chamberlain wished to open negotiations with the colonies in view of his elevation to the Prime Ministership."

The Daily News argues that Mr. Chamberlain is already in open revolt from the Government and must resign.

Andrew Carnegie interviewed in the Daily News pooh-poohs any attempt of the British Empire to compete with the United States. He says, scoffingly: "As for Canada compare her growth in the nineteenth century with that of the United States. Her only chance in the future is to throw in her lot with the Americans."

The Cape Town Times says: "If the British Government adopt Mr. Chamberlain's policy, the only plausible South African objection to preferential tariff disappears.

The St. James' Gazette urges that every unionist association throughout the United Kingdom organise an electorate support of Mr. Chamberlain.

THE EMPIRE'S TRADE.

The Trade of the Greater British Empire will be Carried From British Ports in British Ships.

Montreal, May 20—The keen interest aroused in business and political circles in this city, by the Rt. Hon. Joseph Chamberlain's announcement at Birmingham of a new Imperial policy, continues unabated.

The speech has been very generally commended for its bold tone and the comprehensive grasp of the situation, which the Colonial Secretary has exhibited.

In various lines of commercial activity in Montreal, it is predicted that the inauguration of such a policy would greatly tend to the upbuilding and expansion of Canada.

The grain men predict an enormous growth in Canadian wheat production if, for instance, a small duty were imposed by the Motherland against the wheat of foreign countries in favor of that grown in Canada.

Exporters of eggs, butter and other dairy products in Canada would have their business, it is claimed immensely increased as the result of such a preferential tariff arrangement.

The shipping firms also believe that a bold Imperial policy along some such lines, with closer relations between the colonies and the Mother Country would benefit them.

It is claimed that the principal expansion would arise from the return cargoes which would come from the other side in exchange for the wheat and other products exported from Canada to England.

An enormous development of the west would be an undoubted result of the new policy.

COMING TO CANADA

Thirty Thousand British Settlers will Arrive This Year

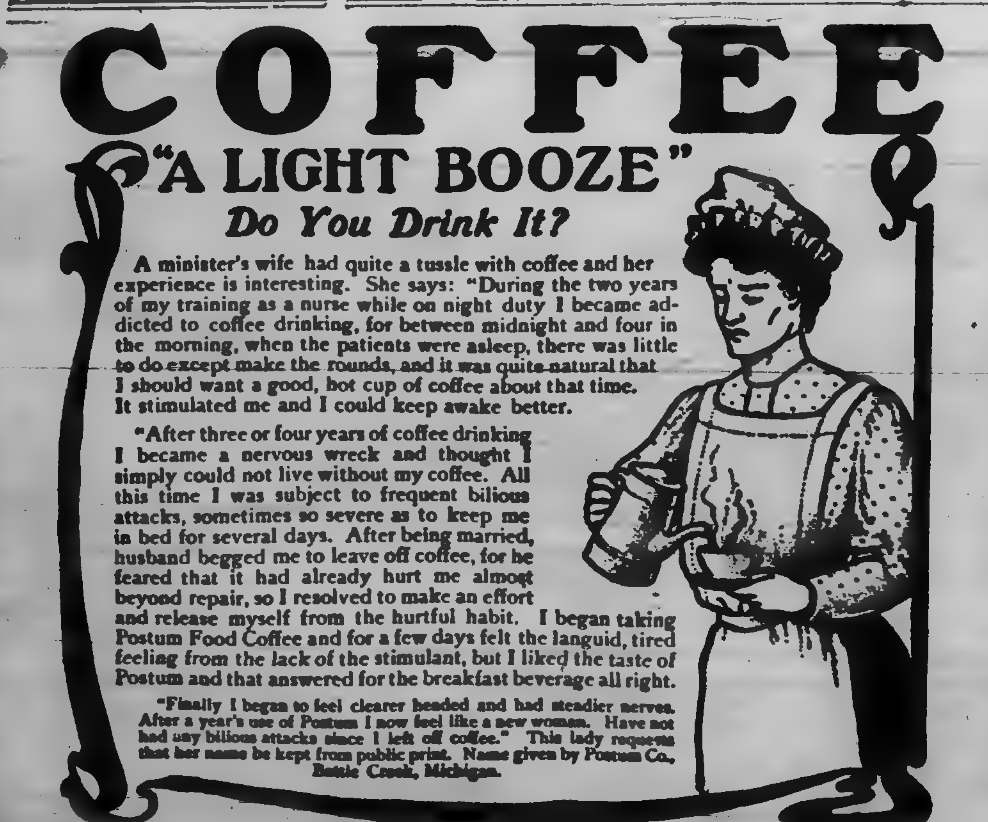
Toronto, May 20—John Templeton, of Shoal Lake, Manitoba, one of the 45 farmer delegates, who, three months ago, went to Great Britain at the request of the Government as advance agents of the unsettled west, is in the city. Mr. Templeton said he believed the trip of the farmer delegates will result in 30,000 British settlers coming to Canada before the year is out, these well-to-do heads of families, and not men without a dollar in their pockets. Possibly 1,000 of them will come out to spy out the land, and to return to persuade their families and friends to join them in the New World. They will be the most desirable settlers Canada could have.

Illness of Capt. Davies

Charlottetown, P.E.I., May 19.—Captain Robert W. Davies, brother of Sir Louis Davies, is seriously ill in England. His daughter, who has been spending the winter with Sir Louis in Ottawa, was cabled for and sailed last week. Captain Davies visited the Island some years ago in command of H.M.S. Griffin.

Marconi's Nerves are Shaken

London, May 19.—It is reported that Signor Marconi has been indisposed for several days in Rome. A physician found him on the verge of nervous collapse, and ordered that he take a prolonged rest. He is going to Riviera.



COFFEE
"A LIGHT BOOZE"
Do You Drink It?

A minister's wife had quite a tussle with coffee and her experience is interesting. She says: "During the two years of my training as a nurse while on night duty I became addicted to coffee drinking, for between midnight and four in the morning, when the patients were asleep, there was little to do except make the rounds, and it was quite natural that I should want a good, hot cup of coffee about that time. It stimulated me and I could keep awake better.

"After three or four years of coffee drinking I became a nervous wreck and thought I simply could not live without my coffee. All this time I was subject to frequent bilious attacks, sometimes so severe as to keep me in bed for several days. After being married, husband begged me to leave off coffee, for he feared that it had already hurt me almost beyond repair, so I resolved to make an effort and release myself from the hurtful habit. I began taking Postum Food Coffee and for a few days felt the languid, tired feeling from the lack of the stimulant, but I liked the taste of Postum and that answered for the breakfast beverage all right.

"Finally I began to feel clearer headed and had steadier nerves. After a year's use of Postum I now feel like a new woman. Have not had any bilious attacks since I left off coffee." This lady requests that her name be kept from public print. Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Michigan.

FISCAL FIGHT ON IN THE MOTHER LAND, PROTECTIONIST LEAGUE SUPPORTERS

Chamberlain's Speech Still Topic of the Hour--Attitude of Australia, Sir Edmund Barton Declines to Adopt the Policy of a Preference--Opinions are Varied

London, May 19—Mr. Chamberlain's Birmingham speech continues to be the chief topic of conversation in political circles.

More than that, the public sentiment in favor of a change in the fiscal policy of Great Britain is crystallizing in concrete form.

Already a Protectionist League has been started with an enthusiasm which has not been equalled by any movement for generations.

The promoters of this league state that 2,500 manufacturers have declared their adhesion to the principles of the league, and, what is more significant, state that 8 out of a hundred manufacturers in Birmingham and Manchester, the very cradle of free trade, have signed the membership roll.

It will not be long before the opinion of the House of Commons will be tested on Mr. Chamberlain's new policy. Sir Howard Vincent, M.P., for Central Sheffield, announces that he will take the very earliest opportunity of moving a resolution in the House of Commons in favor of the adoption of the policy of inter-Imperial trade advocated by Mr. Chamberlain. Such a resolution would provoke a debate of the greatest importance. In past years the resolution moved with this object in view by the founder of the United Empire Trade League has been regarded as merely an opportunity for an academic discussion of an abstract principle; but Mr. Chamberlain's new attitude has changed all that, and when the subject comes to be discussed it will provoke a debate of the very highest political value.

OPINIONS ARE VARIED.

The newspapers to-day are filled with opinions of Mr. Chamberlain's speech from leading men, both at home and at the ends of the Empire.

Sir Robert Reid, M.P., for Dumfries, who was Solicitor-General in Mr. Gladstone's last administration and Attorney-General under Lord Rosebery, maintains that Mr. Chamberlain's scheme would mean a constant tariff war between the colonies themselves as well as with the Mother Land, and that this tariff war would eventually result in the disintegration of the Empire.

Benjamin Kidd, the eminent sociologist, author of "Social Evolution," who a few months ago declared himself before the Royal Colonial Institute in favor of an Imperial zollverein, to-day writes The Times endorsing Mr. Chamberlain's proposals for an Imperial preferential tariff. He looks upon Mr. Chamberlain's new departure as the logical sequel of that gentleman's work in municipalization in Birmingham and his later work at the Colonial Office. He says: The basis upon which our old free trade policy rested has passed, or is being rapidly cut away. Free trade in the past rested on free competition. The tendency of all financial undertakings now is toward monopoly. There will certainly be in the near future only one overshadowing issue in politics in this country, as there is already in the United States, namely, that of the consumer and laborer on one hand, leagued against monopoly and production. The fight of the consumer will be to preserve the standard of living and wages. They will both have to organize themselves through the State. This is the lesson of the future.

"The Empire is the only possible economic basis of this new policy. It is the only basis from which a great war against the present monopoly tendency in production can be successfully waged. The organization of the Empire, therefore, is the first step in the campaign before us.

"We must pay the price, and that price is not simply a question of profit and loss expressed in trade balances."

THE VIEWS OF COLONIALS.

Sir Gilbert Parker, M.P., for Gravesend, expresses the view that Premier Balfour and Mr. Chamberlain will yet agree upon some working Imperial fiscal scheme.

Sir Alfred Jones, the head of the Elder-Dempster Steamship Line, asserts: "We must bring the colonies into partnership with the Motherland and give them representation at Westminster."

Lord Strathcona and all the Agents-General approve of the general principle laid down by Mr. Chamberlain, but reserve to themselves and to the Governments they represent the right to criticise any detailed proposals.

BRITAIN AND AMERICA

A Suggestion That the King should Visit the States

London, May 18—Mr. Labouchere's Truth suggests this week that King Edward VII. would do wisely to pay an early visit to America. Truth says: "Christopher Columbus discovered America. King Edward VII. discovered America in London. There are some who bear ill-will to Columbus for having done the former. There are others who are dissatisfied with King Edward for having done the latter. As America is now the paramount partner in the English-speaking world, and as his Majesty has recently adopted the role of Ambassador-in-Chief, could it not be brought about that King Edward should visit the United States, as he has Portugal and France? The King went away from England some three weeks last month. It would take him no longer to cross the Atlantic, [illegible] States and return. For the first time in the development of circumstances such a visit has become possible. It would be an admirable policy for the British Sovereign to seize an opportunity to propitiate the American nation."

Truth likewise indulges in some thoughts suggested by society of today, that are particularly pertinent. "The French," it says, "are more immodest than immoral. The English are more immoral than immodest. French women look as if they had been made to please man. English women look as if men had been made to please them. The average American woman conveys the idea that she has been made to please herself. The Pilgrim Fathers went to America. The Pilgrim daughters have come to Europe. The former are associated with the mayflower; the latter with the orange blossom. England travels in ruts, while America travels on rails."

BRITAIN AND JAPAN

Russian Officials Deeply Hurt at the Attitude of the United States

Tokio, May 18—The statement of Lord Cranborne, Under Foreign Secretary, in the House of Commons on the Manchurian question, and the Times' editorial article on the same subject have caused much comment in the Japanese capital. Some publicists are disposed to think that the British Government does not appreciate the gravity of the situation, and that it puts too much trust in Russian assurances, which flagrantly conflict with actual facts. Leading journals, however, assert the obvious existence of a full understanding between the Cabinets at Tokio and London, and are convinced that if the interests of either power are seriously injured, the potency of the British-Japanese alliance will be forthwith felt.

THEIR FEELINGS ARE HURT.

St. Petersburg, May 18.—The Russian officials express themselves as being deeply hurt at the criticisms of the American press on the subject of Manchuria, and say that "considering the friendship extended 40 years ago, when America needed friends, America might at least enquire whether the Anglo-Japanese news was colored in the Anglo-Japanese interest."

The Manchuria incident threatened at one time to cause serious trouble on the Bourse. When the excitement was at its height Finance Minister Witte visited Foreign Minister Lamsdorf and informed him that, under the influence of American representations, Japanese truculency and American newspaper attacks, in addition to the Balkan trouble, the Bourse was dangerously weak. The Finance Minister also declared that a continuance of the foreign attacks would threaten Russia's credit.

There is a widespread belief here that M. Planson, the Russian Charge d'Affaires at Pekin represents the Grand Duke Alexieff and the war party.

MANY REASONS WHY BRITAIN WON'T DISARM

She Must be Supreme at Sea No Matter at What Cost

BRITAIN HAS NO OPTION

She Does Not Set the Pace but Follows Other Powers in Armament

London, May 20—Those who urge Britain to go in for an international scheme of naval disarmament ought not to entirely forget that Britain is constantly acting as if such a scheme were in operation. She is not waiting for the other powers to give in their formal adhesion; she is now proceeding as if such an agreement had been reached.

That is, Britain never initiates increased naval expenditure. Her very life as a nation depends upon her superiority at sea over any two other powers who might combine against her. She has no option whatever, about increasing her fleet, when other nations increase theirs. The British Channel must be inviolate. That is as well understood in every European capital as in London.

But Britain never sets the pace. She does not wantonly go in for building up her navy. It is only when the growth of other navies challenges her necessary supremacy on the ocean that additions are made to the British warships. This, and the constant task of modernizing the battleships, account for all British naval expenditure.

Thus the moment the other nations cease to try to outbuild Britain, competitive naval arming will be a thing of the past all that is necessary to bring about an end to this killing competition is for the other naval powers to recognise the obvious truth that Britain's life depends upon leadership at sea, and the equally certain fact that Britain's wealth is sufficient to keep this leadership; and then to stop forcing the pace in naval construction. That is an olive branch that the British taxpayer would heartily welcome.

TO TEACH FARMING IN THE SCHOOLS

The Educational Department Has Decided to Institute a Course

COUNTIES TO CO OPERATE

Travelling Instructors will be Appointed and Schools Grouped in Districts

The Education Department have come forward with another radical change, this time regarding the rural communities. It is the establishment of a course in scientific agriculture.

The plan is to provide two or three acres of land adjacent to the most important school in several districts, in each county, and with the addition of about six other schools, there will be formed one garden center in each district. The County Council will then engage traveling instructors who must be graduates of the Guelph Agricultural College. Upon the day appointed for the visit of the instructor the boys from the several schools in the district will meet at the central school, where special practical instruction will be given in elementary forestry, elementary horticulture, entomology, and its relation to agriculture and horticulture, and physics and chemistry of the soil. The value of this instruction, it is pointed out, lies in its practical characteristics, each pupil being brought in contact with the actual work in the particular branches of study.

The instructors will visit one district each day, and it is expected with two competent men engaged by the County Councils, each county will be served in a week. Each year the different schools will be permitted to exhibit the result of their work at the county fairs and prizes will be donated to the schools making the best showing. By this feature it is expected that keener interest will be taken in this special branch of study and a friendly rivalry will be stimulated.

It is expected that before a year passes at least two counties will be thoroughly organized for this special work, and assurances have been given that the Legislature will grant an appropriation to assist in bringing the work to a high standard of perfection. It has also been stated that this is just the beginning of a broad plan to improve the education system in rural communities, and and that in addition to this special course for boys, a domestic science course will be introduced for the benefit of the girls upon a similar plan.

PETERBOROUGH, MAY 18, 1903.

CAP SULLIVAN'S SNAP

Information before the Public Accounts committee of the Ontario Legislature show that Cap Sullivan, under the name of Patrick Shannon, obtained from the Ontario Government a timber limit in Rutherford township for $250, a limit which is stated to have been sold by Sullivan almost immediately for $9,000.

Hon. Mr. Davis, the Commissioner of Crown Lands is nominally the responsible person, the sale to "Shannon" being by his department. Mr. Davis said he did not know who Shannon was. This explanation, if accepted, puts Mr. Davis and the Government in the position simply of allowing gross carelessness in the disposition of public assets.

But is it possible as a matter of common sense and of politics, to believe that the Ontario Government really in good faith sells to persons about whom it knows nothing timber berths at $250 which are saleable by these persons at once for thirty-six times the price.

STUDYING DREAD DISEASES

Persistent and well-directed efforts are being made with a view of discovering remedies for two of the most dread diseases to which human flesh is liable—cancer and small-pox. A few years ago an American phy- [illegible] ered the germs of small-pox. An officer in the service in India now states that he has found the parasite that that is responsible for cancerous attacks.

It would be premature to congratulate mankind on the certainty that the statements are well founded. Further information and independent testimony of the accuracy of these diagnoses and the efficacy of the remedies must be had before it can be assured that these alleged discoveries are genuine. But there is no question that the improvement in microscopic and other appliances that have become available during the last few years have made advances possible in medical knowledge and its utilization to combat disease that have made progress in the art of medicine bear more analogy to that in the sister branch of surgery than had previously been the case.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

The sugar beet area in the vicinity of Raymond is steadily increasing. The terms on which the 80 acre farms are sold include an agreement to plant one-tenth in beets for three years. Closer to town the land is sold in ten acre lots, with beet contracts attached.

The immigrants are passing through Regina, says the Leader, "not by tens and twenties, but by hundreds and thousands. Baggage is piled along the station platform, and on the trains going north freight cars have to be requisitioned to help out the baggage department."

CARNEGIE STILL TALKING

He Can See No Good in Anything British Except in Shakespeare

London, May 18.—To-day's Daily News has a sensational interview with Andrew Carnegie, who insists that Washington is the natural capital of the English-speaking world. He said that the colonies are not increasing. Australia is a mere rind round an empty interior. South Africa is not a white man's country, and the English Government's policy of encouraging emigration there, especially of women, is a crime. Canada's only chance of future is to throw in her lot with the Americans.

"Your colonies put tariffs against you. The colonies have virtually no manufactures. The Empire has lost the industrial race to America, but England has produced Shakespeare, who is more to me than the Bible. His birthplace is to me more sacred than the holy sepulchre itself."

The interview is provoking the bitterest sort of comments.

TEAMSTERS' STRIKE OFF

The Men Return to Work at $1.75 a Day—One Man Remains

[illegible], May 18.—The teamsters' strike was officially declared off by the committee on Saturday, and the men returned to work immediately. The companies agreed to $1.75 a day, an advance on the former rate, with the right to employ non-union men, but they promised not to discriminate against the members of the union.

In the Recorder's Court on Saturday morning forty-seven dock laborers who were arrested on Thursday night for refusing to fulfil their contracts with the steamship companies, changed their plea to guilty, with the exception of one who declared that he had not refused to work. The men stated that they wanted to go back to England, and Mr. Recorder Weir suspended sentence on condition that they returned to England as soon as possible. They left for Liverpool yesterday morning on the steamer Ionian.

The man who pleaded not guilty said he was willing to go to work, and will be given work by one of the companies.

Bad Complexion

Has Its Cause in Impure or Impoverished Blood

To have a soft, smooth skin, free from eruptions and unsightly blemishes, the blood must be maintained in a healthy condition.

Face powders, lotions and other toilet preparations may, for a short time cover up a multitude of wrongs in the blood, but they cannot remove those red, disfiguring pimples that are the bane of so many young ladies' lives.

Why not use Ferrozone? It is an unfailing cure for the worst kind of skin disease, the most effective of all blood purifiers, and cures bad complexion by removing its cause.

Ferrozone invigorates and purifies enfeebled blood. Makes it strong, rich and red. Ferrozone puts power into the blood to nourish the body and all its organs. It is a regulator of acknowledged merit, and is quite unrivalled as a remedy for Female disorders.

Mrs. Shanly, of Pittsburg, Ont., says: "For five years my face was disfigured by raw, bleeding eruptions that resisted all treatment.

"Three Kingston doctors did their best for me and when they acknowledged themselves beaten, I tried Ferrozone. The first box helped me quite a little, and by the time I had used six boxes I was cured. Ferrozone is a fine remedy for womanly disorders of all kinds and I can highly recommend it." (Signed), Mary Shanly.

Growing girls, women, men, in fact everybody can derive untold benefit from Ferrozone. It is a tonic for the blood, brain and nerves and worth its price ten times over to everyone who uses it.

Three weeks' treatment contained in a box of sixty-three chocolate coated tablets, cost 50c., or three boxes for $1.25. Sold by all Druggists, and N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

Buried Gold

By FRED WHISHAW.

Author of "A Boyar of the Terrible," etc.

Keith danced for joy; even the skipper cheered.

"By thunder!" he cried. "So we weren't far wrong, after all, Adams. Keep her off two points, Mr. Foster—we don't want them to see us to-night if they haven't done so already! And out with all lights!"

CHAPTER XV.

Negotiations.

The captain now summoned all hands aft and addressed them: "We've reached the island, lads," he said, "and within a mile or two of us are a score or more of our comrades whom we have come to rescue and take back home. We shall all land presently, as soon as it's dark, leavin' a very few on board to mind the ship and the prisoners. You'd think, comin' so far for their sakes as we have, these chaps on the island would greet us with open arms, but you may be sure they won't. They'll treat us as enemies. And why? Because of this darned treasure which has warped their minds, as the lust for gold has always done and will always do if chaps don't keep a firm hold on themselves and play the men. I ain't much of a speaker, but I'd like you all to remember this. We didn't come here to kill our unfortunate mates what's been wrecked on this island, nor yet to fight with them who's to have the gold. We've come to take them off and bring them all home to their friends: and as for the gold, why, it isn't ours any more than it's theirs, barrin' what's going to be given each man for his trouble by the owners. They may attack us—well, that's another thing, and we've got to defend ourselves. But we shall do better, take my word, by playin' the honest, Christian men I hope we all are, than by behavin' like wild beasts and fightin' for this gold as if we was a pack of wolves tearin' one another over their food. That's all I've got to say, lads, and I hope you'll remember it."

"And I should like to add just one word, mates, to what the skipper's told us," said Keith Adams, "and that is that if it should come to fightin' there's two men on the other side in whom someone on board this ship is interested more'n a little—old Jake Foster and a youngster called Denys Drake. Some of you may know 'em by sight. Well, don't shoot 'em, lads, if you can help, or someone we all know would be more'n miserable, and we shouldn't like to see her cryin'. You know what I mean."

The crew cheered both speeches. Men and officers were on the best of terms with each other and with themselves this evening.

The "Penelope" was anchored about two miles from shore, and when the night was full dark the two large boats were noiselessly lowered and stores, rifles, ammunition, spades, picks, and so forth, were lowered into them. Then the crew took their places, leaving Tom Foster in command, very much to his disgust.

"It might come to fightin', old man," Keith had explained, "and you wouldn't care to find yourself drawin' a bead on your own dad, would you? What if you were to shoot him or young Drake by accident?"

"I'm not such a blamed idiot as all that comes to. I can see where I'm shootin'," said Tom.

"Well, he might shoot you, not knowin' you was there, and that wouldn't be pleasant for either party. No, you're best here, looking after Jess and those two darned scamps we've got safe in [illegible] best way."

Tom Foster did know and he showed his wisdom by staying aboard without more ado. With him were three men on the sick list, the two prisoners and Jess. Twenty-one men went ashore in the boats.

Jessie Foster was pale and anxious as she saw the crew depart. "Please, please don't fight them, if you can help it!" were her last words to Keith. "If anything was to happen to him—to them—now, I should go mad!"

"We're for peace, not for war, if they'll let us," replied Keith. "Keep a good heart, Jess, and don't cry till you're hurt. You may hear shootin', but we sha'n't begin the row. That'll be them welcoming us ashore. Don't you get thinkin' every shot you hear is Denys bein' murdered. Even if we do fight, we sha'n't hurt him if we can help it."

Jessie saw them go—a silent party as ever left a ship's side—and then went and said her prayers. This comforted her. If she had known how badly everyone of those engaged in this enterprise, on both sides, needed praying for, she might have added a few to the sincere petitions she put up. When the cabin boy presently took their supper to the prisoners in irons, they asked him whether the ship had arrived off the island, or why had she anchored.

The cabin boy, remembering a very painful experience, when the bosun's mate had endeavored, with a strap, to express the sense of the officers with regard to his late indiscretion in connection with these two persons, answered evasively.

"We may be near an island," he replied, "and we may not."

"The captain and crew have gone off in boats," said Eddis. "Haven't they? I heard the splashin' of the oars."

"Them as don't ask questions," said the youth, "don't get no lies told them."

"Now, you look here, Tommy," said Eddis, "one of these days I'm bound to get free, and do you know what's the very first thing I shall do when I gets the chance? Why, wring your neck twice round and pitch your carcase to the sharks, if they'll eat such carrion."

"All right," said the boy, paling with horror, nevertheless. "You've got to get free first. Maybe you'll hang before my neck gets twisted. Who knows?"

"Stop, you fool! I ain't done talkin' yet," said Eddis. "On that there island there's gold, as you've heard, like the rest of us. Well, about a hundred thousand pounds' worth of that gold belongs to me and my mate here, and I swear by all the saints and angels that you shall have the lot if you'll help me and Dave here to get these blessed irons off and then go and get the dinghey ready for us, s'elp me, heaving, I will."

"You 'aven't anythink to do with heaving, you haven't," said Tommy. "I've smarted once for you, and what did I gain by it? You stay where you are, and if you don't like it you'd better go to the other place. I ain't going to do no more for you."

Tommy left the cabin happy and triumphant, though pursued by a volley of such language as I should be sorry to record. Tommy deserved better of the rescue party than he knew by his refusal to listen to Eddis's proposal.

Meanwhile the boats were slowly and very silently lessening the gap that lay between them and the shore. Keith, directing the leading boat, issued his orders

Kingston Citizens Adopt a Very Unusual Course

Kingston, May 18.—A remarkable notice was read in the Kingston churches yesterday. It was in the form of a motion passed on Saturday night by the Victoria Day Celebration committee, asking the citizens to observe Sunday next in accordance with the laws of the land. The Thirteenth in Khaki

Hamilton, May 19.—The 13th Regiment appeared for the first time in the new khaki, or tartan cloth uniforms yesterday. The Army and Medical Corps and the High School Cadets also turned out, there being a total of 615 on parade. Col. Stoneman was in command. The regiment will go to Brantford on a two day trip next Saturday night.

A LIMITED NUMBER OF SHARES IN THE

The Minersville Gold Mining —and Milling Company—

Will be sold at 15 CENTS PER SHARE. PAR VALUE, $1.00.

Full Paid, Non-Assessable and No Personal Liability.

READ THIS! This Company offers one of the safest and best investments, as its property is located in the famous Sumpter District, Baker Co., Oregon, and has for its neighbors such mines as the Bonanza, Red Boy, Eureka North Pole, Columbia, Golconda and Cracker Oregon, which are producing from $40,000 to $100,000 each per month. This great property for which the undersigned is Fiscal Agent is more promising than many of the big producing mines at the same stage of development.

This Company has three full claims, with two large veins, one sixteen feet and the other twenty-two feet at the surface, showing good gold values and strictly free milling.

The Company owns the property outright, being free from all debt and incumbrance and in order to equip the mine with modern machinery and to continue development work, a limited number of shares will be sold for a short time only at 15 cents per share, as announced above.

Investors who wish to place money in large or small amounts can do no better than investigate this proposition. All information cheerfully furnished, and all cheques payable to

THE

TWO-TEN OIL CO.

of Boulder, Colorado.

Capital Stock, 1,500,000 shares. In Treasury, 500,000 shares

TRANSFER OFFICE, BRISTOL, CONN.

This Company has a perpetual lease on 20 acres of proven oil land in SECTION NINE (9) of the Boulder district, and this section and the immediate vicinity have the best and largest number of producing wells in the entire district.

Our Well No. 1 came in, in January and is now pumping and shipping Oil regularly to the Refinery.

The Directors have decided to put down well No. 2 at once, and they now offer a block of the Treasury stock for the next 90 days at

10 Cents per Share, after that price will be advanced.

It is a well known fact that a 15 barrel well will pay over 100 per cent. profit upon its cost.

This is no longer a speculation for we have proved that oil is on our ground, and we now have oil in paying quantities, with two wells pumping we can soon pay dividends, and every well we put down increases our earning capacity.

This is a business proposition, managed by business men.

STOCK MARKETS

TRADER'S RALLY DUE.

New York, May 19—Even this dull listless market, if yet to continue for the while, should do better this week at least; a traders' rally is due. Last week of the stocks that moved at least one point only sixteen advanced while one hundred and four declined. In bonds the situation under the same conditions, were just the reverse. Forty-two issues advanced while only twenty-two declined. This is an encouraging feature worthy of note. It shows the investor to be interested, and he is always the forerunner of a period of improvement. Speaking of the steel stocks last Sunday, Cuthbert Mills, in his weekly article, commented that the common was selling on a non-dividend basis at present, though paying four per cent. and earnings 8 per cent. In alluding to the preferred issue, he said it was very cheap, did it pay but 5 per cent instead of 7 as it is doing. He particularly recommended these issues as good to buy and safe to hold. We are thoroughly in accord with these views. The labor outlook is more promising. Tendency of iron and steel prices to move to a more healthful level will increase export and home consumption. To show the prosperity of the steel trade all that is necessary to do is to point to the profit of the U. S. Steel Corporation for March amounting to $9,000,000 or nearly half a million dollars in excess of expert estimates. Once the cotton speculation collapses, present cotton prices being absolutely fictitious the market will be far better for it. The collapse must come, and we believe it to be very near. Southern cotton spinners' association has declared values to be fictitious and agreed to partially shut down their looms and spindles. The smash will be rapid and serious when it does occur, and belated cotton holders will as a result be badly hurt. Stock prices are very low. Cereals are comparatively cheap, while cotton is, in our opinion, altogether too high.

Summary—Today's market bore out the tip in our letter of last night, that at least a traders' rally was due. The buying was more spirited and urgent and prices were better all along the line. The advance should go further. St. Paul rose 2 points. The entire list followed the leader. Copper was well bought yesterday and today. The advance yesterday in the dividend on Calumet & Hecla [illegible] try from $5 to $10 per share indicates a change for the better in copper circles. Copper ought to be good for 70 easily. Money closed 1 1-2 per cent. Sales 551,200.

ASTHMA CURED

Mrs. Faradel, Clementsport, N. S., suffered all her life from asthama, but was permanently cur by Catarrhozone after all other means failed.

Mrs. Farndel's recovery affords overwhelming proof of what Catarrhozone will do. Nothing except Catarrhozone was of the slightest benefit, but when given a fair trial it cured.

Now perhaps you need something for your cold or bronchitis or Asthma? Why not try Catarrhozone? Thousands have been cured by inhaling it a few minutes now and again, and certainly it won't do you any harm to profit by their experience.

Mrs. Farndel gives the following statement of her case for the benefit of others who are suffering from asthma and hopes that many will follow her her example and use Catarrhozone.

"I am now in my eightieth year and cannot recall the time when I was free from the Asthma. I had always a chocking cough, fever ishness, spasms, difficulty in breathing, headache and nausea. My druggist advised Catarrhozone one day, and I bought a large outfit. It gave me relief in five minutes and helped me very much in one day.

"I inhaled Catarrhozone ten minutes every hour, and by the time two bottles were used, I was completely cured. I am as free now from Asthma, as if I never had it. My perfect recovery is due entirely to Catarrhozone. I prize my Catarrhozone Inhaler next to life itself.

(Signed) MRS. T. FARNDEL."

This is proof positive that Catarrhozone is a sure and speedy cure for the worst kind of Asthma. It is guaranteed to give satisfactory results, and your money will be refunded if it fails. All you need is a trial of this grand preparation to be quite satisfied and convinced that it is the best. Your druggist recommends and sells it. Price $1.00, small size 25c. By mail from N. C. A Charge of Stabbing was Dismissed by the Magistrate

At the police court yesterday morning, before Police Magistrate Dumble, a boy was charged with stabbing another playmate. I Advise Suffering Women Strongly, to Take Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

This advice comes from a woman who had suffered all the miseries women can suffer from disease, and had been perfectly and permanently cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

This great medicine for women establishes regularity, dries weakening drains, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness.

Read Mrs. Kempson's letter and, if you are sick, follow her advice.

"Although it has been quite a time since I wrote you," says Mrs. Fred Kempson, of Cambria, Hillsdale Co., Mich., Box 57, "still your name is a blessing in our house, and I think it my duty to let you know that I am still enjoying good health, thanks to you and your 'Favorite Prescription.' When I think how I was five years ago, and then see how I am now, I say, God bless Dr. Pierce's works, and may he live long to help poor suffering women. I have never had any return of my weakness and am well and hearty. Can do all my own work without any pain. You saved me from the grave when all others failed. I advise suffering women strongly, to take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, as I know it will cure in all cases, if indeed there is a cure."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are an excellent laxative, suited to the use of delicate women.

BRITISH PUBLIC OPINION IS BEGINNING TO CRYSTALIZE

Only One Discordant Note in the General's Chorus of Approval

Colonial Secretary's Great Schemes for Unity of the Empire—Press Comments Favor New Policy

London, May 21—The only discordant note in the colonial comments on Right Hon. Joseph Chamberlain's programme comes from Mr Birge, president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, who says,

"Canadian manufacturers will oppose the proposals."

Lord Strathcona anticipates an enormous increase of trade under the preferential treatment.

Sir Gilbert Parker contends that there is no real divergence between Mr. Chamberlain and Mr. Balfour. Both are aiming at the same end, namely, the drawing together of British colonial interests in commerce and Empire.

Asutralian criticisms are not yet received, but South African papers cordially approve. The Prime Minister of Natal entirely agrees with the proposed preference, even Hofmeyer the real leader of the African bond, believes the policy of mutual preference is the only one by which the Empire can be federated.

The Cobden Club's hostility was started by Lord Welby, the chairman of the committee, who says: "Chamberlain's policy is an injustice to forty two millions of British people whose interests are to be sacrificed." He also adds: "Mr. Chamberlain seems to look upon the British nation as if it were a parish pump."

The Standard, a Government organ, admits that if the new policy is pressed to the front it is likely to lead to a considerable division of opinion in the Unionist ranks, though it admits that so far as Birmingham and the Midland counties are concerned, Chamberlain has succeeded in carrying some very old pronounced free traders with him.

The Liberal leaders intend to hold an early debate in the Commons to test whether Mr. Chamberlain's declarations are made on behalf of the Cabinet. The Liberals profess themselves as confident that the country will adhere to a policy of free trade, but are afraid that in the colonies and in foreign countries undue weight may be attributed to Mr. Chamberlain's speech.

Howard Vincent has given notice to the Commons of his intention to move at the earliest obtainable date a resolution committing the House to the approval of Mr. Chamberlain's policy.

The London Daily Express publishes a statistic article to prove how far the Empire is from supplying its own necessities.

The Daily Mail has opened its columns for an expression of public opinion of all shades.

Benjamin Kidd, the eminent Sociologist, contends that it is imperative that the Empire should be organized on the lines of Mr. Chamberlain's ideas.

Rt. Hon. Mr. Chaplin, an ex-minister is an enthusiastic ally, and applauds Mr. Chamberlain. Mr Reid, a Gladstonian minister opposes him.

Labouchere says: "Mr. Chamberlain's Imperialism is dying." But Mr. Perks, who is a prominent Roseberyite member of the House, admits the proposal must be very seriously considered.

The Berlin telegrams says that Germany is dismayed.

In Government industrial circles the situation is regarded as pregnant with menace to the development of German foreign trade. The German Foreign Office is being bombarded with advice as to the most effective means of meeting the threatened danger and frustrating an Empire union which is the goal of Mr Chamberlain's statesmanship. German ultra-protectionists urge with imperative force that Germany should force Canada into submission. When that is secured, they say, the dark cloud of a British customs union will disappear from the German industrial horizon.

The Berlin correspondent of the Morning Post declares that the German embassy in London is warned that the German Government will refrain from assisting by the process of irritation, the conversion of the British public to Mr. Chamberlain's ideal.

EMPLOYERS TO COMBINE

National Organizations being Formed of Employers

BRANCH IN EVERY TOWN

New York Builders Take the Iniative and Perfect Their Organizations

Toronto, May 20.—It looks as though the employers had at last awakened to the real sense of the danger which threatens industrial Canada. The Canadian Employers' Association has been organized, and will at once push itself into all the towns and cities in Canada, without a moment's delay. The object of the Association is not so much to fight labor organizations, but to get after the agitator who lives on strikes. This can be done by placing the working man in a condition where strikes will not be necessary, and when they do come, they will do little harm. The new association will endeavor to adjust all differences between capital and labor. Mr. A. F. Rutter, the wholesale merchant of this city, who is at the head of the movement, states that a union of employers will put an end to labor tyranny.

New York, May 20—The first steps toward effecting a general organization of employers in the building trades for the purpose of offering united resistance to the demands of the labor union were taken Saturday at meetings held in Manhattan and Brooklyn. Warren M. Connover, the chairman of the Board of Governors of the Building Trades Association, by whom the call for the meeting was sent out, presided.

The meeting was secret. At its close a statement was given out as [illegible] speakers had said. These sentiments were expressed as follows:

"It is time that the decent and order loving mechanic asserts himself and defies the arbitrary demagogue who ties his hands and drowns his voice. The walking delegate is a parasite on the public body, to be exterminated. The extremes to which the unions have resorted and the manner in which they have repeatedly broken contracts with their employers have alienated from them the sympathy of the public."

The speakers also called upon the police and magistrates to perform their duties unflinchingly. The district attorney was called upon to prosecute will all severity those responsible for the condition of affairs.

A committee was appointed to devise ways and means and resolutions adopted calling upon the employers of the city to meet to arrange to fight the unions.

In Brooklyn 1000 employers met and formed the "Employers' League of the Borough of Brooklyn." It was resolved to permit no interference with business by any individuals or ganizations and that no walking delegates should be permitted to enter any shop during business hours. Officers were elected and a board of twenty trustees to form a plan of campaign to enforce the principles of the organization and devise means to combat the labor unions.

GERMAN CONVERTS

They Will Not be Sent to Canada as First Reported

Berlin, May 21—At Berlin it is stated officially by the German Government, that it cannot understand a despatch from the Ottawa correspondent of the London Times, saying that Germany proposes to dump her convicts in Canada. No such measure has ever been proposed and no proposition of that kind will be considered, it is officially stated.

ENGLISH RAILWAY MEN

They Seek Information in Canada and the States

Montreal, May 21—Messrs. J. T. Tatlow, John Wharton, George Banks and T. T. Dale, official delegates of the Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway, who have been in Montreal obtaining information as to the operations of Canadian railways, left yesterday for Boston, where they will pursue their inquiries. While here the gentlemen in question were shown about by the local railroaders, and showed themselves eager to acquire all the information possible with respect to the principles upon which Canadian lines are operated. Before their departure, however, they expressed to a reporter their disinclination to even indicate the nature of the report which they will submit to the management when they return to England. They recognized that railways in this country are operated along American rather than English lines, and consequently expected to obtain more hints which might be of advantage to their system at home.

NEW C.P.R. OFFICIAL

Mr. Wm. Downie Now Superintendent of Atlantic Division

Montreal, May 20—The official announcement of the appointment of William Downie as superintendent of the Atlantic division of the Canadian Pacific Railway was made this morning. Mr. Downie reached the city yesterday from the coast, and leaves this evening for the scene of his future labors.

Up to the present Mr Downie, who now succeeds Mr. James Osborne at St. John, N.B., has been located at Nelson, B.C., as superintendent of the Kootenay lines. Mr. Downie is a railroad man of much experience. He was for some years connected with the Northern and Northwestern Railway from Toronto to Collingwood and Gravenhurst, Ontario. In that road he reached the position of chief despatcher and car distributor at Allandale, when he resigned to go to the Pacific Coast.

He entered the employ of the Canadian Pacific Railway as assistant superintendent of the Pacific division in July 1886. In 1890 he was appointed divisional superintendent, and on March 1, 1901, he was made superintendent of the company's Kootenay [illegible]

Indian will be Hanged

Vancouver, B.C., May 21—At the Vernon assizes, Alex, a half breed, was sentenced to be hung in Kamloops on the 19th of June. Alex, who is 21, murdered his wife, who is 17. He told her to come home after a family quarrel, that he would shoot her dead if she did not. She refused and he shot her dead.

Will Proffer $1,200

Toronto, May 19.—It is understood that Mr. Gamey has consented to proffer to the court $1,200, as suggested by the Commissioners trying his charges last Saturday. He will, however, do so with the provisio that Frank Sullivan be called upon to produce his I.O.U. for that sum, and on the condition that the court will protect him against suit for the amount in future.

Will Bar Criminals

Ottawa, May 21 — Sir Wilfrid Laurier, replying to a question yesterday afternoon, intimated in a very decisive manner that should the German Government attempt to carry out their reported intention of shipping ex-convicts to Canada, the laws preventing the admission of undesirable immigrants into Canada will be rigorously enforced.

THE BALKAN TROUBLES

The Bishop of Nevrokop is a Prisoner in his Own Home

London, May 21—A London refugee who has escaped from prison at Nevrokop, Macedonia, has informed the Sofia correspondent of the Times that several Bulgarian notables of Nevrokop have been killed.

The Bishop of Nevrokop is confined to his house under arrest.

The large village of Valdero has been destroyed by fire and many inhabitants perished.

PARENTS DESERT CHILD

For Eight Hours Baby Had Not Tasted Food

New York, May 21—Charged with abandoning their one-year-old baby girl, John and Bridget McKenna, of No. 443 Third Avenue, Brooklyn, were yesterday held in $1600 bail for trial.

When the child was found by the police in the McKenna apartments, it had cried itself almost into hysterics and had been eight hours without food. The parents had had a quarrel and each had left the house vowing never to return.

THE BAVARIA'S RECORD

Allan Liner Delivers Her Mails at London on Monday

London, May 21—The Allan Liner Bavarian reached Liverpool on Sunday night, beating the previous fastest passage between Montreal and Liverpool by six hours. Her mails were distributed in London on Monday morning, thus equalling the past winter's service between Liverpool and New York. The mails by the Corinthian, although despatched a week earlier, have not yet arrived.

GOOD CLASS COMING

Immigrants Bring Money to Canada to Buy Farms

London, May 21 —The steamship companies still report unprecedently heavy bookings to Canada. They say it is not merely the number, but the class of immigrants that is noteworthy. A large proportion are middle-class people who have enough money of their own to buy farms from within three to five years. For the first year they will work for Canadian farmers in order to learn the ways of the new country.

IMMENSE LAND PURCHASE

Small Kingdom in the West Sold to American Capitalists

Winnipeg, May 21—Mr. A. H Hanson, manager of the Saskatchewan Land Company, who has just returned from St. Paul, confirms the reported purchase of all the Canadian Northern Railway lands by his company.

The land comprises about 3,000,000 acres, located tributary to the Canadian Northern Railway between Winnipeg and Saskatoon, where, the Saskatchewan crosses at Osler. The Canadian Northern Railway will be built there this season.

THE DROUGHT CONTINUES

Another Day of Heat and Drought—Rain Badly Needed

Peterborough awoke yesterday morning to another day of heat and dust and glare, though a pleasant breeze tempered the strength of the sun's rays. The rain which each day is more needed shows no signs of coming.

The country people have many complaints to make of the dry weather. Reports from merchants who have been in the country during the past few days are to the effect that the grass is stunted, not being more than a couple of inches high. It is also reported that the water courses in many parts of the country have almost completely dried up.

So far as the grass is concerned, it is said that one or two good rainfalls would remedy the state of affairs.

STRIKES TIE TORONTO UP

Building Trade in Queen City Feel Labor Troubles

Toronto, May 21—"We are all tied up, that is how it effects us," said a number of architects when asked as to the effect of the strikes in the building trades here. In one of the most prominent offices it was estimated that two million dollars worth of building had been stopped by the strikes and high prices of labor. A new phase of the situation, so far as the carpenters are concerned, is that the supply men are coming into the fight and say that the bosses who pay the union scale will not get lumber to carry on their business.

Another feature, according to the architects, is that the builders do not say that the men are asking too much, but they object to having their business run by the union.

British Warships Sent

Gibraltar, May 19 Four British warships have sailed from here for the Port of Tetuan, Morocco, owing to the hostilities between the Sultan and the pretender in that country.

A Big Timber Deal

Quebec, May 19 —The Pentecost timber limits, consisting of 187 square miles, together with the harbor of Pentecost have been sold to John McLennan, of Syracuse, N.Y., and his assistants for $100,000 cash.

These limits are situated on the north shore of the St. Lawrence, 40 miles west of Severn Island. The Crown Lands Department figures in the transaction, having disposed of to the same capitalists extensive water powers and in the agreement the purchasers bind themselves to expend not less than $300,000 in three years.

Wharves and mills will be built and the limits developed to their full extent.

TORONTO HOME COMERS

How the Queen City Propes to Entertain Old Boys

The following has been sent The Times for publication—

The City of Toronto is making an interesting departure in Horse Shows, and is holding a novel form of equine Exhibition in the open air on the afternoon of July 3rd, in connection with the Old Home gathering which the Board of Trade of that City has arranged. Instead of extending a Show over one week in Madison Square, it will all be done in one hour of a sunny summer afternoon. The beautiful Queen's Park and University oval in Toronto furnish roadway around adjourning circles of over two miles and on these will be arranged upwards of 500 horses and carriages. An army of judges will make the awards simultaneously and the judging will not occupy above an hour. Then the whole exhibition will move around the oval and pass in review before His Excellency, the Governor-General of Canada, Lord Minto. It is expected that over 200,000 people will witness this unique Horse Show. It is designated to show to the thousands of home-coming Canadians how important a centre of the horse breeding industry Toronto has become.

BIG FIRE AT ST. JOHN'S

Three Churches and Many Buildings Destroyed

St. John's, Nfld, May 20—Fire has devasted the Town of Little Bay, where a large copper mine is being worked. Three churches, with the clergymen's residences, the mining companies' stores, the Government buildings, and forty dwellings were destroyed. The total loss is estimated at $50,000. Two hundred and fifty persons are homeless, and relief is being forwarded by the authorities.

Another fire destroyed the lumbering section of Appleton. The mills much sawn timber, and other property were consumed.

The Immigration to Canada

London, May 21 The steamship companies still report unprecedently heavy bookings to Canada. They say that not merely in number, but the class of immigrants is noteworthy. A large proportion are middle-class people, who have enough money to buy their own farms within three or five years, but who, for the first year, will work for the Canadian farmers in order to learn the ways of a new country.

IS RUSSIA REALLY FULLY CIVILIZED?

This is the Question That is Now being Considered

THE JEWISH MASSACRES

Give Vent to a Feeling of Intense Indignation Against That Country

London, May 21—The Times' London correspondent says: "Intense interest and feelings of horror and indignation have been aroused in both Jewish and Christian circles by the record of the fiendish barbarities set forth in a letter to The Times from David Alexander and Claude Montefiore, a summary of which has been cabled.

The Pall Mall Gazette, under the leading, "Civilized or Savage," asks whether Russia is entitled according to western notions of civilization to be regarded as a civilized country. [illegible] bers the massacre of Blagovstchensk and the absolute acquiescence of the Russian Government in the slaughter of Armenians, one can only ask whether the power which permits and commits such crimes as these has a right to be reckoned among the number of civilized countries."

It is felt that great caution should be exercised in the collection and disbursement of funds in order that the sources of the charity should not be prematurely exhausted. One serious consideration is the difficulty of co-operation between the charitable societies in London, Berlin and Paris.

British Commons on Massacre

London, May 21—The Under Foreign Secretary, Lord Cranborne, was asked in the House of Commons for information on the massacre of Jews at Kishineff, Bessarabia, a month ago. The secretary, in reply, placed the total of killed at about double the number given in the official Russian report. Otherwise the facts did not differ from those already published.

Lord Cranborne added: "According to the Government's information, the disturbances arose from the murder of a Christian lad which was wrongly attributed to the Jews. The latter retaliated on their assailants and the result was an attack on the Jews by a mob on Easter Sunday and Easter Monday in which, it is believed, about a hundred Jews lost their lives, and many more were injured."

THE UNITED STATES MAY TAKE ACTION

Against Russia Regarding the Recent Horrible Massacre of Jews

FORCE JEWS TO AMERICA

Washington Government After the Bear—Proposed Line of Action

Washington, May 21—none of the many resolutions relative to the Kishineff outbreak adopted yesterday at various places in the United States have reached the State Department and the officials have nothing new, before them upon which to proceed. It is not known whether further instructions have been sent to our Embassy at St. Petersburg.

The brief cablegram from St. Petersburg this morning might open the way for diplomatic action on the part of the United Stated in this matter. That statement said the Russian Government has forbidden the Jews to arm or defend themselves with a deliberate purpose of forcing them to emigrate to the United States, for nowhere in Europe could they find refuge. Such action would be similar to that taken by the Roumanian government, upon which the State Department laid down the doctrine that the dumping of hordes of emigrants likely to prove paupers upon our shores is obnoxious to the United States.

TO PREVENT MASSACRES.

St. Petersburg, May 21— All public assemblages in the Province of Saratoga have been prohibited under pain of heavy penalties. A proclamation of the Government has been posted in all the towns and villages and has been published in all the newspapers forbidding all public gatherings.

Strike at Montreal

Montreal, Que., May 19—A gang of 'longshoremen at work on the steamship Michigan struck this morning, owing to the employment of a non-union foreman. After stopping all work for a time, the men went back to work, but the difficulty has not yet ben settled.

DUAL THEME OF SAVAGERY AS IN PRUSSIA AND AMERICA

Rev. Dr. McArthur, in New York, Denounces the Mobs That Kill Negroes and Pays a Tribute to Liberty Under the British Flag.

New York, May 20—The Rev. Dr. Robert S. McArthur preached at Calvary Baptist church on the dual theme of savagery in Russia and savagery in America. Though he began with a bitter arraignment of Russia for the massacre at Kishineff he devoted quite as much time to a denunciation of the lynching of negroes in this country. He said that a mob which killed negroes in this country was as bad as a mob which killed Jews in Russia.

The only distinction which he noted was that the outrages of Russia were the natural development of the policy of cruelty systematically pursued by the Russian Government and encouraged by the authorities of the Greek church through many centuries.

In ending, he said he had himself been born under a corner of the British flag, and that while he loved the American flag with every drop of blood in his body, there was no flag in the world so fair to men of all colors and all faiths, as the British flag.

Regarding the proper attitude for the United States to take in the present emergency, he said: "We have all been startled by the unspeakable atrocities inflicted by the Russians upon the Jews. Russia is the great bear in the international menagerie. It is the medieval barbarism in the modern world.

"The United States Government must protest in the name of humanity against such cruelties. Jews are slain, women are dishonored, children are slain. Why? Because they dared to be true to their ancient faith. To say that the United States government has no right to address a remonstrance to the Russian government is to mistake the functions of our government today. If Great Britain and the United States will join hands they can stop atrocities in all parts of the world."

In the Australian Market--Last Season's Drought

Was Fifty Million Dollars—Australians Continue to Look to Canada as Their Future

Ottawa, May 21.—J. S. Clarke, Canadian Trade Commissioner in Australia, writes that requests for information regarding Canadian lands for settlement continue unabated, and come from every part of Australia. The steamers have their full capacity engaged in advance.

Rains have fallen in various sections, and the crop prospects are improved. The price of products has fallen. Millers would rather sell than buy, but the demand still continues for Manitoba flour. The hogs shipped from Canada were found heavy and fat. New Zealand oats now have the Australian market, as they can be sold cheaper than ours. There is no demand for wheat, and but little for flour at the present time, but in three months there will likely be a movement for handling wheat from Vancouver if it is possible to get it at the right price.

The net loss to Australians by last season's drought was fifty million dollars, and this comparison is with a season itself below the average. Not taking into account the rise in value the loss on stock was forty millions. The deficiency in the grain crop was thirteen million bushels, representing a loss of nine million dollars. The export of wool has so far fallen off by 180,000 bales, and another ten million dollars to add to the reduced output of hay, dairy products, fruit, etc.

Canadian manufacturers are showing a renewed interest in the Australian market.

Visit to Spion Kop

Off to our left were two high kopjes one occupied by the British, and at the far end of the other were the Boers. In and around these two kopjes the fire was terrific on that memorable Jan. 24, 1900, farther south was Thornhill's farm house, near which was fought the battle of Valkran; to the south and across the Tugela, was Spearman's camp with all the British transports. About five miles away the Boers had a Long Tom mounted on Doorn Kloof, and from here they were throwing 96 lb. shells on the British. Previous to 24th there was some fierce fighting south of Spion Kop and around some smaller kopjes. Some five months after Mr. Coventry and his brothers and a few neighbors buried 29 British soldiers, who somehow had been missed by their comrades. Their bodies had lain all this time on the open veldt and were greatly dried but otherwise in a fairly good state of preservation. They were all put into one grave just as they lay in their uniforms, and now a monument is erected there to mark the spot. No guns nor ammunition was found near them except one bayonet. All were very young men and belonged to the York and Lancaster regiments. We traced from our elevated position some four or five miles of Boer trenches. They had every preparation made to hold these positions indefinitely. In one trench, some 300 feet long, dug by the Boers on Spion some 60 British lie buried.

We were rather amused to hear while taking lunch just after we had walked a short distance over what is now known as the Chamberlain Road, that on the day when Mr. Chamberlain was here, a Mr. de Jagger, a wealthy Dutch farmer, living near Spion Kop, came to Mr. Chamberlain and complained that he had been imprisoned in Ladysmith during the whole seige and for months after that he was not allowed to look after his property and that he had received nothing for all his losses. The truth was that he had been covertly aiding the Boers, and he a voter in Natal and a British subject; his five sons were away fighting with the Boers, and his 200 cattle 1,500 sheep and some 600 goats with horses and mules had all been driven north into the Free State and were used by the Boers, etc., and here he was after getting freedom, trying for British compensation. Mr. Chamberlain had not been informed about this man's case but he was not caught napping—evidently he intuitively took in the situation, and replied that such things were sad, but were the fortunes of war, one made and other lost, it was strange and inexplicable, but there were sure to be individual cases of hardship, all good British subjects could not be compensated, etc. Mr. de Jagger did not remain on Spion during the remainder of the Chamberlain visit.

We have driven over 40 miles today. Were up at 6.30 a.m., started off in a cape cart and 4-horse team and bowled over the great Natal veldt at a break-neck pace, as in many places there are great ruts and gullies cut by rains into the roads or treks and we crossed spruits and dongas full speed and up the side like a reindeer; it was impossible for the more sober-going rear horses to hold the cart back. However, we got through going and coming without a mishap. We tramped some five hours up and over Spion Kop and are now back to Ladysmith at 7 p.m., having been out 12 hours in all. Mr. Earle enjoyed every minute and even if somewhat tired one day is always all right the next a.m. Like old Mr. Kruger we go to bed often with the birds, sleep like winter bears and wake early and as fresh as larks. How this clear air of the veldt invigorates.

We start early to-morrow for Colenso and Chieveley.

WITCHCRAFT

The history of witchcraft forms one of the blackest chapters in the records of the human race. In the dark ages of the world this horrible superstition was supposed to be a supernatural power which was obtain[illegible] the devil. In this transaction his sable majesty on his part engaged [illegible] want for nothing; that they would be able to assume any shape they pleased; that they could visit and torment their enemies to their heart's content and that they could carry out any other infernal [illegible] at their pleasure. And if the witch who [illegible] make a journey she had no need of a conveyance, for she could transport herself through the air on a broomstick. And all the while [illegible] and which secured a foothold in every civilized country in the world. It was felt and feared on the sunny shores of the Mediterranean and in the frozen regions of the north. Witchcraft was a criminal offence under the Jewish economy. Moses in the 22nd chapter of Exodus it was commanded "Thou shalt not suffer a witch to live." This passage literally interpreted has been inserted into the criminal code of all Christian nations and has caused the most savage cruelty and the most [illegible] of innocent men and women [illegible]. In the 28th chap. of First Samuel we have a detailed account of Saul's interview with the far-famed witch of Endor [illegible] barrassed by such difficulties [illegible] hazard the prediction [illegible] chances for the re[illegible] In the [illegible] century a full tide of [illegible] wild fanaticism against witchcraft swept over every country in Europe. No class escaped the blighting effects of that superstition. The highest law courts, grave doctors of divinity, as well as the humblest plebian—all suffered alike from the general contagion—and thousands were burned at the stake for the impossible crime of witchcraft. In England [illegible] In Scotland the last victim of witchcraft was executed in the year 1722 [illegible] America the last victim was executed in 1692. In France executions for this [illegible] 14th in 1670. About this time the [illegible] It might now be interesting to trace some of the causes which at one time lead to the almost universal belief in witchcraft. And first it may be said that there is a deep human conviction that there is something beyond the fleeting [illegible] and men vainly strive to lift the veil. [illegible] the human race there is a general belief in the existence of spirits, released from their house of clay, who in their disembodied state still take an interest in the affairs of men, and who have power to foretell our destiny and to aid or afflict us at their pleasure. This belief was greatly intensified by the childish credulity of our ancestors during the midnight of intellectual darkness. In the deep gloom of that unhappy time, awful mystery shrouded all the phenomena of nature. The eclipse of sun and moon, the falling stars, the earthquake, the roar of the tempest and the crash of thunder all impressed the rude mind of the trembling devotee with inexpressible terror. His disturbed vision could see and his ears could hear the spirits that were about him. And from so much credulity and ignorance it was an easy step to ghost stories, to fairy tales, and to witchcraft. It is true that in a more advanced state of society the philo[illegible] the [illegible] certainly implies that it has neither form, substance nor voice which can rea[illegible] in any way [illegible] faculties [illegible] of mankind are not [illegible] push their researches so far. But towards the close of the seventeenth century, the revival of learning and the fearless investigation of subjects which were formerly thought too sacred for any [illegible] to dispel the darkness and witchcraft died out under the influence of a better civilization.

THE MONTREAL STRIKE

Street Railway Employes There Make Demands on the Company

Montreal, May 21.—While the officials of the Street Railway Employes [illegible] the action which they propose to take in regard to another strike the men on the cars make no secret of their dissatisfaction with the arrangement which was reached at the time of the strike in February last. The general assumption [illegible] consequently that the convention at Pittsburg merely tends to precipitate trouble which has been brewing for some little time.

At ten o'clock this morning a committee, headed by the president of [illegible] the management of the company and presented the demands of the men. The men claim that wages [illegible] and they think that they should be getting as much money as Toronto men.

They are demanding 17 cents per hour for first year men, 18 cents per hour for motormen and conductors who have been with the company for more than two years, and 20 cents per hour for all those in the employ of the company more than three years, and complete recognition of the union.

The employes of the Montreal Light, Heat & Power Company to-day made a demand for an increase in wages. The new schedule covers a great many different branches of labor, including those employed in the manufacture of electricity and gas.

The result of actual experience proves that ninety cases in every hundred can be cured, and stay cured, of impaired hearing by the regular use of Catarrhozone.

BRITISH EMPIRE LEAGUE

Annual Meeting Held in Ottawa and Business Transacted

Addresses by Sir Wm. [illegible] Sir Sandford Fleming and Others

Ottawa, May 21.—The British Empire League held its annual meeting in [illegible] Building to-day, with Col. [illegible] presiding in the chair. The attendance was very small, and included Sir Wm. Mulock, Sir Sandford Fleming and Hon. J. J. Tarte.

Col. Denison [illegible] went very fully into various phases of the imperial problem from the standpoint of defence, trade, etc. Alex. McNeill, [illegible] seconded the adoption of the report, and dwelt upon the enormous exertions of foreign powers to increase their naval strength.

Hon. J. I. Tarte, who has long taken an interest in the league's work, spoke with satisfaction of the freedom which French-Canadians enjoy under British rule. While not seeing eye to eye with Col. Denison in the matter of defence, he fully recognized the wisdom of young men in Canada fitting themselves to defend their country in time of need. Canada could not open her markets to British goods without tariff restrictions, but there are lines upon which reciprocity would be an undoubted boon.

Sir William Mulock proposed a resolution in favor of inter-imperial preferential trade, and in so doing said the first step towards that end was taken by Canada in 1897, when its preferential tariff became law. New South Wales and Australia are moving in the same direction, and the speech of Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, the strong man of England, suggests a movement of the like character on the part of the Mother Land. Each portion of the Empire therefore, is moving voluntarily toward the same goal. The truest bond to unite the Empire was, in his judgment, neither self-interest nor physical strength, but the wonderful freedom of the British system wherever it exists.

Sir [illegible] complete accord [illegible] ing from [illegible] the matter of imperial defence. He thought Canada had already done a great deal [illegible] for Canadian defence [illegible] thousands [illegible] our West [illegible] Dominion's resources.

Sir Sandford Fleming recited the story of the Pacific cable, and suggested [illegible] commissioner, preferably a Cabinet Minister [illegible] up the misunderstanding with the Commonwealth concerning the business future of the cable. A proposal in this direction was endorsed by the meeting.

Mr. McNeill moved a resolution of satisfaction upon the recent speech of Hon. Joseph Chamberlain.

[illegible] president for another term.

A Breakfast Relish For The Strong and Weak

In thousands of homes there are fathers, mothers and children who cannot use oatmeal in any form, as they find it has a tendency to irritate the stomach, excite heat and redness of the skin, and produce eruptions. Then again, cracked wheat, hominy, and other cereals contain too much insoluble starch which hampers digestion. Malt Breakfast Food [illegible] to the rescue of weak and strong stomachs. It does not contain a particle of insoluble starch; it is [illegible] the effort to digest it. Malt Breakfast Food is the most delicious of all cereal foods. It pleases every palate and becomes a fast favorite wherever it is tried. Ask your Grocer for Malt Breakfast Food and take no other make of food.

MR. BARR FORCED OUT

British Colonists Depose Him From the Leadership

Winnipeg, May 19.—A Battleford despatch to The Free Press says that Rev. Mr. Barr has returned there and complains of the slow progress in the work of locating the colony, and claims the land should all be resurveyed, as the old survey is nearly obliterated. The feeling against Mr. Barr is very strong. At a meeting held in the camp near Battleford on Saturday afternoon a unanimous resolution was passed deposing Mr. Barr from the leadership. The colonists appointed Rev. G. E. Lloyd and two other members of the party to take control, and act with the Government agent, C. W. Speers, who is now returning to Battleford. Mr. Barr at first positively declined to step aside, but has changed his mind since and handed in his resignation in writing. He has left the colony, and it is believed will go East.

ONE DISCORDANT NOTE

[illegible] Canadian Manufacturers Attracts Attention

London, May 21.—The only discordant note in the colonial comments upon Mr. Chamberlain's programme comes from [illegible] president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, who says that Canadian manufacturers will oppose the proposals for increased preferences to British manufacturers.

Lord Strathcona states that he anticipates an enormous increase in trade under preferential treatment.

Sir Gilbert Parker contends that there is no real divergence between Mr. Chamberlain and Mr. Balfour. Both are aiming at the same end, namely, drawing together the British interests in the commerce of the Empire.

Australian criticisms have not yet been received, but South Africans cordially approve of the policy. The Premier of Natal entirely agrees to a preference. Even Hon. J. H. Hofmeyer, the real leader of the Afrikander Bund, believes that the policy of mutual preference is the only one by which the Empire can be federated.

A REFUGE FROM RUSSIA

Proposal to Settle Jewish Refugees on Canadian Farms

London, May 21.—The terrible tales of butchery of the Jews at Kishineff [illegible] the emigration of Russian Jews to Canada. They are endeavoring to persuade the trustees of the Hirsch Fund to accept this remedy.

New Zealand's Scheme

London, May 19.—Rt. Hon. R. J. He asserts that New Zealand meat can be sold in England at cost price, and that English butchers and consumers will thereby learn its merits. Similar proposals were formerly made on behalf of Canada, but were abandoned as unworkable, owing to the [illegible]

TWO-TEN OIL CO.

of Boulder, Colorado.

Capital Stock, 1,500,000 shares. In Treasury, 500,000 shares

TRANSFER OFFICE, BRISTOL, CONN.

This Company has a perpetual lease on 20 acres of proven oil land in SECTION NINE (9) of the Boulder district, and all the section and the immediate vicinity have the best and largest number of producing wells in the entire district.

Our Well No. 1 came in, in January and is now pumping and piping Oil regularly to the Refinery.

The Directors have decided to put down well No. 2 at once and they now offer a block of the Treasury stock for the next 30 days at

10 Cents per Share, after that price will be advanced.

[illegible] a 15 barrel well will pay over 100 per cent. profit upon [illegible]

This is no longer a speculation for we have proven that oil is here in paying quantities, with two wells pumping we can now pay dividends, and every well we put down increases our earning capacity.

This is a business proposition, managed by business men. For further information and subscriptions to stock, address,

STOCK MARKETS

[illegible]

New York, May [illegible] The [illegible] anticipated by Monday's letter arrived on Tuesday. It [illegible] stocks from now on would be a purchase [illegible] on each and every small [illegible] in the last few days of declining [illegible] [illegible] resistance to the declining tendency, and the market indication [illegible] that the industrial stocks [illegible] should be bought. We specially favor [illegible] Gas below 101, copper below [illegible] and the [illegible] and steel issues. The continually growing surplus of steel and its steadily large [illegible] makes it unusually attractive at present prices. The long continuous six per cent. dividends records of the Peoples Gas Co. of Chicago, warrants its favorable consideration [illegible] par. We are of the opinion that [illegible] Peoples Gas is [illegible] investment that ever before in the history of the Company. It is well to bear in mind that the Company enjoys the absolute lighting monopoly of the second largest city in the United States, and [illegible] fast, if not faster than any other American city.

Considering [illegible] selling eight per cent [illegible] above 100, Peoples Gas at [illegible] par is [illegible] by comparison. A dividend record of over twelve years should be a sufficient guarantee of its future continuance. The stock is down over twenty-five points from its best price, and its past record bears out the conclusion that it is always good to buy when selling around par, at which price the dividends pay its [illegible] so it costs [illegible] holders nothing to carry the stock.

Railways look as if bottom prices had been made for them. The heavy preponderance of [illegible] selling points to the conclusion. It is conceded generally that prices are low [illegible] stocks should [illegible] bought.

HAVE TROUBLE GETTING WORK

Englishmen Find a Poor Market for [illegible] Labor

Toronto, May 21—Either the demand for labor is grossly exaggerated or the manufacturers, farmers and general employers are somewhat fastidious in their choice of hands. According to reports given out with [illegible] [illegible] they arrive, with no other apparent result than to whet the appetite of the employer. But the fact cannot be gainsaid that many of the English immigrants reaching Toronto find much trouble in securing employment, and that a score or two of them are to be seen loafing around the Union Station, while others are wandering aimlessly along the city streets.

Several cases of real hardship have already resulted among the recent arrivals. Some plasterers and carpenters who came here two days ago have been unable to get work because of the trouble in the building trades, and they have [illegible] [illegible] given to understand that jobs awaited them at Brantford, but their funds are run out and they are stranded.

Three families of [illegible] from Stepney, East London, have also been unable to get anything to do. They [illegible] with [illegible] child of two years, and a baby of four months died during the ocean voyage. Their dull, listless eyes, with their gloomy sadness, appeal to one strangely. Mr. Parser, who is in charge of the Ontario Immigration Office, says these families were brought out by a charitable organization who sent them here from Montreal to get them off its hands. All he wants to place [illegible] to [illegible] [illegible] still waiting for an employer are almost [illegible] [illegible] should be very desirable men. But [illegible] the farmers and the manufacturers are hanging out for experienced hands and continue to shout across the water [illegible] laborers. Perhaps it is only natural they want the best.

The Rhodes Scholarships

London, May 2—The trustees of the Rhodes [illegible] are considering favorably a scheme to assist certain colleges [illegible] to train boys and girls for colonial life. To many people this seems a wiser way of spending the Rhodes millions than by filling Oxford with American students.

BODILY WEAKNESS

A Distracting Condition That is Permanently Cured by Ferrozone A Pleasant Remedy in Tablet Form to be Taken After Each Meal.

All fagged out ideas come as slow as molasses in January. You think of things just a minute or so too late. Snap is gone and the bouyancy and strength that makes life a pleasure, that's gone too.

The doctor would say that you are run down, and you don't eat or digest enough. Your stomach requires some aid, and probably your digestion needs a bracer. The blood should have phosphorus and iron to strengthen and purify it.

Now Ferrozone is a wonderful blood maker and nerve stimulant. It is really a food for the blood, nerves and vital energies and will improve your run down condition in a very short time.

Ferrozone will make you strong and capable of doing a heavy day's work without fatigue. It is a marvellous remedy and does marvellous things as the following testimonial proves.

"After my baby was born I was left in a weak, sickly condition, totally unfit for a mother's household duties. I was excitable and nervous, and trifling things bothered me very much. I somehow would not gain strength, although I took malt extracts and tonics all the time. A lady friend recommended Ferrozone which I used with splendid results. The first box helped quite a little, and when I had taken six boxes my former health, ruddy cheeks and good spirits were fully restored."

You can't spend 50c. to a better advantage than on a box of Ferrozone and the sooner you get Ferrozone the sooner you will get well. Don't accept a substitute, but insist on your druggist supplying the genuine Ferrozone which sells for 50c. a box, or three boxes for $1.25 By mail from N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont

A New Elevator

The management of the Central Milling Company are to be congratulated not only on the success they have already attained, but on the enterprise they are shewing in erecting a new elevator to acomodate their rapidly growing trade. They have one of the best equipped flour mills in the Dominion, and their product is second to none in the world.

A Difficult Feat

It is a difficult matter to sail under the C.P.R. bridge, which is about 10 feet above the water, in a canoe with an 11 foot sail mast. This feat, however, was attempted on Tuesday afternoon, and it wasn't a good day for swimming either. Fortunately, the Ontario Bank staff are mostly expert swimmers. The result of this effort should be a Warren to others not to attempt it.

For some time a feeling of unrest has existed amongst some of the employees of the Cordage Company. It is expected that the differences will be arranged today.

THE BODY FOUND

Remains of Young Lennox, who was Drowned Near Lakefield

Yesterday the body of young Lennox, who was drowned while fishing for suckers a week ago last Saturday, was recovered. The body was found by some of McDonald's men, floating in the river above No. 4 Dam. It was taken to Lakefield and interred.

A DRIVER'S STRIKE

Nine of Mr. Robert H. Leary's Men Quit Work

On Tuesday morning Mr. R. H. Leary's men quit work in a body, at least they did not show up when the hour for starting the day's work arrived. Later on, they fyled into the office, and the spokesman intimated the cause of the grievance, which was the employment of a man who was offensive to some of the employes. It was stated that this man was put on for one day only, in order to help over a rush.

When seen by The Times yesterday Mr. Leary said that the men were all back to work again—except one or two. These he didn't want around him as they were agitators. So far as he knows his employes have no grievances, as he always pays his men good wages and uses them well.

As fine a collection of photos as anyone would wish to see are on exhibition at the fine studio of Mr. Geo. E. Whiten, Hunter street. Another Pioneer Gone

It is with much regret that we record the death of Mrs. E. Sullivan at the House of Providence on Tuesday afternoon, after a prolonged illness. The deceased lady was in her 80th year, and was well and favorably known throughout the county. She leaves behind a family of three daughters. The funeral will take place from the home of her son-in-law, Mr. Edward Flaherty, 710 Water street, this morning at 10.30 a.m., to the Ennismore cemetery.

District Convention

The Annual Convention of the Peterborough District, W. M. S., will be held in Charlotte street Methodist church this afternoon, commencing at 10 a.m. There will also be an afternoon session at 2 p.m. The day sessions will be devoted to discussions of Missionary work and the general interests of the Society. Mrs. H. C. Platt, President of the Bay of Quinte Branch, is expected to be present. The evening meeting at 8 p.m., to which the public are generally invited, is expected to be of unusual interest. An excellent programme has been arranged, including addresses by Rev. J. P. Wilson, Mrs. (Rev.) A. R. Campbell, and Mrs. H. L. Platt. Special music will be given by the choir of the church, and Mr. and Mrs. Killin-Keough.

SURPRISED HIM

Doctor's Test of Pure Food

A doctor in Kansas experimented with his boy in a test of food, and gives the particulars. He says: "I naturally watch the effect of different foods on patients.

"My own little son, a lad of four, had been ill with lung fever and during his convalescence did not seem to care for any kind of food.

"I knew something of Grape-Nuts and its rather fascinating flavor and particularly of its nourishing and nerve building powers, so I started the boy on Grape-Nuts and found from the first dish that he liked it.

"His mother gave it to him steadily and he began to improve at once. In less than a month he had gained about eight pounds and soon became so well and strong we had no further anxiety about him.

"An old patient of mine, 73 years old, came down with serious stomach trouble and before I was called he got so weak he could eat almost nothing, and was in a serious condition. He had, himself, tried almost every kind of food for the sick without avail.

"I immediately put him on Grape-Nuts with good, rich milk and just a little pinch of sugar. He exclaimed when I came next day 'Why doctor I never ate anything so good or that made me feel so much stronger.' I am pleased to say that Grape-Nuts cured him, but he had to stick to it for two or three weeks, then he began to branch out a little with rice or an egg or two. He got entirely well in spite of his almost hopeless condition. He gained 22 pounds in two months, which at his age is remarkable.

I could quote a list of cases where Grape Nuts has worked wonders." This doctor's name will be given by the Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich., on application.

A COMING STRIKE

The Medical Men are the Next to be Heard From it is Said

It is rumored around town that the local pill tossers are contemplating a strike. This time it is a strike for lower pay. There are two classes of physicians, it would appear; the class who ask what they think they are worth, and the class which takes what it can get. The regulars call the other fellows "scabs," and in revenge for cheap lodge work, factory work, at wholesale, bargain-day, fire-sale prices (with yearly contracts on the Chinese plan thrown in) by their cut-under companions, are likely to offer to do the lodge work, factory work, &c., at junk prices. This would mean a permanent lowering of the price of physic. It would then be cheap as well as nasty. Lay in your winter supply at once. If tenders are put in, as we understand, for factory and lodge work we may expect to see lively times amongst the medical fraternity.

BOARD OF HEALTH

Met Yesterday Morning—Two Hours of Talk Led Up to Action

A meeting of the local Board of Health was held yesterday morning in the Town Clerk's Office, at which there were present Mr. Robert Neill, chairman, and Messrs. G. M. Roger, Wm. Eyres, and Dr. McNulty, besides Dr. Bingham, Medical Health Officer; G. I. Rossel, Sanitary Inspector, and Mr. S. R. Armstrong, Secretary of the Board. The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

A communication from Dr. Bryce, the Provincial Medical Health Officer, re the power of a Board of Health in closing unsanitary wells.

After considerable discussion it was moved by Dr. McNulty, and seconded by Mr. Eyres, that this Board close four wells which are in an unsanitary condition.

On motion of Mr. Eyres, seconded by the chairman, it was resolved that the following accounts be paid:

Municipal World	$1 00
Thos. Williams	0 60
Bell Telephone Co	0 65
Grace E. Reid	36 60
Maggie Robinson	33 14
John C. Wood	32 00
Dominion Express Co	0 45

On motion of the chairman, seconded by Mr. Eyres, it was resolved that the following accounts be received and referred to the Sanitary Inspector to report:

Nicholls Hospital	$61 80
L. Maud Davis	90 85
J. J. Turner & Sons	21 75
R. Hicks & Co	2 29
J. J. Turner & Sons	11 60
Ormond & Walsh	4 95

It was moved by Mr. Eyres, seconded by Dr. McNulty, that the Mayor be requested to call a meeting of the Town Council on Tuesday evening next to confer with this Board with respect to letters from both hospitals regarding contagious diseases.—Carried.

After some further discussion the Board adjourned.

A GOOD PERFORMANCE

To the Editor of The Times:

Sir—While the entertainment on Tuesday evening in the opera house, under the auspices of All Saints' Girls' Guild, was a complete success in point of merit, it is to be regretted that so small an audience turned out to greet the principal attraction in the person of E. Pauline Johnston, of world wide fame. While this was owing in a measure to numerous counter attractions and inadequate publicity, yet one cannot fail to be impressed with the want [illegible] and the reflection it implies. Descended from the great Mohawk Chieftan on one side, and inheriting the literary talents of the Howells' on the other, one cannot wonder that Miss Johnson should possess the grandeur of the one and the genius of the other. It is with a feeling akin to pride that all loyal Canadians honor Miss Johnston. The intensity of her love for her native land and loyalty to the British Empire finds expression in such of her poems as "Canadian Born" and "The Riders of the Plains" while her poetic genius is reflected in them all. There is nothing that can compare with her recitations since the days of Mrs. Scott-Siddons. Her genius in this respect is seen to the best advantage in reciting her own poems. Perhaps those which particularly impressed the writer were "The Song My Paddle Sings" and "Legend of Qu'Appelle." Her versatility, her fine physique and presence, combined with magnetic force and all tempered with ease and grace, proclaim her a fine type of womanhood and one of the foremost Canadains of to-day.

Ottawa, May 20—The Department of Marine and Fisheries has received $400 conscience money. It came in a letter from St. John's, Newfoundland in which it was intimated that the payment was in connection with fishery licenses.

Weather Notes

Fine and decidedly warm.

All Quiet at Winnipeg

Winnipeg, Man., May 19. — There seems no likelihood of a strike among street railway employes. The men feel their number are too small, but the increase in wages made by the company on May 1 has allayed the feeling of unrest. Some may feel the increase was not enough and there may be efforts for a sympathetic strike later, but this is improbable.

THE MAN IN ARMOR

Was no match for the microbe. Giants he might slay but this microscopic organism defied him, and in many a campaign more men were destroyed by camp diseases than by the enemy's sword.

The one way to arm against microbic disease is to keep the blood pure. Impure blood both breeds and feeds disease.

The signs of impure blood are easy to read. Pimples, boils and eruptions generally proclaim the blood to be impure. Scrofulous sores and swellings, salt-rheum, eczema, etc., are other signs of a corrupt condition of the blood.

Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery purifies the blood and cures diseases caused by the blood's impurity. It cures scrofulous sores, boils, pimples, eczema and other defiling and disfiguring diseases.

"It gives me great pleasure to express my faith in the virtue of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery," writes Mr. Ezekiel Floro, of Graytown, Ottawa Co., Ohio. "I suffered everything for two years with humor on my face, which baffled the skill of some of the most noted physicians. Was at once advised to go to the hospital; was doctored there for three months without success. Came home discouraged. Then began to doctor with a 'chemist.' He also failed to help me. Then I began Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, with no faith whatever in it. Did it only to please my wife, but I am happy to tell you that after taking five bottles I am entirely cured."

FREE. Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of customs and mailing only. Send 31 one-cent stamps for the book in paper covers, or 50 stamps for the cloth-bound volume. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

—Mr. David Conroy has been awarded the contract for sodding the grounds around the lift lock, and is rushing the work with great speed. The job seems to have fallen to the right man, as the appearance of the work done is very creditable to him.

CANADA A COUNTRY WORTH FIGHTING FOR

That is Sir Frederick Carrington's Opinion of the Canadian Dominion

A SPLENDID TRIBUTE TO CANADIAN TROOPS

The Famous Officer Says the Canadian Troops Were the Finest Under His Command

Montreal, May 22— Major-General Sir Frederick Carrington is at the Windsor. The distinguished soldier, accompanied by Lady Carrington, arrived from Vancouver last night, after a pleasure tour of the east.

Sir Frederick left England on December 18 last, and has since visited Gibraltar, Marseilles, Cairo, Aden Ceylon, Penang, Singnapore, Hong Kong, Osaka and Yokohama. He reached the Pacific coast on April 21, and subsequently visited Victoria and Vancouver. He came direct to Montreal from Vancouver.

This is Sir Frederick Carrington's first visit to Montreal. He said to a Star reporter today that he had been wonderfully impressed with what he had seen of Canada on his journey eastward from the coast. "To my mind," he said, "there is no comparison whatever to be made between this country and South Africa. Canada is a country worth fighting for. South Africa is nearly a desert waste with the one redeeming feature of great mineral wealth. The latter must give out eventually, and there is nothing more as far as South Africa is concerned.

"Would you say something of the Canadian battery under your command during the war?" Sir Frederick was asked.

A FINE BODY OF MEN.

"I never handled a finer body of men in all my life," was the reply. "They were always keen and extremely handy men to handle. As you will doubtless remember I was in command of the forces despatched to Rhodesia, slightly north of the immediate theatre of activity. The Canadian battery in my force, I believe, included Major Hudon, as one of its officers.

"When I reached Cape Town the Canadians were stationed some distance away. They were telegraphed for. After marching all night and all day they reached Cape Town just before the steamer for Beira left way they got their guns and horses on board the steamer was splendid to witness. On reaching Beira we went into camp near Salisbury. The problem was how to get them to Buluwayo, so that they might take the train to Mafeking. There was merely a trail between Salisbury and Buluwayo, and we had to commission a coach service consisting of mules and broken down coaches belonging to an old Dutchman, named Zeederberg, who was friendly to the British troops. The men were packed in the coaches like herrings in a box, and it has always been a mystery to me that they ever got through to Mafeking at all. The hardships of that trip over the rough trail, occupying a fortnight's time, must have been termendous.) However, they got through, and took part in the closing scenes connected with the seige."

MR. CHAMBERLAIN'S VISIT.

When questioned as to the effect of Mr. Chamberlain's visit to South Africa, Sir Frederick merely remarked that it should have a good effect."

In Japan Sir Frederick took in the Osaka Exhibition. "It was a good exhibition as far as those things go, but I don't care much for those things," was his criticism.

When asked to express an opinion on Mr. Chamberlain's speech on prepreferential trade, Sir Frederick said he had not had an opportunity of reading the speech in full, and was therefore unable to say anything about it.

The distinguished soldier and Lady Carrington sail from Montreal on the Lake Champlain on June 4. The remainder of the visit will be spent in sightseeing in the vicinity, and Quebec. Sir Frederick is an enthusiastic angler and hopes to have an opportunity of trying his skill and luck before leaving Montreal. "I am immensely pleased with Canada," were his farewell words.

OLD PAUL KRUGER

Friends of the Old Man Meet Him as He Passes Through Paris

Paris, May 22—Former President Kruger arrived here today from Mentone on his way to Holland, and received a sympathetic welcome from a small crowd of intimate firends who boarded his train at the railway station. The women of the party presented the Boer statesman with many boquets, and Mr. Kruger made a brief speech of thanks. He said he expected to return to France next year. Mr. Kruger spoke in a strong voice and seemed to be in fairly good health.

Must Go Slow in Cities

Toronto, Ont., May 22—The Municipal Committee passed a bill yesterady, restricting the rate at which automobiles may run in cities, towns and villages to 7 miles an hour. The friends of the automobile fought hard for a 10-mile rate, and said that 7 was unbearably slow. A speed of 15 miles in the country is allowed.

MILLIONS FOR THE WEST

Pulp Industries for British Columbia to Spend Large Sums

Vancouver, May 22—Two English companies have interested themselves in the manufacture of pulp in British Columbia. One has bought out the limits of a local concern, which contains 30 miles of spruce. This company is known as Oriental pulp Company. The other one has bought out some 35 square miles of timber, known as the Island Power Co's Reserve. The two companies will spend $3,000,000 to establish these industries.

Turks Beyond Control

Salonica, Turkey, May 22—The long list of recent deliberate murders in the Vilayet of Monastir, with a preponderance of Bulgarian victims, indicates, it is asserted, that the Turks are getting beyond control. Out of twenty-one officially admitted murders, fifteen Bulgarians were among the victims. In any cases the bodies were mutilated. One man murdered by Turks had his eyes torn out, his face burned, and his tongue cut out.

THE FIRST PARLIAMENT

Sir Arthur Lawley the Lieut-Governor Delivers His Address

Pretoria, May 22—The first British Transvaal Parliament was opened in the Raadsaal today by Sir Arthur Lawley, the Lieutenant-Governor of the Transvaal. The Chamber was filled by those present, including the military officials, the judges, the clergy and the civil authorities. After the members had been sworn in, the Lieutenant-Governor delivered his inaugural address.

Government Printing

Ottawa, May 21.—A bill is to be introduced in the Commons to provide that the printing for the Government railways, which is done in the Maritime Provinces, shall be performed at a cost not exceeding customary and fair commercial rates for similar work supplied in similar quantitie. The same bill will establish a standard rate of wages at the Government Printing Bureau, which is to be the same as that prevailing in Toronto and Montreal.

MR. S. H. BLAKE, K.C., STRONGLY DENOUNCES HON. MR. STRATTON

Evidence in the Gamey Investigation Under Dissection, Whole Cabinet Attacked, All are Equally Blameworthy--No String to $1,200

Toronto, May 21.—Argument was commenced in the Gamey case to-day, Mr. Blake leading.

THE CASE OF THE $1,200.

Mr. E. A. A. DuVernet first addressed the court with regard to the $1,200 asked for by the Commissioners. Mr. DuVernet said the position his client, Mr. Gamey, took, was that he was anxious to have the money taken out of his hands and delivered to the proper persons. To that end he was willing to deposit a marked check, payable to Sullivan, for the amount with the court, but he asked for a formal order protecting him from future prosecution on the subject. He had information that Sullivan's claims had been assigned to a third party, and that it would be pressed as soon as these proceedings were over.

The Chancellor said there were three things perfectly clear. First, there could be no litigation over corrupt money; second, Sullivan had denied on oath all knowledge of the money; and third, if the money was paid into the court, it could only be finally disposed of by the House. As to the money being paid to Sullivan, that was out of the question.

The $1,200 is accordingly required to be deposited with the registrar unconditionally.

SATISFIED WITH SCOPE.

Mr. Blake at the outset congratulated the court on at length seeing an end to the affair, and he quoted scripture to show his own gladness. He referred to the righteous indignation that the case had aroused and delivered a brief oration on political purity. He claimed to speak for the people of the Province and for them expressed his satisfaction at the wide scope the inquiry had taken, as practically all the evidence that had been tendered had been accepted by the Commissioners. Mr. Blake at length questioned whether the Commissioners had power to report a finding. They might make remarks on the evidence, but not a finding.

Chief Justice Falconbridge asked of what nature the remarks might be.

"Such as saying whether a witness' evidence seemed reputable or not," answered Mr. Blake.

"Something like the charge of a jury," said the Chief Justice.

"Yes" said Mr. Blake.

The narrowness of the Government [illegible] to October 23, according to Mr. Stratton's evidence only 1—was dwelt on. This was the motive of the crime, argued Mr. Blake. The situation had worked out in this wise. A seat wanted. The man who held the seat approached. The discussion of terms. The terms accepted. The protest withdrawn. And so much of the patronage as was possible to be given at that time was given. "An absolute and distinct bargain made and carried out," said the counsel, adding that he was not dealing with the money question at this point, but would reserve that for another branch of the argument. He was dealing now with only that portion which was so clear that he who runs may read.

There was no use now in trying to minimise the fact that Mr. Gamey had been elected as a straight Conservative. On July 14 an attempt had been made to unseat Mr. Gamey because he was a Conservative.

"Who made the approach is immaterial," said Mr. Blake. "If Mr. Gamey made the approach, did the Government say, 'Mr. Gamey, we spurn your support at the price of wrongdoing?' No, their question was 'What is your price?' Are constituencies to be bartered like logs or are we to retain some show of decency?" continued Mr. Blake.

Referring to the letter of September 10, written by Mr. Stratton, signed by Mr. Gamey, and sent to the Premier, Mr. Blake argued that the first clause, to the effect that Mr. Gamey would support the Government, represented what the Government wanted. A clause near the end asking that he be treated as if elected to support the Government, represented the price paid. Mr. Blake touched upon the October 27 letter, practically a copy of the other.

The the Globe interview. Why was the interview published? It had been said that Center Bruce and North York bye-elections were pending. But why didn't they publish the two letters they had? "Because they daren't," thundered Mr. Blake. "Because all the public would see that the constituency of Manitoulin had been sold. It was necessary to tone these letters down, and the interview was prepared. And what a solemn farce it is."

Mr. Blake argued that these three documents showed that there had been a bargain.

On October 4 the protest had been dropped. There was no doubt that Mr. Gamey had been alarmed about it from August 7, and Mr. Blake made numerous references to the evidence to prove this point. He recalled the midnight visit of Captain Sullivan to Mr. Gamey's house. "Captain Sullivan will pardon me if I call him the old man of the sea," said Mr. Blake. "He clings marvellously."

This visit of Sullivan's occurred after the consummation of the Shannon timber deal, in which he got a limit for $250 and sold it for $9,000. "A man who can get such large concessions from a Government will work for them," argued the counsel.

Mr. Blake took up Mr. Aylesworth's evidence. He imputed to Mr. Stratton the motive of trying to get a respectable man mixed up in the affair to give tone to the transaction. But Mr. Aylesworth had seen that the transaction was an improper one. "He couldn't give what Mr. Gamey wanted, and Mr. Gamey had to go direct to the Minister to get it," said Mr. Blake.

"I think I suggested a letter," quoted Mr. Blake from Mr. Aylesworth's evidence. There was the first inkling of a letter. The argument was that Mr. Stratton had tried to get Gamey to go to Aylesworth's office by reason of his petition, and once there, the letter was to be obtained. Mr. Aylesworth's interview with Gamey showed how completely the question of this protest was in the hands of the Government. Fraser had never been consulted at all. This was not a business interview, Mr. Aylesworth had said. "How perfectly true," exclaimed Mr. Blake. "And how much more did Mr. Stratton, who had been dealing with the man, know that?" Mr. Blake referred in passing to the turning up of the letter that Mr. Aylesworth had not accepted in the Premier's private drawer.

IMPLICATING OTHER MINISTERS

The transaction was known to the other members of the Cabinet. Four members at Council had been told, and others the following morning, and the "bought and sold vote had been found in the Premier's [illegible]." Mr. Blake referred in his sternest tones to Mr. Stratton's account of a jocular discussion with his colleagues regarding Mr. Gamey. It seemed to Mr. Blake that it was no matter of laxity, but an exceptionally grave one. But some men sank in the pit of political exigency.

It was no wonder that Dr. Struthers and Dr. Arthur, who seemed to be free of political ties, had advised Gamey against going over to the Government, telling him his reputation would be gone.

Mr. Blake next took up some of the correspondence between Gamey and Stratton. They had been strangers up to the 10th of September, after that bosom friends. What had united them? On September 29 Mr. Gamey writes "My Dear Stratton," asking for the appointment of Thomas Fletcher, J.P. Mr. Stratton did not reply, "Who are you?" but had replied by saying that he had referred the recommendation to Mr. Gibson, asking him to make the appointment. Mr. Blake read between the lines that these letters showed the reality of the bargain that existed.

On the 2nd of October Mr. Stratton wrote to Mr. Gamey asking if he would approve of an appointment as returning officer for the referendum. The letter added that the reply would be handed to the Premier, and from this Mr. Blake argued that all the Ministers knew of the arrangement with Mr. Gamey. The Attorney-General must have been consulted about the appointments, and Mr. Stratton had sworn to discussing Gamey with his colleagues. Mr. Blake cared not whether the conversation was jocular or not.

On October 7 Mr. Gamey wrote recommending the sheriff as R.O., and Mr. Stratton's secretary replied, stating that his letter had been transferred to the Premier. "Of course he knew about it; he had Mr. Gamey's letter on September 10 in his pigeon hole," said Mr. Blake.

On November 4 Mr. Gamey wrote asking a loan of $2,000. "What's the use of having a friend if you don't make use of him," commented Mr. Blake. Mr. Gamey doubtless understood that there would be many transactions with Mr. Stratton, and that there would be a straightening up later. Mr. Stratton had not replied to the letter. From this it was argued that there must have been an understanding on monetary matters between the two, else Mr. Strattton would have written that he didn't understand what Gamey meant. Mr. Gamey's requests had continued without interruption. Regarding Swansea, the Attorney-General had written to Mr. Farwell, saying he would like to make the appointment if he could. On January 3 the inspector of roads had written questioning the expediency of giving Gamey patronage.

On January 27 Sullivan's telegram had been sent to Gamey to come to town. The following day Mr. Stratton had informed Mr. Hammond that Gamey was expected in town. "I don't know how he knew," said Mr. Blake sarcastically.

ADVERTISE IN THE TIMES

THE FRENCH SHORE IS A LIVE QUESTION

Present Conditions in Newfoundland are Almost Intolerable

ENGLAND MUST NOW ACT WITHOUT DELAY

Britain Must Come to Terms with France Before Expiration of the Present Treaty which Has Only a Few Months to Run

New York, May 22—The New York Times says the annual prosecution of the Newfoundland fishermen residing on the treaty coast of the island is now recommencing. From the time the fishery opens in May, until it closes, in October, the seaboard in question is patrolled by three British and three French warships who harry and dragoon the wretched settlers in a manner unequalled in any part of the world today, except in Finland. At present two cruisers, one of each flag, are anchored in Bay St George, the principal bait-procuring inlet on the disputed littoral. Their purpose is to compel the British settlers to supply bait fishes to the French at the latter's own price and before any others are served. They are not allowed to charge the French more than $1 a barrel, and usually have to be satisfied with 40 to 60 cents, and even though American, Canadian and local fishing vessels are there and willing to give $2 and $3 a barrel for the same bait, the warships' boats will not allow the coastfolk to supply these until all the French fishermen have been satisfied.

The colony has chafed for years under these iniquitous restrictions and only last month the Legislature rebelled against renewing again for the British Government the modus vivendi under which the territory is policed. The casting vote alone of the presiding officer saved the measure from defeat, and the imperial authorities were notified that this was the last time the colonial Parliament would assist in providing the means whereby its own people could be ill-used as they are. In 1898 Mr. Chamberlain appointed a royal commission to investigate the whole matter, with a view to effecting a settlement of it with France by arbitration, purchase or an equivalent cession of territory elsewhere. Both powers professed a desire to remove the dispute from the list of international embroglios, so that Newfoundlanders might be enabled to exercise their sovereignty rights on their own soil, which the French claims now make impossible, seeing that a fisherman settled there may be deported with all his belongings and without redress, if he "interferes" with a visiting French [illegible] trawler, the mere fishing in waters which the Frenchman wishes to occupy, being construed into such "interference."

It is difficult for even the most ardent peace-at-any-price advocate to excuse the conduct of successive British Ministries toward this, the oldest British colony, and but for the Boer war and its resulting difficulties, the indignation of the Legislature and people of Newfoundland at the supineness of imperial diplomatists would have provoked action compelling a crisis in statecraft not inferior to any in recent times.

London, May 22.—An official War Office despatch from Aden, Arabia, under yesterday's date, gives details of the desperate encounter which took place at Burrilli, Somaliland, May 4, between an Abyssinian force operating in conjunction with the British against the Mad Mullah, and a large force of the latter's Dervishes.

After a hand-to-hand fight lasting forty-five minutes the Dervishes were driven off with the loss of three hundred men killed and two hundred wounded. The Abyssinians had twenty-one men killed and ten wounded. Subsequently, the Abyssinians raided the wells north-west of Burrilli, and captured several prisoners. The latter said the Mullah was at Ubertali.

The defeat of the Mad Mullah's Dervishes is the first blow struck by the Abyssinian contingent which is co-operating with Brigadier-General Manning's advance. The Abyssinians number 10,000, are mostly armed with modern weapons and accompanied by some British officers. The scene of the Burrilli fight is 120 miles south-west of the scene of the disaster to the British force under Colonel Plunkitt, April 17, when the Colonel, all the British officers, and practically his entire force of 170 men were annihilated by the Dervishes, and is 200 miles from General Manning's present quarters at Bohotle.

Ubertall, where the Mad Mullah is now reported to be, is 20 miles from Gerlogubi, where, under the original plan, the British and Abyssinian [illegible]

RUSSIA'S MASSARES, APPALLING DETAILS OF THE BESARABIAN HORRORS

American Eyes Open as to the True "Civilization" Which Exists in Russia

The Total Damage Caused is Estimated at 80,0000 Francs.

Paris, May 20.—M. Biquet, Secretary of the Alliance Israelite, has confirmed on the strength of a letter received this morning from St. Petersburg, the report that 4,000 Jewish families have been ruined in the Kishineff massacre; that the dead number 63, and the very seriously wounded over 30, while a great number have been injured more or less seriously, chiefly by blows on the head. M. Bright was even more positive than his President, M. Leven, in accusing the Russian police of being accomplices in the massacres, and said that before the riots began the police obliged the Jews to remain in houses, thus isolating them in groups of a dozen at most so that they fell an easier prey to the murderous populace. The total damage is estimated at 8,000,000 francs, and the destitution of the sufferers is appalling. Subscriptions for their relief, however, are flowing in. M. Biquet was almost emphatic in his denunciation of the attitude of the Russian Government.

CRIME AGAINST CIVILIZATION.

New York, May 20.—Oscar Straus, who was twice United States Minister to Turkey, gives the following views regarding the relations between the United States and Russia.

"No one can read without a shudder of horror the reports of the fiendish outrages at Kishineff on April 19, 20 and 21, upon the unoffending Jewish population of that city by a mob which was officially incited and officially protected.

"The London Times states that the number of Jews killed—men, women and children—was between sixty and seventy and the number of those seriously injured—men, women and children—is estimated at about 500. Most of the Jewish workshops, stores and houses were ransacked and pillaged, and the greater part of a community of thirty thousand has been rendered homeless and penniless. These crimes have been committed in Christian Russia, by a fanatical rabble, supported and participated in by Russian officials.

"This barbaric holocaust, which has taken place in a populous city of one hundred and forty thousand inhabitants, appeals for redress, not to the Jews throughout the world, but to the civilized world, not to those professing the religion of the slaughtered, but to those professing the religion of the slaughterers. It is a crime against civilization and Christianity as well.

"Whenever Russian horrors reach American ears, we constantly hear about the long standing friendship between Russia and the United States. If we look beneath the surface, which is now necessary, when Russia is concerned, we will find that, underlying courtesies to our naval officers and profuse diplomatic professions of friendship will be found a purpose to accentuate hostility toward England.

"The Russia of to-day has nothing in common with the United States and she would, if she could, cut our Declaration of Independence out of existence and wipe liberty from the face of the globe. The graphic forecast of her policy by England's greatest diplomatist, Stratford Canning, is verified in our day: 'Rome of old extended its sway by conquest, but wherever its eagles flew the arts of civilization followed. The Russian bird of prey has no such commission. It turns, indeed, towards the sun, but the shadow of its wings is blighting and more desolation closes upon its flight.'

"Let not a false or misplaced gratitude check the humane sympathies of America for the despaired Finns, the persecuted Christians and the oppressed and massacred Jews."

Britain and Germany Correspond Regarding the Canadian Tariff

London, May 21.—Replying to a question in the House of Commons to-day, the Under-Foreign Secretary, Lord Cranborne, admitted that communications were passing between the Foreign Office and Germany regarding the latter's imposition of differential duties against England.

The Under-Secretary declined to furnish information as to whether the Foreign Office had indicated the possibility of Great Britain retaliating by imposing special duties on German imports into the United Kingdom, saying he could not make any further statement at present.

A GROWING ANTI-RUSSIAN FEELING IN ENGLAND

Indignation Over the Massacre of the Jews

BRITAIN SHOULD ACT

This is the Opinion of Many in the Country

London, May 22—Public indignation against Russia is flaming forth in the newspapers throughout the country, and mass meetings are fanning the fire. The Kishenoff massacre is the principal text of the protest, though Muscovite tyranny in Finland and trickery in China are angrily denounced. The Jewish societies are taking a prominent part in the agitation, but Christian activity and feeling are even more pronounced. On Thursday night the society of the Maccabees will assemble, to proclaim its resentment and adopt measures for arousing indignation of the Jewish world against the St. Petersburg Government, where the primary responsibility for the horrors in South Russia is supposed to rest. Park agitators are helping to foment the excitement. Some uneasiness is manifested in official quarters lest the squall should extend to Parliament and cause the Government additional annoyance on the subject of the Russian proceedings. The disturbance comes most inopportunely since the King and his advisers, taking advantage of the comparatively placid state of opinion in the great European nations have been contemplating a policy that might lead to more modest programmes of military and naval expansion.

CANADA AND CARNEGIE

Mayor of Port Hope Applauds the Protest of Sydney C.B.

Sydney, N. S., May 21. — Mayor Richardson has received the following telegram from E. J. W. Burton, Mayor of Port Hope, Ont.:

"I hasten to extend my full congratulations on your magnificent and patriotic stand re Carnegie. I feel I am but reiterating the sentiment of all Canadians when I state that we are under a very deep load of gratitude to you on account of your grand action. You have spoken for our Canada. Good for you."

IN COLD STORAGE FOR UNCLE SAM

The New York American's Views of this Country

SAYS WE ARE PROVINCIAL

New York Sun Thinks Britain is Doomed with Co-Operation of Her Colonies

New York, May 22—A New York American editorial says: "Mr. Carnegie's statement that Canada's only chance of a future is to throw in her lot with the United States is obviously true, yet Canada, with the expanding republic ever before her, as an example of the benefits of independence, prefers dependence, and cultivates a dwarfing jealousy and dislike of the United States. The colonist is necessarily provincial and therefore has for this great and prosperous nation an envious enmity which the rooted villager inevitably feels for the nearest big city. We can get on very well without Canada, but it has been sufficiently well proved that Canada cannot get along without us, at least, that she can get along only in a way so small that she should be ashamed of it. Her young men of brains and energy year by year, leave her and come over the line to the United States for the larger opportunities offered. Eventually, of course, Canada will come in; that will happen when we want her. Meantime she is keeping herself for us in colonial cold storage."

BRITAIN AND COLONIES.

Commenting on Mr. Chamberlain's speech at Birmingham, the New York Sun says:

"Mr. Chamberlain seemed for the first time to recognise that the mere bond of sentiment which had assured some colonial aid during the South African war could not be relied upon to furnish adequate assistance in future and graver exigencies. He allowed it to be seen that he had learned that if the vast and increasing resources of the colonies were to be made fully available in time of need for imperial defence, the colonies must be made to feel that they incomparably more to gain from commercial union with the Mother Country that from their present position of semi-detached autonomy or even from the status of political independence. Canadians were an instance of a politically independent people, who could hope for no preference in the British market over the inhabitants of other foreign countries, nor as a [illegible] preference today. There is no doubt Mr. Chamberlain is right in his prognosis. Whatever be the fate of England the British Empire is doomed, not today or tomorrow, but at some time perhaps not far distant, unless the upholding of it can be made a matter of vital interest [illegible]

NON-UNION LABOUR MUST BE PROTECTED

Minister of Labour Makes an Important Statement

SIR WM. MULOCK'S SPEECH

Just as Much Right to Compel a Man to Belong to a Church as to a Union

Ottawa, May 21.—While discussing the proposed bill before the Parliament dealing with labor, Sir Wm. Mulock, on behalf of the Government and people of Canada, made the following statement:

"In answer to my hon. friend from West Toronto (Mr. Clarke), I do not think it should be the part of any Board of Conciliation or arbitrators to interfere with the freedom of any citizen to do whatever he chooses to belong to a union or not to belong to a union.

"I think that to do otherwise would be an act of tyranny. You might as well stipulate that a man must not belong to a particular church or to a particular political party. I think that it would be entirely improper for us to interfere with the freedom of our citizens, and therefore I quite approve of a man's rights being preserved, and if necessary we should do so by legislation. I may say that but for this bill I would not have thought that any conciliator would have attempted, in a proposed basis of settlement, to deprive a party to a labor dispute of his right either to belong or not to belong to a union as he sees fit. In taking that general view, I believe that it is just as proper that we should protect 'non-union' as 'union' labor."

Detroit Specialist Discovers Something Entirely New for the Cure of Men's Diseases in Their Own Homes.

YOU PAY ONLY IF CURED.

Expects No Money Unless He Cures You—Method and Full Particulars Sent Free—Write for It This Very Day

A Detroit specialist who has fourteen certificates and diplomas from colleges and medical boards, has perfected a startling method of curing the diseases of men in their own homes, and so that there may be no doubt in the mind of any man that he has both the method and

DR. S. GOLDBERG.
The possessor of fourteen diplomas and certificates, who wants no money that he does not earn the ability to do as he says, Dr. S. Goldberg, the discoverer, will send the method entirely free to all men who send him their name and address. He wants to hear from men who have stricture that they have been unable to get cured, prostatic trouble, vital weakness, varicocele, lost vigor, blood poison, hydrocele, emaciation, impotence, etc. His wonderful method not only cures the condition itself, but likewise all the complications, such as rheumatism, bladder or kidney trouble, heart disease, etc.

The doctor realizes that it is one thing to make claims and another thing to back them up, so he has made it a rule not to ask for money unless he cures you, and if you are cured he feels sure that you will willingly pay him a small fee. It would seem, therefore, that it is to the best interest of every man who suffers in this way, to write the doctor confidentially and lay your case before him. He sends the method, as well as many booklets on the subject, including the one that contains the fourteen diplomas and certificates, entirely free. Address him simply Dr. S. Goldberg, 208 Woodward Avenue, Room 165, Detroit, Mich., and it will all immediately be sent you free.

This is something entirely new and well worth knowing more about. Write at once.

[illegible] OFFICE 30 Fleet St., London, E. C.

PETERBOROUGH, MAY 18, 1903.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

Land prices in Southern Manitoba have risen with a bound. Last year [illegible] acres near Pilot Mound at from $5 to $10 an acre. Others soon came, and very soon the price went up until within a few months the value increased to from $12 to $20 per acre, and now there are no farms, even unimproved, to be had at less than $12 per acre, and as high as $25 per acre has been paid. There is no danger now of prices ever falling below present values, and the general opinion of real estate men, says a Pilot Mound correspondent, is that inside of five year we will see the prices to $35 per acre, and they base their opinion on the fact that land which will produce 25 bushels No. 1 wheat per acre almost any year, and double that quantity of oats is cheap at the last named price.

E. H. Carter, secretary of the Ontario Bureau of Mines has issued a report upon peat fuel. It costs about $1 per ton to produce peat briquettes in Ontario, the report says, and after allowing a reasonable margin for profit, interest on investment, etc. it can be sold at the place of production for $3 a ton. Putting the value of the peat at two-thirds that of coal at $3 a ton, its cost would be equivalent to anthracite coal at $4.50, and at $4 per ton to anthracite at $6 per ton. "Such figures at once brings peat fuel into the economic area," the report adds, "and it may be doubted whether with the effective control now exercised by the trusts over production and sale of anthracite, we are likely to see it again drop to a lower level than $6 per ton."

Australian Protest Revived Against the Judicial Committee

London, May 21.—Hon. C. C. Kingston, Australian Minister of Customs, denounces the Judical Committee of the Privy Council as unfit to interpret Australian laws.

The Commonwealth Government is passing a bill to create a High Court for Australia.

The Judicial Committee to-day reserved judgment in the case of the City of Montreal versus the Montreal Street Railway Company, which appeals against the decision of the Court of King's Bench for Quebec on December 27, 1901, involving a dispute between the city and the company as to the cost of snow removal from streets along which the car tracks run.

BRONCHITIS

Catarrhozone cures Bronchitis of three years' standing after four Doctors Failed

A Remarkable Case

"I feel it my duty," writes Mrs. Boyd, of Leonardville, N.B., "to let you know that I have been cured of Bronchitis of three months' standing, by Catarrhozone.

"With the least change in temperature or exposure to inclement weather, I was attacked with bronchial discomfort, wheezing in the chest, hoarseness, sore throat, partial loss of voice, and stuffiness of the head. I consulted four doctors and was treated by them all without any benefit.

"Catarrhozone was strongly recommended to me by several persons whom it had benefited, and was induced to give it a good trial."

"It quickly relieved my difficult breathing, so I got the complete outfit, hard rubber inhaler, etc., and I began systematically the Catarrhozone treatment.

"In a few days the huskiness and hoarseness disappeared, and my voice became stronger. The running of the nose, and 'stuffiness of the head,' feverishness, difficult breathing, were all done away with before I had been using Catarrhozone very long.

"About six weeks' treatment was sufficient to do more for me than four doctors failed to do in three years' time. It cured me and I don't believe there is another such a remedy on earth. Its action is speedy, pleasant and permanent."

Catarrhozone is a new, scientific treatment, and is guaranteed to cure Bronchitis, Asthma, Catarrh, Cold, etc., or money refunded. It contains nothing injurious and can be used by the infant as well as by the adult.

It is both a local and a constitutional remedy. The inhaler supplies abundance of medicated air, which spreads through all the air passages, killing germ life, and healing sore spots as it goes.

The impurities in the blood are driven off by Ferrozone tablets which strengthen and build up the system to such a healthy condition that disease simply can't exist.

Catarrhozone is recommended by doctors and druggists for all respiratory diseases. It relieves quickly and cures permanently. Complete outfit costs $1.00; trial size 25c. At Druggists or N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont. Buy Catarrhozone to-day.

The following resolution was passed at a recent meeting of L.O.L. No. 321:—

"In the midst of life there is death." Whereas the great and Supreme Ruler of the universe has, in his infinite wisdom, removed from among us, one of our worthy and esteemed fellow laborers, Brother William McClure, and whereas, the long and intimate relative held with him in the faithful discharge of his duties in this society, makes it eminently befitting that we record our appreciation of him, therefore.

Resolved, that the sudden removal of such a life from our midst leaves a vacancy and shadow that will be deeply realized by all the members of this organization and will prove a serious loss to the community and public.

THE
TWO-TEN OIL CO.
of Boulder, Colorado.

Capital Stock, 1,500,000 shares. In Treasury, 500,000 shares

TRANSFER OFFICE, BRISTOL, CONN.

This Company has a perpetual lease on 20 acres of proven oil land in SECTION NINE (9) of the Boulder district, and this section and the immediate vicinity have the best and largest number of producing wells in the entire district.

Our Well No. 1 came in, in January and is now pumping and shipping Oil regularly to the Refinery.

The Directors have decided to put down well No. 2 at once, and they now offer a block of the Treasury stock for the next 30 days at

10 Cents per Share, after that price will be advanced.

It is a well known fact that a 15 barrel well will pay over 100 per cent. profit upon its cost.

This is no longer a speculation for we have proved that oil is on our ground, and we now have oil in paying quantities, with two wells pumping we can soon pay dividends, and every well we put down increases our earning capacity.

This is a business proposition, managed by business men.

Buried Gold

By FRED WHISHAW.

Author of "A Boyar of the Terrible," etc.

in tones little above a whisper. He knew by heart the exact wording of Dick Robinson's instructions and obeyed them to the letter. Not a sound came from the island.

Within half an hour both boats had safely reached the landing-place. Dick had described it well; it answered exactly to his description: a little natural harbor behind a breakwater of rocks; an ideal spot for landing from small boats. Keith blessed poor Dick's memory. "If he's as accurate as this all through," he thought, "we shall have a walkover for the gold." Dick's directions were very accurate throughout, but the gold hunt was not to prove a walkover.

There were no troubles, however, this night. Indeed, all seemed so still upon the island that the crew told one another the "Hecuba" men must have gone, gold and all, and the place was deserted.

"Or else we're on the wrong island!" someone suggested.

"There'd be lights if anyone was here," said another.

"There wouldn't, you fool," was the reply. "How'd they get any? Gas ain't laid on and where are the candles to come from, let alone matches to light 'em with? They'd have used up their stock in two years!"

"What you've got to do, lads," said Keith, "is to get some sleep before morning. We may have a good, hard day's work before us to-morrow, for all we know."

Two men were appointed to keep watch while the rest slept. They might have slept also, for no one came to molest.

"What d'you make of it, Mr. Adams?" asked the skipper. "Do they know we're here or haven't they seen us yet?"

Keith said it was easier to see an island you're looking for than a small ship that you don't expect.

"They haven't found us out, say I," Keith ended. "When they do, the place'll be like an ant-hill that's been stepped on."

But on the morrow there came with the light a deputation from the islanders who seemed in no way excited to see them.

"We saw your ship and guessed you'd land," said the spokesman. "What is it you want—water?"

"Are you one of the 'Hecuba' men?" asked the skipper of the "Penelope." The fellow winced a little.

"It don't matter much who I am," he said. "What I asked you was, whether you'd called for water. If it ain't for that nor yet for your bearings, what in thunder have you come for?"

"You go back to your village, my lad, and tell Captain Foster the skipper of the 'Penelope' wishes to see him on a matter of business," said the latter.

Presently Jake Foster, having been duly summoned, arrived on the scene.

Some of the "Penelope" men knew him, Keith among the number, and gave him good-day.

"I don't wish to appear inhospitable," said Foster, "but we ain't particular anxious for visitors here, and the sooner you've told us what you want the sooner you'll be free to go. I suppose that darned fool Robinson put you on this job. Is he with you?"

"He's dead, skipper," said Keith. "I think your two beauties murdered him, but I ain't sure. You're a nice one to send them out for to do it, upon my word."

"I wish they'd done for the lot of you before they allowed you to come here," said Foster savagely. "D'you think I don't know what you've come for? Well, see here, lads, all of you; you and that there treasure you're after won't never leave this island together. You may take your dying oath to that."

"We're sent out to fetch you back," said Keith. "You can see the captain's commission from the company if you don't believe. As for the gold, that's another matter altogether. I don't say we shan't have a word to say about that, too, mind you."

"Ah! ah! A word to say! Yes, I bet you will. Now, I tell you straight, every one of you, you've got twenty-four hours to clear out of this island. I'm dealing kindly by you. I could have shot everyone of you last night, but I'd rather give you the chance to clear, even though you admit you're a pack of thieving devils come to——"

"Stow that kind of talk, please, mate," said the "Penelope's" skipper. "We ain't thieves. The Joint Stock Bank of Southampton and London owns the gold, half and half with the underwriters, and it's them that claims it. Their clerk, Mr. Warden, is with us, and maybe he'll have a proposal to lay before you if you're civil."

"Clerk be damned," said Foster, "and you, too! He can tell his master the gold belongs to them as fished it up from the sea."

"Well, I tell you straight, we're commissioned to get it, and we mean to have it, Mr. Foster," said Keith. "And as we're actin' under orders, if you lay hands on us or if there's any shootin' it's you that's responsible, not we."

"You may tell that lying scamp, Robinson," said Foster, preparing to depart, "that if there's shootin' he'll be the first shot. That'll be when twenty-four hours is up."

"I told you Robinson's dead," said Keith.

"And I tell you you're a liar," replied Foster. "If he was dead you wouldn't never have found the island. I know his game. Dead men don't get shot at, do they? Tell him shammin' dead won't save him. Now you show your sense, all of you, and clear out. This island's private property."

"Old Jake Foster was always a bit of a bear," said Keith, laughing, as the "Hecuba's" skipper turned his broad back and beckoned his men away. "A bit short in the temper and quick with his tongue, but the climate of this island seems to've spoilt him, like, so's you wouldn't scarcely know him. Poor little Jemie'll be quite shocked when she sees her dad."

CHAPTER XVI.

Preparations for War.

"I take it, lads, that we ain't to be frightened off by threats!" said Captain Brenton, as the "Hecuba" men sauntered jauntily homewards; "does anyone think he'd rather clear within twenty-four hours?"

A chorus of hoots and whistles was the reply. Obviously the question was too ridiculous to require a further answer.

"Well, then, if we're to stay and be shot at, we must make our preparations. We must entrench ourselves in some convenient spot. And, as Mr. Adams happens to have a chart of the very place in which the 'Hecuba' chaps buried their gold, I say we can't do better than make our camp about there. Then we can dig at our leisure, and under cover, and not waste time."

This suggestion was hailed with joy.

REPLY TO CARNEGIE

Mr. Sifton's Plain Talk at London — the New Imperialism

Imperial Tariff Unity Still the Chief Topic in British Political Circles

London, May 21.—The banquet given last night by the London Chamber of Commerce, in honor of Hon. Clifford Sifton, Minister of the Interior for Canada, was a decided success. Sir Albert Rollitt, M.P., who was in Canada last year, presided, and among the guests were Lord Brassey, Lord Strathcona, Sir Gilbert Parker, M.P., Mr. C. D. Rose, M.P. Mr. Ian Malcolm, M.P., and Mr. A. Bonar Law, M.P., as well as Messrs. F. C. Wade and King, of the Canadian side of the Alaskan Commission, and Mr. W. T. R. Preston.

Mr. Sifton, who was in good form, said that Canada has come to prosperity through tribulations. After paying a tribute to the loyalty of the French-Canadians, the Minister Minister of the Interior scoffed at Mr. Andrew Carnegie's idea that Canada was bound to become part of the United States. History was full of instances of people who had fought against geography. Canada had done so in the past, and would do so in the future.

He admitted that the United States had given shocks to Canada in the past, but Canadian statesmanship had succeeded in making the Dominion entirely independent of the United States. He predicted that the Dominion was on the eve of a great expansion; in fact, he looked for an influx of 100,000 people a year into the Northwest, many of whom would come from the United States.

This was Canada's reply to Andrew Carnegie. As a matter of fact, he said he found London much more pro-American than Canada was. The Dominion was the least likely part of the Empire to be Americanized; it was her manifest destiny not to be Americanized.

Lord Brassey proposed the toast, "The meeting of the Chambers of Commerce of the Empire at Montreal, in August, 1903, and the city of Montreal," to which Lord Strathcona responded.

Mr. Sifton surprised his hearers by making no reference to Mr. Chamberlain's proposals. But Mr. Bonar Law, Parliamentary Secretary of the Board of Trade, said he regretted Mr. Fielding's reference to British attitude in his budget speech. He said that after Mr. Chamberlain's speech Mr. Fielding could no longer doubt that Canadian preference was appreciated here. Mr. Law said he did not profess to reveal Cabinet secrets, but he felt sure there was no conflict between Mr. Balfour and Mr. Chamberlain. Their speeches must have been arranged beforehand. Already 40 per cent. of the real British manufactures were exported to the colonies. The best hope for British trade lay within the Empire.

Sir Albert Rollitt, Lord Brassey and other speakers paid tribute to Canadian hospitality, as shown to the delegates of the Chamber of Commerce who visited Canada last year.

Lord Rosebery's Speech

London, May 21.—Lord Rosebery, speaking yesterday in reference to Mr. Chamberlain's Imperial trade policy, said he doubted whether a system of reciprocal tariffs would really bind the colonies closer to the Motherland, in view of the almost irreconcilable interests involved.

Present conditions could not be modified for the better without direct colonial representation in the Government of the Motherland.

He thought that some form of representation of the colonies at West- [illegible] tariff; but the advantages of unity of the Empire might counterbalance the disadvantages.

Lord Rosebery told me recently that he considered colonial representation in the Imperial Parliament quite feasible, and said that he would gladly support such a step.

COMMENTS OF THE PRESS.

Lord Rosebery's speech is interpreted by the Daily Mail as supporting Mr. Chamberlain; others say he opposes. Certainly Lord Rosebery refused to condemn any plan of unity of the Empire before it was fully considered. The editor of the Spectator prays God in His mercy to avert this madness from the Empire, which would die at its heart.

The Morning Post says "that since free trade has given us cheap bread, we have discovered afresh that we do not live by bread alone."

The Daily Telegraph says: "We carry what free trade phylacteries we please upon our foreheads, but do not let us wear them across our eyes."

Steamship Overcrowding

London, May 21.—Mr. Labouchere's Truth received a memorial from 100 third-class British immigrants, complaining of their treatment on the voyage from Liverpool to Halifax by the Carthaginian. The Allans reply that, owing to the immense demand for passages, the newest ships were insufficient for the traffic, and other boats were necessarily pressed into the service. They show, however, that the Carthaginian was fully up to the requirements of the Board of Trade.

Truth says: Seeing how strict the Board of Trade supervision over immigration steamships is, the Allan's explanation is probably well founded. Truth's own moral is "Don't go to Canada until the rush ceases."

Lord Strathcona Coming Over

London, May 21—Lord Strathcona, who is again in the best of health, will visit Canada during July and August next in order to attend the meeting of the Chambers of Commerce of the Empire, which are to be held in Montreal.

Kruger in Paris

Paris, May 21.—Former President Kruger arrived here today from Mentone, on his way to Holland, and received a sympathetic welcome from a small crowd of intimate friends, who boarded his train at the railroad station. The women of the party presented the Boer statesman with many bouquets and Mr. Kruger made a brief speech of thanks. He said he expected to return to France next year. Mr. Kruger spoke in a strong voice, and seemed to be in fairly good health.

Montreal, May 20.—John P. Roche, for many years sporting editor of The Gazette, died this morning of cancer of the throat.

THE BARR COLONISTS

ttawaO May 21.—In his evidence before the Commons committee on Agriculture and Colonization, Mr. James Smart, Deputy Minister of the Interior, replying to questions concerning the relations between the Department and the Barr colonists, said that at the first the Government declined to reserve land, as requested by Rev. Mr. Barr, but after his return from inspecting the land the Department agreed to set aside the even numbered sections in seventeen townships on condition that he would before the 15th of February forward to the Department at Ottawa the entry fee of $10 for each homestead, together with the name of each person in the party, and on condition that Mr. Barr was not to charge the colonists anything in connection with their homesteads so far as his services were concerned. The Department insisted that the homesteads were to be absolutely free, and declined to make any reservation if Mr. Barr undertook to make any money out of the fact that he had secured the reservation. In February Mr. Barr forwarded the names of a good many more people than the seventeen townships would provide for, and more land had to be set apart. Mr. Smart attributed the success of Mr. Barr's project to the fact that he had advertised a purely British colony, and this appealed to Englishmen. In the second reservation one-fourth of the homesteads were reserved for Canadian and American settlers in order that the members of the colony might have the advice of the more experienced men. Mr. Smart did not know what commission Rev. Mr. Barr received from the steamship companies; he heard it was somewhere about $12,000; but he had no knowledge.

FRANK AGAIN DESERTED

Geologists Fear Another Landslide from Turtle Mountain

Blairmore, Alberta, May 21. — R. G. McConnell and R. W. Brock, of the Geological Survey, who have been at Frank for the past ten days making an investigation of the recent disaster for the Dominion Government, have completed their work. By observations made they ascertained that the most western peak of Turtle Mountain had moved about six inches during the period of their observations. This peak is a massive block of rock, as great in extent, if not greater, than originally fell away. It directly overhangs the town, and in falling would destroy a part, if not the whole, of what remains of the town.

Frank had been reoccupied, and business generally resumed during the last nine days, but as a result of the geologists' report, Premier Haultain posted a warning yesterday notifying all of the danger to life in remaining, and the town is again depopulated.

WAKE UP ENGLAND

British Consul at Chicago Advises British Traders

Chicago, May 21.—Captain Wyndham, British Consul at Chicago, in his annual report, just issued, says: 'Many American houses are planning to extend their export trade. With their increased manufacturing capacity, we may look for them to furnish keen competition in the United Kingdom and its colonies as well as in foreign countries.'

Among the hints contained in the report is the advice to the English merchants that the careful study of the business and manufacturing methods of the United States, and the adoption of those which may be suitable to the country where trade is another are of great importance [illegible]

Statistics are presented to show that British trade in America is at a standstill, while imports from other European countries have increased.

The report also refers to the enormous amount spent by merchants for newspaper advertising, and praises the result obtained, asserting that some concerns have doubled their business in this way.

Good for you.'

Adams Copper Mining and Refining Company's stock will do the same, as they have enormous bodies of ore already in sight.

WHEN TO INVEST

HERE ARE A FEW COPPER FACTS well worth the attention of all would-be investors: $100 invested in 1890 in the Tamarack Copper Company is now worth $782; $100 invested in 1893 in Boston & Montana Copper Company is now worth $1,896; $100 invested in 1896 in the Arnold Copper Company is now worth $1,870; $100 invested in 1893 in the Wolverine Copper Company is now worth $6,600. $100 invested in the Butte & Boston Copper Company is now worth $5,660. $100 invested in 1896 in the Calumet & Hecla Copper Company is now worth $8,650.

More money has, in recent years, been made in copper mining than in any other staple enterprise as free from the element of risk. There is nothing misleading in the statement that copper mining as a proposition is better than gold, says the San Francisco Chronicle. The most valuable minin properties in the world are copper properties.

To every purchaser of stock a specimen of ore from the Company's mines will be sent FREE.

Send your order at once before the advance, which will certainly be made in the near future. Ten per cent. discount for cash.

The Minersville Gold Mining and Milling Company

Will be sold at 15 CENTS PER SHARE. PAR VALUE, $1.00.

Full Paid, Non-Assessable and No Personal Liability.

READ THIS! This Company offers one of the safest and best investments, as its property is located in the famous Sumpter District, Baker Co., Oregon, and has for its neighbors such mines as the Bonanza, Red Boy, Eureka, North Pole, Columbia, Golconda and Cracker Oregon, which are producing from $50,000 to $100,000 each per month. The Company has three full claims, with two large veins, one sixteen feet and the other twenty-two feet at the surface, showing good gold values and strictly free milling.

The Company owns the property outright, being free from all debt and incumbrance and in order to equip the mine with modern machinery and to continue development work, a limited number of shares will be sold for a short time only at 15 cents per share, as announced above.

STOCK MARKETS

A Comment Worthy of Consideration

London May 21—The financial writer of the New York Tribune, in his article of May 20th, tersely comments as follows on the present situation: It may be admitted that there are adverse factors in the situation, but has not the decline in quotations, however, discounted all that is unfavorable. The Street it is true, continues intensely bearish and pessimism is more rampant than for a long time. Factors which a year ago created bull enthusiasm, now induce bear attacks on securities, and the many substantial underlying features in the country's industrial and financial condition fail to attract a public demand for stocks. Ever at the current attractive prize level, there is nevertheless a quiet absorption of stocks by prominent capitalists, and in the last few days the character of the buying has been much better than selling. The market declined to a point where solid investment railroad issues may be bought on an investment basis of 4 1-2 5 1-2 per cent. while industrial shares of undoubted merit may be had on the basis of eight to eleven per cent. Street opinion is entirely too bearish. Conditions in money and business do not warrant the present gloom in speculative circles, and the prediction is made that the people who buy stocks and hold them will be able to sell at much higher prices before the summer is over." We strongly concur with the prediction made at the close of these remarks. Just as the writer states, money and business conditions are not in accord with the present temper of Wall street. At a range of 10 to 15 points higher than current prices, five buyers would appear where now one is in evidence. People, or the bulk of them, will not buy stocks when they are low. The present range of prices should fully discount all unfavorable features, conditions now in evidence warrant improvement, and it is certain to come while the old axiom, "A watched pot never boils," carries more or less weight. The Wall street watchers are becoming so few in number, and speculation has reached so low an ebb that it is fair to presume that before much more time passes the Wall street community will again become busy, and the market will be better.

MR. DEVLIN'S SPEECH

Member for Galway Makes a Maiden Speech at Westminster

London, May 21.—Mr. R. C. Devlin, M.P. for Galway, made his maiden speech in the House of Commons yesterday and was well received. The question under consideration was the London Education Bill, which he cordially supported. This measure provides for support by the rates of denominational schools, including those of the Roman Catholic although control of the schools is to remain with the denominations interested.

Mr. Devlin admitted that the school question in Canada was still surrounded with a large amount of sectarian bitterness.

BRAIN POWER

HOW IT MAY BE STRENGTHENED AND INCREASED

The brain is a great nerve battery that presides over all the powers and impulses of the human body.

Very frequently as a result of poor blood, it becomes enfeebled, and a general weakness of the entire system follows.

No remedy possesses the marvelous brain strengthening power that Ferrozone has demonstrated in thousands of cases.

It contains an abundance of phosphates and iron which are essential in the formation of red, vitalising blood, and in this way supplies the brain with extra power to perform its numerous and important duties.

Ferrozone is the best preparation for brain workers, and those inclined to a sedentary life. It improves the appetite, insures good digestion, regulates the bowels, and helps the stomach to do its work.

Lawyers, ministers, and those whose occupation entails much thinking and brain labor, will find Ferrozone of immense value, because of its power to stimulate mental activity. Students who take Ferrozone regularly, find it not only clears the brain and makes it more receptive, but makes them strong in body as well as mind.

A medical student of Toronto University, who has proved the good qualities of Ferrozone says: "On my study table there is always a place for Ferrozone. I find by keeping my digestion in perfect order, and maintaining a splendid appetite, it enables me to accomplish a great deal of hard work. I consider Ferrozone at the same time food for the brain, the blood and the nerves and can highly recommend it."

Very few are so strong and healthy that a course of Ferrozone would not benefit. It is good for the young and old alike, and is prepared in convenient tablet form, price per box 50cts., sold by all druggists and N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont.

PADDING SKELETONS

That's Postum's Job

The rapidity with which pure food and drink will win a hard battle against ill health makes people stare sometimes. The most wonderful medicines in the world may be tried without success as long as the body is drugged with coffee. After lying 10 months in bed from his third attack of La Grippe, a gentleman of Bridgeport, Vt., recovered his health almost entirely in two weeks by leaving off coffee and drinking Postum Cereal Coffee at meal times. He says:

"I was reduced in weight from 190 to about 100 pounds and thus remained a poor, helpless skeleton for 8 months, notwithstanding my physician's liberal prescriptions, besides many boxes and bottles of malt and other tonics.

"Finally in April I stopped using coffee and other drugs and medicines of every kind and adopted a diet of plenty of Postum and Grape-Nuts. To my surprise in a short time I was able to eat and digest soft boiled eggs for breakfast and beef steak for dinner. I gained flesh and strength rapidly.

"On the afternoon of June 9 I walked out of my residence for the first time in 10 months and nine days. Two weeks later I left the city for my boyhood's home in the old Green Mountain State where I am now living in better health and strength than I have had since my first attack of La Grippe in 1892. I regard my case as having been hopeless so far as medical science was concerned by reason of heart failure, nervous prostration and as my physician termed it, nearly total paralysis of certain internal organs, but found all this was caused by coffee drinking.

"Before I found Postum I was 70 years old, now I feel 70 years young." Name furnished by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

PETER KING'S DEATH

Judgment Reserved in the Case Against Miller for Damages

Court of Appeal, Osgoode Hall, Toronto, May 21.—King v. Miller.—W. R. Riddell, K.C., and R. H. Greer, for defendants, appealed from judgment of Meredith J., in favor of plaintiff for $1,200 against defendant Miller, and dismissing action against other defendant, W. K. Colville. The action was brought by plaintiff as administratrix of the estate of the late Peter King, against defendants, for damages for death of her husband, a workman in employ of defendant Miller, alleged to have been caused by negligence of defendants. The deceased was in the employ of defendant Miller as a workman in the Polson Iron Works in the City of Toronto. On 14th May, 1901, defendant Miller employed defendant Colville to place in works a certain heavy casting. In course of such employment defendant Colville sent one Michael Dwyer, a servant, with a horse and a waggon to do the work, and plaintiff alleges that Dwyer, so negligently drove the waggon that it was driven against a heavy piece of machinery, the result being that the machinery was upset upon Peter King, and wounded him so seriously that he died. E. B. Stone, (Peterborough), and S. T. Mead, for plaintiff, opposed appeal. Judgment reserved.

HERE'S A SAD STORY

A Case Near Bancroft where Trouble Didn't Come Singly

An extremely sad and pathetic case is reported from Bancroft. Some time ago a man named Kelly, living on a farm about three miles from that village, had the misfortune, while eating his dinner to have a small piece of bone lodge in his throat. He didn't notice it at the time, but later his throat began to bother him, and he consulted local doctors who diagnosed the case as some throat trouble but efforts to afford relief were unavailing. The trouble becoming worse he left for Toronto to enter the hospital there. In a few days the man died.

When he left Bancroft nothing serious was thought of the case, and his wife and three small children were daily expecting to hear of his departure for home. Almost at the same time that word came of his death the terrible news of the approach of the bush fires which created such havoc in that region reached them. In a few short years all that the husband and father had worked so hard for were burned and the family had an arrow escape from death by burning. They managed to escape, however, but all that they owned, were the clothes they wore. Mr. Kelly had one of the best equipped farms in the neighborhood, but all that now remains are the blackened ruins. All the stock, buildings, machinery and grain were destroyed, and now the family are destitute. The neighbors are doing the best they can for them. There is no doubt but that [illegible] said to be many cases of families losing their all in that neighborhood and relief in many cases would be gladly welcomed.

LITTLE LOCAL LINES

—The Athletics are giving a grand promenade concert in the Brock street rink to-night.

—Association footballs, also the cheaper lines and all sporting goods at Times Bookstore.

—Complaints are being made regarding the poor street watering service on Water street north.

—The Weekly "Times" with a premium picture, for the balance of the year as a trial order, for only 40 cents.

When You Think

Of the periodic pain which many women experience with every month it makes the gentleness and kindness always associated with womanhood seem to be almost a miracle. While in general no woman rebels against what she regards as a natural necessity there is no woman who would not gladly be free from this recurring period of pain.

Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription makes weak women strong and sick women well, and gives them freedom from disease. It establishes regularity, dries weakening drains, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness.

Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter, free. All correspondence strictly private and sacredly confidential. Write without fear and without fee to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Mrs. T. Dolan, of Madrid, Perkins Co., Nebr., writes: "I was cured of painful periods by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and his Compound Extract of Smart-Weed. I think Dr. Pierce's medicines the best in the world."

"Favorite Prescription" has the testimony of thousands of women to its complete cure of womanly diseases. Do not accept an unknown and unproved substitute in its place.

MAN'S LIMITATIONS.

To the Average Man "Cosmetics" Has His Dislike.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox in the November Woman's Home Companion discusses "Man's Limitations" when he attempts to discourse on the secrets of beauty. She says:

"To the average man the word 'cosmetics' has the effect of a red rag shaken in the face of a bull. Yet the word does not mean paint or pigment. Trace it back and you will find it signifies a preparation to restore harmony. This is the age of specialists. In days gone by whatever evil befell the human body the family physician was expected to relieve. Now we have the dentist the surgeon the oculist the artist, the pedicure, and still others skilled in the treatment of scalp and skin. A good complexion is the background of a woman's beauty. Nature's most beautiful grouping of features is ruined if the background loses its tone or becomes seamed or spotted. To avoid such disaster with the flight of years requires knowledge and patience. There are specialists in this line who are just as expert as the dentist or the oculist. No man is indignant or disgusted if his wife consults the dentist. He does not tell her that a cheerful disposition will preserve her teeth. Yet the complexion feels the ravages of indigestion, time and inheritance quite as much as the teeth or eyes, and needs quite as skillful treatment. Yet the majority of ladies must keep their methods a secret because of the intolerance and unreason of man upon this subject.

"If a woman goes abroad with visible rouge on her cheeks, powder or her [illegible] a man has a right to utter a protest and voice his disgust. But he never stops at that. He immediately proceeds to air his ancient theories about a cheerful disposition and soap and water as the only cosmetic proper for a respectable woman to use. Meantime the deadly scented soap-cake has ravaged more complexions than any pigment on the market."

A comet, named after Professor Perrine, its discoverer, is added to the omens of this terrible year of earthquakes, floods, eruptions, cyclones, fires, murders, coal famine and the increase of the prices of beef, milk and bread. At first telescopic, the comet is approaching the trembling earth with such automobile speed that it is now plainly visible. What further horrors it portends, the Lord only knows.

GAMEY'S PURCHASE NOT NECESSARY, WAS PLEDGED TO SUPPORT GOVERNMENT

Defence Argument--Mr. Johnston, K.C., Presents This Theory in Able Speech

Mr. Blake is Criticised--Mr. Stratton's Counsel Charges Distinguished Counsel with Talking to Country Rather Than Court, No Corrupt Act

The conclusion of Mr. Blake's argument was as follows:

On February 7 Mr. Stratton received a letter from Gamey, of which he said no one else knew the contents. In this Gamey referred to the row that was on, and suggested resignation. The X.Y.Z. letter of the 11th of February was Mr. Stratton's answer to that letter, submitted Mr. Blake. It answered it specifically. The 7th of February letter referred to the meeting of the executive on the 16th. The X.Y.Z. letters referred to this fact. Mr. Blake contended that as a matter of plain common sense, the X.Y.Z. letter was the answer to Gamey's letter. It didn't matter how it was written. His own idea was that it was a concoction between Stratton and Sullivan. There was no other answer, and it was a crucial moment. Mr. Gamey expecting advice. The letter of the 7th February tended to resignation. The X.Y.Z. exhibit said no resignation. It bore inherent testimony of being the answer.

On February 13 Gamey had written to Mr. Harcourt for a school grant of $50. It was immaterial whether these grants which were requested were good or bad. The point was that they were taken and considered as though Gamey was a supporter of the Government.

Sullivan's letter of February 20 showed knowledge of affairs that should have been the property of the Ministers and their secretaries alone. There was inherent testimony in Sullivan's letters that Sullivan was in close touch with Mr. Stratton, that there was a perfect understanding between them. He was giving tips to Gamey.

"All this is evidence," said Mr. Blake, "that does not depend on the slippery memory of man." The events up to the opening of the House corroborated the understanding deduced from the letter of September 10, he argued.

That Mr. Conmee had told Mr. Stratton and Mr. Grant about Gamey and his petition, Mr. Blake thought was a point that should be noted. "This sawing-off of petitions seems to be disreputable," he went on, "but it is more disreputable to use a seat to saw off a protest against a Liberal, while that seat was virtually Liberal, according to the Liberals' understanding."

The Chancellor said that would be a strong inference if Mr. Gamey had not told the [illegible] the island, and inferentially Mr. Bristol, of his position. He agreed that the sawing-off was disreputable, but both parties did it.

The case of the pot and kettle did not help it any, said Mr. Blake.

Mr. Blake interjected the explanation that he was dividing his case into branches because he claimed that if only the patronage had been given Gamey in return for his support a great crime had been committed. If money had passed it was a greater, but if only one thing was given, it was a reprehensible matter.

On the interview of January 13, according to Dr. Chamberlain's evidence, Mr. Stratton had upbraided Mr. Gamey. And why would he do that, unless there had been a bargain? Mr. Gamey had been obliged to apologize for going to Perth. Mr. Stratton had thought Mr. Gamey had played him false, and with two more bye-elections coming on he decided he would not allow that to occur twice. So he thought of The Globe interview, and on the 27th of January a telegram was sent to Gamey by Sullivan, at the instigation, Mr. Blake believed, of Mr. Stratton, and the more he denied it the more Mr. Blake believed it.. When the telegram was sent to Gamey, Gamey was already on his way to Toronto, but that did not alter the fact that the telegram was sent.

The Mr. Hammond's evidence, with its moderate statements. Mr. Blake said that perhaps Mr. Hammond's bread and butter depended on his standing in well with the departments up there, so that his evidence was all the stronger. Mr. Hammond had said Stratton told him that the interview was intended to have an effect on the pending bye-elections. Mr. Stratton had denied this. According to Hammond, Stratton wanted the interview signed, so that he could keep it—there would be no more going into bye-election campaigns, added Mr. Blake. Mr. Blake commented on Mr. Stratton's request to strike out the additions made in the interview by Mr. Gamey. "Would it have been forgery if those words had been stricken out?" asked Mr. Blake. "Was this the first lesson on forgery he had given—to a lad like this?"

Mr. Blake turned up the "Couldn't you forget" evidence. "I wonder," said he, "if this was the first lesson in perjury he gave—subornation of perjury. A young man in his employ asked to perjure himself. A man who would ask another to perjure would do it himself. A Minister of the Crown forsooth! Better send the King a copy of that statement to let him see the Ministers he has. And he does not deny it. To my mind this is the most humiliating and melancholy thing in the whole investigation. Debauching the young men who go up to the establishment. It is said that Philip II. had a department of assassination. This is something like it. And isn't this a key that opens much of the mystery of the case?"

Mr. Blake then argued that every member of the Governmen twas as culpable as the one who had been put up to bear the brunt. He instanced several points which he claimed all had knowledge of.

Mr. Gamey's claim that the whole scheme was a trap to catch the Government was taken up by Mr. Blake. For this he had been called a spy, an informer, a little lower than Judas. To Mr. Gamey's mind, however, a great evil had existed and the means used appeared to be a question of little importance. Mr. Blake said he wouldn't go into the morality or [illegible] of feeling [illegible] was easy to sit here and lay down rules of morality, but it was difficult in the stress and strain of action. Dr. Cayley in his moral philosophy had set down instances when it was excusable to lie.

"That was limited to the legal profession, wasn't it?" said the Chancellor.

Mr. Blake referred to the employment of marked coins and such like.

Toronto, May 22.—"'Assassin, unblushing liar, briber, perjurer, suborner of perjury, forger and teacher of forgery,'—such were the arguments addressed to your Lordships yesterday by my learned friend for the purpose of proving that a great crime had been committed."

Such were the opening words of Mr. E. F. B. Johnston's address to the Commissioners on summing up his side of the Gamey evidence today.

"On behalf of my clients, J. R. Stratton and the Ontario Government," continued Mr. Johnston, "I crave the indulgence of the court for a moment while I say a word regarding the personal character of the address yesterday and then to the evidence. For five long hours my learned friend, for whom I have the greatest respect and who in this case assumes the role of the people's protector, made a strong speech, not to the court, but a speech intended to form the text for the campaign of a political party. It was a speech, and I say it in reverence, that began with an implication, was continued with a torrent of abuse, and ended in prayer. Such an address is no concern of mine, but I have the right to repudiate such remarks on behalf of my client unless they are warranted by the evidence.

"For thirty years this Government has had and has retained the confidence of the people. For 30 years charges along the lines of this charge have been made. For thirty years they have been not proved. And now it devolves upon us to say whether there is proof in this case.

"As far as political parties are concerned, I have nothing to do. When this question was taken out of the political arena, out of the House with its zeal and prejudices it was so done, not with the view of making it political, but with a view of finding out what a calm, judicial tribunal would say when they had heard the whole evidence. If the truth is against the clients I have the honor to represent, then I shall be content to accept the finding of your Lordships without the slightest feeling of resentment against my opponents. It is not a question for political bias, and my aim will be to aid your lordships to arrive at the just conclusion. I could say a great deal more, but personal regard for the high attainments of my learned friend prevents me. I could not reasonably say less."

Mr. Johnston submitted that there had either been a gross libel by the member for Manitoulin, or the Ministers should be in the penitentiary.

He considered it first necessary to lay down some principles which, under the British constitution, were considered fair and proper. It was, he submitted, recognised that the patronage of ridings should go to the Government supporters, and it was also the custom both in Britain and here for members of Parliament to vote party, regardless of measures, on all want of confidence motions. Regarding his claim to patronage, Mr. Johnston quoted Todd to show that it was the acknowledged right of Governments to distribute it among their supporters. The offer of patronage to a member on the same terms as to other supporters of the Government is in itself not a corrupt act, and it is no evidence of a corrup act that that should be done.

"Getting the patronage proves nothing," said Mr. Johnston. "A supporter of the Government gets it as a matter of precedent."

"It's usage," put in the Chancellor.

"Yes, my Lord, usage," said Mr. Johnston. "If Mr. Gamey took advantage of usage to ttempt to get unheard of concessions, that is his own affair."

Mr. Johnston devoted the next portion of his [illegible] of the commission, especially the question of whether the commissioners had power to report a finding. Three charges were contained in the commission. First, that Stratton corruptly paid two sums ofm oney, one of $3,000, and one of $1,000; second that patronage had been corruptly bestowed; and third, that the protest had been corruptly disposed of. Then a fourth charge had been added, that of conspiracy, introduced by a certain statement made by Mr. Gamey in the House; "and which," added Mr. Johnston, smilingly, "reads very much like portions of yesterday's speech."

"Thank you," said Mr. Blake.

LAWLESSNESS AT FERNIE

A Large Foreign Element Which Does Not Respect British Law

Nelson, B.C., May 23—At the Court of Assize, the Grand Jury, in their presentment to the judge, spoke very severely regarding the condition of affairs at Fernie, concluding: "There has been a deplorable want of prompt and energetic administration of justice in the neighborhood referred to. There appears to exist there a dangerous and lawless element, largely composed of foreigners. This element has on several occasions defied the authorities, been guilty of overt acts of gross personal violence, and riot, and an urgent need exists for a strict and more forcible administration of law. The Grand Jury, therefore, deem it their duty to present your lordship in the most serious and emphatic way they can that an absolute necessity exists for enforcing the law at Fernie. A larger force of provincial police should be maintained at Fernie, or failing this, the Dominion Government should be asked to establish a force of mounted police in that district."

IRON LAW OF THE RUSSIAN EMPIRE

The Hebrews File Claims Against Dismissed Governor

MUCH MONEY SUBSCRIBED

Governor Wanted a Loan and Did Not Get It—Latest Stories From Darkest Russia

St. Petersburg, May 23—In addition to the Governor of Kishineff, the Chief of Police has been dismissed for failing to take efficient measures to suppress the recent riots. According to Russian law, officials neglecting their duties are responsible for the results and the Jews of Kishineff have consequently filed numerous complaints for damages against the ex-Governor and the other authorities. The cases against the Governor are to be tried by the Senate, and the other cases in the lower courts.

NOT ONLY ANTI-SEMITIC.

Berlin, May 23—The correspondent of the National Zeitung maintains that it is a mistake to regard the Kishineff outrages as purely of an anti-semitic character. He attributes them partly to the general discontent caused by agricultural depression and partly to badly managed taxation and mistrust of the Government.

In support of these views he alleges that the windows of the Governor's palace were broken the house of the marshal of the nobility was completely demolished, a church pillaged and that many Christians were among the dead and wounded.

The Russian Government, he says, does not wish these facts to become known and prefers that the whole affair be represented as due to anti-Jewish feeling. Over 120 000 marks have already been collected by the German Jews for the sufferers.

RELIEF FROM THE U.S.

New York, May 23—Dan Guggenheim, treasurer of the Israelite relief fund, today received a cheque for $200 from John Hay, United States Secretary of State for the relief of the sufferers at Kishinef.

Arnold Kohn, treasurer of the central relief fund for the Jews of Kishineff, received $1,200 today, making in all about $30 000. Mr. Guggenheim sent $10,000 to the Alliance Israelite Universalle, Paris, by the Ivernia, of the Cunard Line, last Saturday, and a similar amount will be sent by the La Lorraine tomorrow. Contributions have been pouring into the fund at the rate of one to two hundred dollars a day from all parts of the country, and from people of every faith. Dr. Selven S. Wise has telegraphed that the Jews of Portland, Oregon, are contributing $5,000.

HE WANTED A LOAN.

London, [illegible] Morning Leader from Vienna says that fugitives from Kishineff state that shortly before the massacre Governor von Raaben asked three wealthy Jews to loan him $40,000. They refused. When the outbreak occurred the Governor granted them the protection of a Cossack guard on the payment of $10 000.

COPPER RANCH HAS RICH ORE

Fine Iron-Copper Sulphide Cut in Boulder County Property

The Company to Install a Mill Upon the Ground this Summer to Treat the Product

It is with pleasure The Times lays before its readers the following information regarding a proposition of which a former resident of Peterborough is the leading spirit. Mr. C. J. Arthur was, about 20 years ago, on the staff of The Times, and is now one of the leading business men of Boston, where he has made his "pile." Messrs. Thos Patterson & Son: the well known Simcoe street brokers are the local fiscal agents of the Company, and in this connection The Times would say, in a whisper: Get in at once and you will make a strike:

"Arizona" and "Colorado" have been the cry recently for mining ventures and investments; nothing has been said about New Mexico. The chief reason for this is that there has been no room for wild speculation or fake concerns in the mineral belt in New Mexico.

The mining section at the foot of the Oscura Mountains near the Andreas Range, when discovered was bought up quietly by New York, Boston and New Haven capitalists, who own the territory there with a diameter of nearly 120 miles. They kept their secret until it could no longer be kept as such, for the outside world could not help but notice when big smelters and mills were going up and railroads were being built, and roads made, and a town springing into existence, and then investors began to look around and they found that every precaution that law and money could throw around the titles had already been taken and there were no claims upon which to found any speculative companies or to sell stocks to the public.

We are relating a simple fact that when attention was called to the wealth of the mineral deposit in this section, less than three years ago, one brass firm whose name can easily be mentioned, sent out an expert to verify the statements of the writer and others, and when he came back the firm gave a certified check for $30,000 to buy up claims, and a meeting was called together at Boston at once; other experts were sent out, and hence these investments.

It was with difficulty that the author of this was able to hold his own titles in the pressure that was brought to bear—estimates of the value of these claims were put all the way from $25,000 to half a million each.

In consultation with friends, men of unquestioned integrity, it was deemed the wisest step to be incorporated, and to quietly sell stock sufficient to mine. These gentlemen who have been kind enough to associate themselves with the writer in the incorporation of the Boston & New Mexico Copper Company are:—

For President, John E. Kimball, President of the New England Consolidated Oil Company, and a holder of other positions of trust.

For Treasurer, Andrew Swanson, Manager and Treasurer of the Co-Operative Shoe Company, Brockton, Mass., one of the largest industries in that line in the United States.

The Directors, besides the above, are—

J. R. Henderson, of Rochester, N. Y., who is the Financial Agent of the Methodist Theological Seminary, a prominent man in every way.

John Henry Haynes, Ph. D., North Adams, Mass., who represented the United States Government as Consul at Bagdad, Turkey, and is a Director now in the Babylonian Expedition.

Besides these Directors we can refer to some of the most prominent business men, not only as to the constituent character of the Directors of the Boston & New Mexico Copper Company, but as a guarantee that its affairs will be conducted entirely in the interest of its stockholders and everyone will be treated fairly and equitably.

The few references we will mention here are—

D. M. Estey, President of the Dividend Mining & Milling Co.

B. F. Coburn, President Boston & New Mexico Copper Company.

F. B. Street, Sole Partner of the Wholesale Firm of J. D. Dewell & Co. New Haven, Conn.

Hon. J. B. Mitchell, Mayor of the City of Bowmanville, Ont., Canada.

W. H. Robertson, Editor and Proprietor of "The Times" Peterborough, Ont.

Fox & Ross, Brokers, Toronto, Ontario, Canada.

The Investment Trustee Corporation, New York and Boston.

Guaranteed Securities Company, Equitable Bldg., Boston, Mass.

The purpose of these gentlemen is to treat everybody exactly alike, that all shall stand on the same basis that the company owns property whose value can scarcely be estimated in minerals, that there is sufficient copper now in sight to make it a paying investment from the start, and they invite the public to aid them simply in raising capital enough to begin mining and get returns speedily.

THE SHOW GROUNDS

Splendid Work Being Done at the Exhibition Grounds

That the Peterborough Central Exhibition is to be a success, is evident from the preparations that are being made. The grounds of the Exhibition and those of the Peterborough Turf Club have been thrown into one, by the removal of the fence dividing the two sections.

The stock pens are being put in first class shape to accomodate the stock which will assuredly be on exhibition this fall.

The Peterborough Turf Club has about 20 men at work, getting the track and grounds in order for the big summer meet on August 5th and 6th.

The grand stand is to be greatly enlarged and improved. The stand will be divided into two sections; reserved and unreserved. The reserved seats will be covered, and will be divided by a wire screen. A separate entrance will lead to this stand.

There are some fine horses in training at the race track, and the place is the centre of much interest to horsemen just now. The officers of the Turf Club deserve unstinted praise for their energy and success in placing Peterborough in the circuit of the finest trotting race meets of the country, and the assistance which is being given the Central Exhibition Association in their efforts to give Peterborough a first class fall show

THE HOSPITAL DYED WITH BLOOD, PHYSICIAN ALMOST BEATEN TO DEATH

Terrible Stories Told of the Kisheneff Riots--Great Suffering

The Rioters were Incited by Articles in an Anti-Jewish Newspaper, Resented Physician Looking After Injured

London, May 22.—The Jewish Chronicle has courteously furnished me with advance proofs of the next issue, containing additional particulars from the committee appointed to report upon the Kisheneff atrocities. The St. Petersburg correspondent of the committee quotes from The Novosti the account of an eye-witness, who describes the appearance of the Jewish hospital, where the whole building, the threshold, the staircases and the courtyard, were dyed with blood. He saw a cripple whose only eye had been gouged begging the surgeons to kill him; he saw men who had lost their reason under the tortures inflicted upon them, and young girls who had been brutally outraged. A police inspector visiting the hospital pressed his hands to his head in horror and hastened away. The Viedomosti says that a surgeon who was attending the wounded was almost beaten to death by the mob.

The Novosti says that, in addition to the dead and wounded, there are thousands of temporarily homeless men, women and children. It also say sthat the newspaper, The Bessarabyetz, founded by Kruschewen, a Moldavian, had little circulation till it began attacking the Jews, when he secured the patronage of the Roumanian nobility. He spoke of seven to ten millions of enemies dwelling in the midst of the Russians, oppressing the people and undermining their welfare. He called for "Death to the Jews," and other of his phrases were, "Jewish corpses must be bound to cart-wheels" "The Jew is an abomination and a parasite."

MORE COMPETITION IN MEAT

Russian Chilled Meat into England—Suitable for Poorer Classes

London, May 23—The exclusion of the Argentine cattle has led to the bringing of an experimental cargo of Russian chilled meat to Smithfield, thus introducing a fresh competitor for Canada. Experts say that Russian fine third rate beef is on a level with the Argentine chilled meat. The wholesale price is two shillings five pence per stone, 8 lbs; retail, sixpence to 2 1-2d a pound. This is especially suited for the poorer customers.

AUSTRALIAN JUDGES

The New Southern High Court and Its Functions

London, May 23—The Australian bill for the creation of a high court for Australia will not deprive the litigants of the right to appeal to the Privy Committee of the Privy Council, but it will probably limit the number of appeals, as in the case of Canada. The proposed salaries outstrip the Canadian ones, namely $20,000 for Chief Justice, $51,000 for the others. These salaries are even higher than those of the United States.

THE CANADIAN NORTHERN

Report That the G.T.R. will Take the Line Over Denied

Toronto, May 23—Mr. Hugh Sutherland, executive agent of the Canadian Northern, denies the reports that the Grand Trunk magnates' visit has any connection with negotiations for taking over the Canadian Northern.

SHORT CROPS IN ONTARIO

Rain at the Present Time would Insure Good Crops

Toronto, Ontario, May 22—Farmers in this section are anxiously hoping for rain, but it is the general [illegible] that even if rain should come immediately, it will be too late to insure abundant crops, and that there must be a shortage of hay under any circumstances now. Other crops might recover partially with showers and warm weather.

HEAVY GUNS MOUNTED

Germany's Ambition to Command the Seven Seas

Bremen, May 22—Eighteen heavy guns were shipped today from Emden to complete the armaments of the German island of Borkum. The work of fortifying the island has been quietly pushed forward until now it is finished. The big guns absolutely command the entrance to the river Ems.

It is the intention of the Government to make Emden a splendid harbor and a first class naval station for the Kaiser's maritime forces. In anticipation of this iron masters of Westphalia are about to establish a ship-building yard in the place.

Fell Asleep on the Belt

Windsor, Ont., May 22—Harry E. Little, a spare fireman in the employ of the Street Railway here, lay down on the wide belt of an engine last night to rest and fell asleep. The engineer, unaware of his presence started the ponderous machine. Little yelled, but it was too late, and he was terribly crushed. So tightly was the poor fellow jammed between the belt and the drive wheel, that the engine had to be partly taken apart to remove him. He is now at the General Hospital but cannot live long.

LONDON BUSSES

And An American Food

There is probably no food on earth that could sustain a woman 60 years old under the following circumstances except Grape-Nuts.

For 4 months she laid ill from partial paralysis brought on by the wrong kind of food ruining stomach and then affecting the nervous system. During the time she was getting well the physicians fed her on Grape-Nuts.

She says: "My diet consisted of two teaspoonfuls of Grape-Nuts and some cream each meal for two months. Then increased to two dessert spoonfuls and to show how it sustains nature, I never lost 5 lbs. in the whole 4 months. I got well slowly and am now in prime health and in the last 3 months have been in 10 foreign countries. I carry Grape-Nuts everywhere with me.

"In London I saw the big Grape-Nuts signs on the "busses" all about. Considering how near death I was and how well I am now through good food alone and that I am 60 years old my friends look upon my recovery as marvelous." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

THE GERMAN VIEW OF MR. CHAMBERLAIN'S PLAN

The Country Reconciled to the Loss of Trade

ANTI-GERMAN WORK

The Secretary's Speech Only a Bid for Premiership

Berlin, May 23—Reflection leaves Germany unruffled by the zollverein project advanced by Mr. Chamberlain, notwithstanding the frank intimation that it is intended primarily as [illegible] at German trade. The attitude of the Government is one of complete equanimity. Mr. Chamberlain's manner is disliked, but it is claimed there is a wide difference between the British Colonial Secretary's address to his constituents at Birmingham and the passing of imperial legislation in London. The whole speech is considered a bid for the Premiership, and Mr. Chamberlain is credited with foreseeing the early collapse of the Balfour Ministry and with desiring to ride into Mr. Balfour's position on a wave of anti-Germanism. Moreover, the Kaiser's Ministers know that Canada and Australia were opposed at the Coronation Colonial Conferences to an imperial custom union on Chamberlain lines, and they do not believe that the Secretary's recent speech will alter the practical considerations that actuated them then. German business men are confident that whatever arrangements may eventually be made Great Britain itself will remain free trade, in which event they would simply supply the British Colonial markets through British hands. British industrial resources are considered altogether inadequate to supplant the great American and German trade with the British colonies.

A MILLIONAIRE KILLED

Wealthy Brockville Man Meets Death in the West

Brockville, May 23—A message was received this morning from Kamloops, B.C., conveying the sad intelligence of the death of John McLaren, of Brockville, as the result of a fall from a horse. Mr. McLaren was a wealthy manufacturer and very popular. He controlled the Ontario Glove Works and the Canadian Oak Belting Co., of Brockville, and was also largely interested in other industries here. No details of the accident have as yet been received.

UNION LABEL

PETERBOROUGH, MAY 23, 1903.

THE "AUTO" AS A STEAM-ROLLER

The Toronto News entertains the hope that the automobile will bring "good roads" in its train. This is so well-founded a hope that we may almost say that the "auto" will certainly bring good results. Undoubtedly one of the chief reasons why we have so few of these winged vehicles is to be found in the uneven surfaces of our roads.

The bicycle called for smooth roads at every jump and the energetic army of wheelmen who swarmed over the country a few years ago unquestionably did something for the betterment of our highways. But the bicycle could do with a side path, and could make its way in some sort of fashion over roads which would turn an automobile into an engine of torture.

But the wide, soft-tired carriage which the chauffeur drives ahead with an inclination of the wrist, must have a whole road of reasonable smoothness; or else it can do little better than poke along at the despised speed of a horse drawn vehicle. To condemn an "auto" to this gait may be a measure of safety to pedestrians, chickens and chauffeurs; but is also to decree that the sport of automobiling will never be a popular one in the region thus hampered. If a community wishes to be preserved against the cyclonic automobile, it [illegible] shockingly bad roads.

But there is more money in getting good roads, inviting the automobilists too tour through the country and then regulating their speed within limits of safety by police provisions. Incidentally, the good roads will bring every farmer much nearer to his market, both in wear upon carts and in time, and will thus put profit in his pocket and reduce the cost of farm-stuff to the city buyer. There is more to be got out of the automobile than heart failure and an unpleasant odor.

ROSEBERY THINKING IT OVER

That Lord Rosebery did not declare himself to be squarely against Mr. Chamberlain's proposals indicates that he is—to use the old phrase—"open to conviction." The official Liberal leaders have shown no such hesitation. They are out for battle upon this platform and see themselves winning another victory under the old free trade banner. But Lord Rosebery says that he will "not hastily reject any scheme for really cementing and uniting the Empire."

The open attitude of the ex-Premier will, doubtless, suggest to Mr. Chamberlain's opponents within the Conservative party the possibility of an alliance between the two most forceful men in British politics in case they refuse to follow the Colonial Secretary in his new "lead." And a Chamberlain-Rosebery coalition would appeal with immense power to the British constituencies. As opposed to them, there would be only two broken remnants of parties, which could not get together on any conceivable platform.

There is, of course, no reason to believe as yet that any split must take place in the Government over the Chamberlain programme. No one insists upon immediate action. All that is necessary just now is to agree that Britain should look toward a commercial union with the colonies. There are many and many details which must be settled on both sides before this programme can begin to be realized. The exact form of the union is a matter of consideration and discussion and compromise and patriotism—yes, and of Imperial necessity. By the time this is done Lord Rosebery may be one of the most effective supporters of the new National Policy.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

That was a close shot when Mr. Sifton says that "London is more pro-American than Canada." England has always been more inclined to woo the United States that we have. Our reluctance to woo has not been due to any essential hostility, of course, but simply to an intimate knowledge of Uncle Sam's character, which is prone to mistake an attitude of friendship for one of supplication. The Americans have never thought so kindly of us as since we have proven our ability to prosper without their smile.

Interesting Items.

A Detroit publishing firm is to issue "The Smiths," a monthly magazine for people named Smith. This is something new in the line of magazine. It opens a new and promising field. Of course the Browns must have their periodical. Likewise must the tribes of Jones, Williams, White, Johnson and many others.

Joseph H. Perkins of Syracuse, N.Y., will soon publish a work containing the biographies of nearly 80,000 centenarians. If he can show any means of living so as to reach the 100-year mark, his book ought to have a wide circulation. Mr. Perkins will produce statistics to show that there are 4,000 people now living in the United States who are 100 years old or more.

France has a special association for discovering a remedy for seasickness. In September, 1901, it held an exhibition at Ostend. The investigations have since been continued, partly with the aid of a steamer lent by the Belgian Government. The results are now made public in a book written by Dr. Madeuf of Paris. It contains various rules as to diet, clothing, etc., but points out no sure remedy.

No freight except live stock and perishable goods is to be moved on Sunday, according to the new rule of the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad. An exception in favor of coal is made during the continuation of the shortage; but aside from that, thousands of railroad men will have their Sundays at home for the first time since they entered the service. It is worth noting that the management of the road expresses the belief that the rest will enable the men to move as much freight in six days as they have been moving in seven.

Notwithstanding all denials from hotel managers on the Continent, regarding complaints made by tourists of systematic signaling by means of marks on luggage passed between servants from hotel to hotel as to the value of tips, the charge holds good, for a Nice correspondent writes to Henry Labouchere of London "Truth" that he finds upon enquiries that there is no doubt such a system is in existence. But a method more favored than that of affixing luggage labels in positions, the significance of which is understood by servants in hotels all along the Riviera, is to convey the same information by means of chalk-marks. "The moral of which is," says Labouchere, "that if you have not been over-generous to the servants, wipe off the chalk-marks you may see on your luggage after leaving any hotel."

THE ATTITUDE OF AUSTRALIAN PEOPLE

The Discussion of Mr. Chamberlain's Empire Proposal Continues

MEMBERS CHOOSE SIDES

Earl of Rosebury Further Explains his Attitude — Germany's View

London, May 23—The discussion of Rt. Hon. Mr Chamberlain's policy still rages. Hon. Mr. Copland, the Agent-General to New South Wales strongly supports it, and says: "Instead of waiting for a full fledged scheme complete in every detail, we must make a beginning and allow the system to develop with time, welcoming each new proposal of a practical character, no matter from which part of the Empire's corner. Mr. Copland plainly declares, however, that Australia must, for many years, if not for all time, depend on import duties as a chief source of revenue. Australia cannot, therefore, adopt Britain's free trade policy.

Two Canadian members of the British House—General Laurie and Mr. Macnamara—respectively support and oppose the proposal.

The radical papers still claim that Mr. Chamberlain and Mr. Balfour are in open conflict, and they say the Ministry, as a whole, is in a swirl of cross currents, and is going to pieces. The Rosebery Liberals, of whom the Daily News is spokesman, are indignant because Rosebery maintains that free trade is not a matter of party division.

Lord Rosebery himself today authorizes the statement that he is greatly surprised to find his speech interpreted as supporting a zollverein scheme. He was addressing a non-political audience, and he contented himself with the proposal that the scheme should be submitted to impartial examination.

Berlin telegrams suggest Rosebery's possible reapproachment with Chamberlain as increasing German anxiety. Kolnische Zeitung, which is often officially inspired, utters a warning against German rashness, and hints that the German Government may now reconsider its treatment of Canada.

Took The Advice of a Lady Friend When Death Seemed So Near.

A MARVELLOUS VICTORY FOR

Paine's Celery Compound.

Women who dearly love husband, children and home life, are those who desire to be vigorous, active and full of health. When the wife and mother is suffering and unable to attend to the wants and comforts of those dear to her, the home is sad and despondent; there is family discomfort and aching hearts long for the safety of the home guardian angel.

Thank Heaven, thousands of our women are now fully prepared for any of the ills prevalent in spring time. They have made Paine's Celery Compound their family medicine. by it, they are able to ward off serious illness and physical breakdown. The happy experience of Mrs. Fred. L. Lamson, of Halifax, N.S., should cheer all women who suffer from nervousness, sleeplessness, troubles arising from impure and stagnant blood, liver and kidney complaints, rheumatism and neuralgia. Mrs. Lamson says:—

"For five years I was a sufferer from nervousness, sleeplessness, headache and female troubles, and got but little relief from doctors and their medicines. Six months ago I was so weak and broken down that my husband became alarmed. Indeed, I thought I was fast nearing the grave. A lady friend in this city who visited me, strongly advised me to give Paine's Celery Compound a trial as it had done wonders for her. My husband procured a bottle without delay and I began its use. In a week I found I was getting stronger, and I continued with the medicine until I had used seven bottles and was completely cured. I am now able to work with comfort, sleep well, appetite is good and I am increasing in weight. Paine's Celery Compound is I think, a wonderful woman's medicine; It saved my life, and I shall always praise it."

WHY THE SLAUGHTER WAS NOT CHECKED

Official Report on the Kiskineff Horror in Southern Russia

JEWS NOT PERMITTED TO WIRE DURING RIOTS

The Ugly Side of the Affair Now Coming Out—The Horrors Not Over-Stated

St. Petersburg, May 23—Russian officials of the Ministry of the Interior stand self-condemned in the matter of the Kisheneff horror. Dr. Lopu Khim, a former professor in the University of St. Petersburg and now chief of the political police under Von Plehwe, in his official report, attributes the origin of the massacre to the anti-Semitic propaganda of the local newspaper Bessarabets, edited by Krushewan, a Roumanian anti-Semite. Now this paper is conducted under the censorship of Vice-Governor Ustrugoff, a favorite of Von Plehwe who has more influence with the local administration that the Governor himself. An equally rabid contributor is Davidovitch, the official assistant to Ustrugoff.

Now that Von Plehwe wishes to punish the rioters can be seen from the fact that Ustrugoff and Davidovitch have been intrusted with the investigation of the affair. A correspondent is informed from a reliable source in Kisheneff that owing to an order issued by Ustrugoff, no Jew was permitted to send a telegram to St. Petersburg during the two days of the riots. Officers of the regular army who protested against the barbarities were not only restrained from acting, but even reprimanded for having proposed the action.

Governor Von Raaben, it is said, was astonished when he received Von Plehwe's command not to employ troops in suppressing the disorders. The majority of the leaders of the riot were strangers not only in Kisheneff, but also to Bessarabia. They were mostly from Great Russia, while the population of Bessarabia is composed of Roumanian Jews, of Little Russians and Poles. The organizers of the massacre were well supplied with money.

WITH CORRUPT INTENTION

Government Sent $180 to a Conservative to Spend on Round

So Said Dr. Nesbitt in the Legislature on Wednesday—Minister of Public Works Admits Appointment Was Irregular and That His Secretary Sent the Money Without Waiting For the Bond—Premier Ross Pecksniffianly Angry.

Toronto, May 21.—In the Legislature yesterday afternoon, Dr. Nesbitt moved for a return of correspondence relative to the appointment of John McMaster as road overseer.

Dr. Nesbitt, in speaking to his motion, said that McMaster was a Conservative who received a notification from the Department of Public Works about May 20, 1902, that he had been recommended for appointment as overseer, and he was asked to execute a bond and return it to the department before the appointment would be made. McMaster, however, did not execute the bond, but in a few days, May 26, he was told by Mr. Cockburn, a Crown Lands agent, that if he would go to the postoffice he would receive $180 for expenditure on the Markstay and Warren road. McMaster had been canvassed for his vote by Cockburn, but had said that he would not support the Government. McMaster says that the money was sent to him purely to influence his vote in the elections, which were only three days off.

"We charge," said the doctor, "that this money was used to influence the electors of the district."

[illegible]

Mr. Latchford said a recommendation for the appointment of Mr. McMaster reached the department from the candidate in West Nipissing about the 20th of May. The Minister was absent at the time, but his secretary asked the Superintendent of Colonization Roads to appoint McMaster as overseer. The rule of the department was not to send money until a bond had been returned to the department, but McMaster was well recommended. There was no charge that the money was not well spent.

Mr. Matheson said that McMaster, being a Conservative, probably spent the money very well, but the point was that three days before the election, without any application from McMaster, he received the appointment. Mr. Cockburn, a colonization road inspector, sent his son to canvass him. The Public Works Department was using road money to try and corrupt the electors, and McMaster had been asked for his vote. He refused. He was then told to go to the postoffice and the money for the road would be there. Money was used in this way in many ridings, and this was only a sample.

Mr. Ross—What's the objection to appointing a Conservative?

Mr. Matheson—Three days before the election?

Mr. Ross—That's when the road was wanted. (Conservative laughter and applause.) Is it a mortal sin to build a road three days before an election? You can't prove that there was any corrupt bargain.

Mr. Foy said that the letter of Mr. Smith, superintendent of colonization roads, was posted to Cockburn, and handed to Mr. McMaster. Why this haste and violation of the rules? Could anyone draw any other conclusion than that the money was for the purpose of influencing the vote of the riding? Mr. Foy claimed that the return on the subject showed that various sums were sent out about the time, and none after May 27.

Mr. Whitney's Criticism.

Mr. Whitney said the Minister of Public Works had been frank enough to say that the rule of the department had been violated in this case. Fancy the private secretary having the power to appoint an inspector of roads, and to send money from the treasury to spend on the roads! The speaker referred to the attitude of the Premier, who rushed in to say: "You can't prove it." It was not the first time that the Premier had taken such a position.

Mr. Ross—What I said was that you can't prove that there was a corrupt bargain.

The Premier objected to this mode of conducting political warfare, which was inimical to the best interests of the province. It was dragging politics down to the mire, and he pitied the drivelling soul of a man, whose own hands may not be clean, who was continually casting suspicion on the acts of the Government.

Mr. Whitney observed that the member for North Toronto had said that there was a corrupt intention.

Corrupt Intention Shown.

Dr. Nesbitt said it was perfectly fair to presume that there was a corrupt intention. He hurled back the insinuation of the Premier as to his hands not being clean, and it remained for him (Mr. Ross) to say the same, in view of the fact that the letter sent to Mr. Gamey passed through his hands.

Mr. Conmee contended that it was the rule in the new country to employ Conservatives as well as Liberals on colonization roads. This was purely a matter of suspicion.

Mr. Smyth defied anyone to say where there was a Conservative in the whole District of Algoma employed as a road boss.

'Twas Not Always So.

Mr. Carr (Parry Sound) said for the past 27 years the road grants had been made about May 29, but Mr. Carnegie mentioned a case of road money being sent out in the fall of 1899, and not expended until the fall of the following year, just before the Dominion election.

Mr. Lucas concluded the debate. He said the Premier, not being successful in laughing the case out of court, had pumped himself up with indignation at the idea of anyone imputing wrong motives to the Government.

The motion for the return was passed.

Fishing Leases.

Mr. Hendrie moved for a return of correspondence between the department and any applicant for fishing rights for commercial purposes in Lakes Nepigon, Manitou and other lakes in Ontario since May 1, 1902. Before this order was reached, however, Mr. Hendrie asked: Has the Government entered into any agreement with any person, persons or corporations—other than those mentioned in the report of the department for the year 1902—granting fishing concessions in Lakes Nepigon, Manitou, or other Ontario lakes, and if so, are any such agreements and those named in said report, to be laid before the House at the present session, for ratification, or otherwise?

Hon. Mr. Latchford replied that the Government had not. The concessions were granted by an order-in-Council, which did not require ratification by the Legislature.

Keep Lakes For Anglers.

On moving for the return of correspondence, Mr. Hendrie urged that the Government should keep the chain of lakes from Ottawa to the Lake of the Woods for anglers who come to Ontario for the fishing and who spend a large amount of money here. He condemned the policy of leasing the most valuable lakes to an American fish company and suggested that a commission be appointed to look into the concession granted to the Canada Fish Company.

The Minister of Public Works defended the concession, and Mr. Beatty expressed dissatisfaction with the policy of the Government in respect to fishing on the inland lakes.

Mr. Gamey Took the Floor.

Mr. Gamey said he wanted to ask a few questions. This was as far as he got, however, Mr. Latchford rising to protest against questions being fired at him without previous notice having been given.

Mr. Whitney resented the action of the Minister, who, he said, did not know what the member for Manitoulin was going to say.

Mr. Conmee said the leasing of Lake Manitou to the company was really a good thing all round, as the company was required to distribute millions of spawn in the lakes every year and paid so much a ton for fish taken out.

"Perhaps the hon. gentleman will allow me to make a few remarks," began Mr. Gamey, who resumed the floor. The remarks he had to offer were to take objection to the Government granting a license to an American monopoly.

The motion for the papers was agreed to.

A number of bills were read a second time.

While one of our enterprising young business men was escorting a young lad lime the other evening, a certain masoned "Paddy" from the North whose eyesight was rather dim lit several matches to make sure of the couple. It is to be hoped the electric lights will soon be installed, so as to save his matches.

THE LADIES DIDN'T APPEAR

Hackdriver's Story of 11th September Stands Undisputed.

Mr. Johnston Notified the Commission Wednesday That Defence Evidence Was All In, and the Judges Did Not Sit—Mr. Gamey Willing to Put in the $1,200 Loan From Sullivan If Court Releases Him From Obligation to the Latter—Argument Begins To-Day.

Toronto, May 21.—Mr. E. F. B. Johnston, counsel for the defence in the Gamey investigation, yesterday forenoon notified the commissioners and the prosecuting counsel that he had closed his case.

"The prosecution have closed their case and so have we. We didn't think the evidence of Cabman Green called by the prosecution worth bringing a witness from Winnipeg here to contradict, so we have no more witnesses to call, no more evidence to offer."

That was Lawyer McEvoy's explanation why the Royal Commission in the Gamey-Stratton case did not sit yesterday afternoon.

Were Eager on Saturday.

The failure of the defence to bring the three feminine witnesses to the stand was a general surprise, in view of the importance of Green's testimony as affecting Mr. Stratton's story of his movements on the morning of September 11, and in view of Mr. Johnston's apparent eagerness on Saturday to have them brought before the commission. "The evidence is new," said Mr. Johnston, "but it is not at all surprising. We can clear it up. If my learned friends insist on relying upon the testimony of Green as a factor in the case at all, then it will be necessary to produce the three witnesses."

Weston Green, the hack driver, swore that on the morning of September 11 he drove Mr. Stratton and two ladies around the city, from about 9.30 until after 11, when he drove his passengers to the Parliament Buildings.

Mr. Stratton, to disprove Gamey's narrative of having been with and received the money from him on September 11, swore that he left the Parliament Buildings with Mr. Boland about 10.30, arrived at the Trust and Guarantee Company's office about 11, and remained there until 1. Mr. Boland testified likewise. The defence said that the cabman was mistaken, and that his three passengers were all ladies.

Mr. Gamey's $1,200 Loan.

So the investigation into the sensational charges made against Hon. Mr. Stratton and the Ross Government is now closed, with the exception of the final argument by counsel, which will commence this morning at 10 o'clock. Prior to Mr. Blake being heard, in his summing up of the case, as made out by the prosecution, the question of Mr. Gamey having to put in the hands of the Commission the sum of $1,200 said to have been borrowed by him from Frank Sullivan, will be finally decided. Mr. Gamey affirms his willingness to do so if released from the obligations he assumed when he borrowed the money. His counsel, Mr. Du Vernet, will appear for him this morning.

All Over This Week.

After Mr. Blake has spoken for the prosecution, Mr. Johnston will argue the case for the defence, and then Mr. Blake will be given an opportunity to reply. It is not thought that the whole matter will be in the hands of the Commissioners for their final consideration until Saturday afternoon.

SNOW IN FAR WEST.

Blizzard Rages in Crow's Nest Pass and Stock Suffers.

Blairmore, N.W.T., May 21.—The worst storm experienced in this section of the Northwest in many years is raging in the Crow's Nest Pass and on the prairie to the east. Snow has been falling constantly for seventy-two hours, with no indication as yet of a break. Yesterday a blizzard as fierce as was ever known here has been raging.

The snow is eighteen inches deep on the level here, while reports from the prairie as far east as Lethbridge are to the effect that it is from two to three feet deep.

Stock which has been on green grass for two weeks is reported to be suffering terribly, especially young animals, which are reported to be dying off by hundreds. The temperature has not been low, but has been falling for several hours, and the weather is now extremely cold. It is feared the blow to the live stock interests within the radius of the storm will be almost paralyzing.

Loss of $5,000,000 by Snow.

Great Falls, Mont., May 21.—The heaviest cattle and sheep loss in the history of Montana, which will reach $5,000,000, has been caused by snowstorms, which have been raging for the past three days.

GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC.

Premier Apparently Favors Bond Interest Guarantee to the Line.

Toronto, May 21.—(Globe Special).—Ottawa, May 20.—The Government's supporters from Ontario and Quebec had conferences with the Prime Minister to-day on the subject of the aid to be granted the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway. They did not go collectively, but in two separate groups. In both instances the discussion was frank and free. The Government have not decided upon their policy, but Sir Wilfrid enlightened his supporters as to his own personal views. Apparently the Prime Minister favors guaranteeing the interest on the bonds of the proposed transcontinental line.

Land subsidies are out of the question, and it would appear that there will be no Government-built line. Sir Wilfrid Laurier's statement as to his own views met with hearty approval, and a sagacious solution of the question is likely at an early date.

Must Go Slow in Cities

Toronto, Ont., May 22—The Municipal Committee passed a bill yesterday, restricting the rate at which automobiles may run in cities, towns and villages to 7 miles an hour. The friends of the automobile fought hard for a 10-mile rate, and said that 7 was unbearably slow. A speed of 15 miles in the country is allowed.

2,000 PEOPLE ARE HOMELESS

Fire Sweeps the Busiest Part of St. Hyacinthe, Que.

Three Quarters of a Mile of the Principal Part of the City Reduced to Ashes—250 Houses Were Burned—The Market Place, the St. Genevieve Hospital and Three Hotels Are Gone—One Man Injured.

Number of houses burned, 250.
People rendered homeless, 2,000.
Estimated loss, $250,000.
Seriously injured, one.
District laid waste, three-quarters of a mile.

St. Hyacinthe, Que., May 22.—A terrible fire raged in St. Hyacinthe yesterday afternoon. It was the most destructive that has ever occurred in the history of the town, or in any of the communities in the district. Fire broke out during lunch hour, and by 4 o'clock in the afternoon three-quarters of a mile of the business and busiest part was laid waste, and was a scene of devastation, desolation and ruin.

250 Houses Burned.

Two hundred and fifty houses have been reduced to shapeless heaps of ashes, which, with live embers, line the thoroughfares. Three hotels, two flour mills and several of the largest business houses have disappeared as completely as if they had never existed. The market place, the principal rendezvous of the country round, is no longer recognizable, and the St. Genevieve Hospital is destroyed.

Two Thousand Homeless.

Two thousand people are homeless. A quarter of a million is the computed damage, but the extent of the loss to such a community cannot be calculated by mere figures expressing dollars and cents.

What added vastly to the possible magnitude of the disaster is the fact that the river is low, and that the water supply practically gave out early. Water was being pumped from the wells, which did not hold out for any length of time.

Montreal Brigade There.

Conspicuous by their indomitable efforts to cope with circumstances was the Montreal brigade, which reached here at 2.45 p.m. Within a quarter of an hour of its arrival it had its reels playing upon the flames. The burned district extends along the river front south of St. Antoine street, from Cote Bros. boot and shoe factory on the west to where the river turns at the east.

Three Hotels Gone.

Included in the 250 buildings burned are three hotels, the Frontenac, the Union and the Ottawa. Among the business places in ruins are Cote Bros. factory, the establishment of J. Bourgeois, Hudon & Co., and Dusseau & Lamoureux. The loss thus far is estimated to exceed $250,000. It will, of course, be much larger before the flames are finally subdued.

The gale carried huge flaming embers hundreds of yards, and where they found lodgement a fire started, and in a few minutes was burning fiercely.

One man was seriously injured. His name has not been learned. It is not known whether any lives have been lost.

Explosion of Powder.

At 4 o'clock a loud explosion of powder occurred in Bourgeois' hardware establishment. The flames soon afterwards shot high into the air and the structure was quickly razed. Huge clouds of smoke rose from the burning district, and spread all over the surrounding country for a distance of four miles. The fire was got under control about 7 o'clock.

Galt May 21.—The contents of a store on Main street, known as Graham's Fair, suffered damage by fire yesterday afternoon to the extent of probably $500, caused by fire crackers. Mr. Graham was attempting to show a possible customer the merits of a bunch of lady firecrackers by lighting them, when one fell into a table of giant crackers, which exploded in all directions. The damage to stock from water is also considerable.

SIR THOMAS TESTIFIES.

Tells What He Knows of Land Grants in British Columbia.

Victoria, B.C., May 20.—Sir Thomas Shaughnessy gave evidence yesterday afternoon before the Parliamentary Committee re the land grants scandal. He said certain lands were granted to the C.P.R. and afterwards cancelled. He was cross-examined by Mr. Duff as to the agreement entered into with shareholders who bought out the B.C.S. Nothing startling was adduced.

Body Found in Thames.

Chatham, Ont., May 20.—The body of Miss Annie Orr, who had been missing from her home since Sunday night, was found floating in the Thames yesterday afternoon by a Dover farmer, about a mile west of the city limits. Life had evidently been extinct for some considerable time. As Miss Orr was in ill-health and subject to fits of low spirits, it is supposed that she committed suicide.

WILL HUNT FOR FUEL.

Itinerary of the Summer Mining Class of Bureau of Mines.

Toronto, May 21.—The summer mining classes of the Bureau of Mines will this year be directed by Dr. W. L. Goodwin, Director of the School of Mining at Kingston, and J. G. McMillan, B.A.Sc., Toronto, and this program is arranged: Black Donald Graphite Mine, Brougham Township, May 26; Olden Zinc Mine, Long Lake P.O., June 3; Belmont Gold Mine, Cordova P.O., June 11; Copper Cliff, June 20; Massey Copper Mine, Massey Station, June 29; Big Master Gold Mine, Gold Rock, July 9; Elizabeth Gold Mine, Port Arthur, July 20; Tip Top Copper Mine, July 28; Helen Iron Mine, Aug. 8; Rock Lake Copper Mine, Aug. 19. Prof. Coleman has gone to Sudbury district to continue his nickel investigations, and Prof. Miller will resume his investigations into limestone in Ontario. Special investigation into the possibilities of peat, lignite and other fuel in Northern Ontario will be a feature of the work.

SIR,—I beg herewith to submit a report of my work on Breakfast Foods.

These samples, as you are aware, were not collected and examined because of any suspicion regarding their wholesomeness or genuineness, for they were believed to be, as their analysis proves them to be, nutritious and palatable foods. In view, however, of the high prices at which they are sold, and of the extravagant claims put forth by their manufacturers as to their digestibility, nutrient power, etc., their exists a wide-spread demand for information as to what they really are, and how much of all the value claimed for them they really possess.

GRAPE-NUTS is away in the lead of every other food in the following respects: It has less moisture, less fat and less starch; it has more dextrin and is more soluble than any other food.

The first four are the most heavily advertised cooked foods in the world.

We will furnish any enquirer with the names by mail, but prefer to omit them in a public announcement of this kind.

In the sixth column, under Dextrin, observe GRAPE-NUTS percentage is more than NINE TIMES the small one, and nearly double the next best food.

DEXTRIN is the form of sugar that the starch part of grain is turned into before it can be digested. Dextrin is the part that makes human energy.

The four blank spaces in this column showing no Dextrin whatever, apply to that number of uncooked foods.

DONT FORGET

Grape-Nuts has about double the energy producing power of any food on earth.

IN THE LAST COLUMN

Is shown the precentage of food that is ready for IMMEDIATE DIGESTION

Grape-Nuts has over sixteen times the amount of digestible food as the least one, and about two-thirds more than the next best food made.

Scientifically made food works wonders for the users.

Six years ago GRAPE NUTS started to supply the public with a scientific food, fully and correctly cooked at the factory, and made to supply the certain elements needed in making the gray substance in the brain and nerve centres, and to supply human energy, while at the same time furnish

A food so easy of digestion that an infant's Stomach will handle it without question.

The public made

GRAPE-NUTS

A tremendous success

And this started the long procession of followers, whose facetious names, odd movements and funny pictures have brought more or less derision upon them, for the public mind is shrewd to understand that imitators are fundamentally ignorant of food value, and simply "cook up" something, and hire an advertiser to "copy post as near as you can.

But the analysis of government and other prominent chemists turns light on the question, and the public can profit thereby.

We believe these cereal foods are practically all cleanly. But their makers do not understand how to produce a food with anything like the genuine food value of

OIL WORTH $5.00 PER BARREL

Now being brought from the shale in the well now being drilled by the

ACTONOMA OIL AND DEVELOPMENT CO'Y

in the famous NEWHALL WHITE OIL FIELD, of California, the oldest producing field in the State.

The Company Owns 10,000 Acres of Oil Territory
lying between the Kern River District on the north and the valuable Newhall holdings of the Standard Oil Company on the south and joins both these fields. It is considered the most VALUABLE PIECE OF OIL TERRITORY IN CALIFORNIA. The value of our holdings may be estimated by the fact that an offer of $27,500 has been made for the ground on which our well is located, showing the confidence oil men have in our prospects.

To push their well and complete the development of this vast property, the company offers 40,000 shares of treasury stock at 55 cents per share. This low offer is but a short time and may be withdrawn without notice, as a strike would advance the stock to par at once and probably far beyond that. It is expected that five or six additional wells will be put down during the coming summer.

This company has no high salaried officers, no preferred stock, and economy and integrity are exercised by its managers, and the interest of the smallest stockholder is protected.

Should you desire stock you must act promptly, as such opportunities never go begging nor remain long in sight. Orders filled as received.

If shares are exhausted when your application is received we will return your money. Make checks payable to the order of the Actonoma Oil and Development Company, P. H. Knight, Secretary and Treasurer, 218 S. Broadway, Los Angeles, Cal.

TRANSFER OFFICE, BRISTOL, CONN.

This Company has a perpetual lease on 20 acres of proven oil land in SECTION NINE (9) of the Boulder district, and this section and the immediate vicinity have the best and largest number of producing wells in the entire district.

Our Well No. 1 came in, in January and is now pumping and shipping Oil regularly to the Refinery.

The Directors have decided to put down well No. 2 at once, and they now offer a block of the Treasury stock for the next 30 days at

10 Cents per Share, after that price will be advanced.

It is a well known fact that a 15 barrel well will pay over 100 per cent. profit upon its cost.

This is no longer a speculation for we have proved that oil is on our ground, and we now have oil in paying quantities, with two wells pumping we can soon pay dividends, and every well we put down increases our earning capacity.

This is a business proposition, managed by business men.

Buried Gold

By FRED WHISHAW.

Author of "A Boyar of the Terrible," etc.

The "Penelope" men were burning to commence their gold hunt.

"Maybe we'll have it and be away within the twenty-four hours!" was the general sanguine opinion.

"We mustn't be too sure of that, mates," said Keith. "You see, they might have dug it all up again and planted it somewhere else, in case Robinson should have given away the secret. I hope they won't have thought of it, but, of course, they may have."

A careful study of the chart by Brenton and Keith Adams soon revealed the spot where, soon after landing, the "Hecuba" men had hidden their treasure-boxes. Robinson, by his careful drawings, had made the work easy for them. It had been a labor of love with him, and he had done it most ably and exactly.

A few islanders came upon the ground as their rivals began their digging. They showed little excitement—a bad sign; for had there been much danger of their finding the treasure here, surely the whole community would have turned out to defend it. So Keith thought, though he said nothing. Earthworks were thrown up in a circle and the tents were pitched within this shelter. The work was hastily done, for the men were burning to begin to break ground. The soil showed signs of having been dug at some time or other. This was so obvious that the sight of it drove the men nearly frantic with excitement. No sooner was permission given to dig than every one of them was busy in an instant with his spade.

Never was soil removed more quickly. In half an hour there gaped a hole large enough to bury a hundred boxes of treasure, but no sign of the gold was to be seen.

Some of the men began to rave in their disappointment. They had been brought here under false pretenses; the skipper knew well enough where the gold was; this was a blind so as he and his pals should get the stuff to themselves.

"Shut up, you fools!" said the more level-headed among them. "Can't you see what's the matter? The stuff's been here and they've moved it and hidden it elsewhere, fearin' we or someone might come after it with a chart, just as we have done. It's no good gettin' mad over it. The stuff's on the island, and we must find it."

One or two of the "Hecuba" men stood upon the earthworks and jeered. "You'll have to dig up the whole bloomin' island, lads, before you find it!" they said. "Who d'you think's going to tell you where to dig next—us?"

Old Jake Foster came presently and looked over at the sweating, disappointed diggers.

"You're spending your twenty-four hours in takin' a little exercise, Mr. Adams, I see!" he said. "Comfortin', ain't it, after being cramped up on board so long? May I ask what you're diggin' up the island for? There ain't no potatoes planted here that I know of." Adams was somewhat heartsick and made no reply.

"Try a little birds-nestin' round by the rocks on the south side!" said Foster. "Then you'll get somethin' for your trouble. There's pretty shells to be picked up, too."

Foster continued after a pause: "A set of fools you chaps are to trust that there skipper and his mate. They'll make you dig up the whole island to please them, you'll see, and I tell you straight you'll not find the stuff. Not unless you join us, some of you, and sign on for our community. That's your best chance for a share of the stuff. Else you can stay and dig for these chaps, and you'll end by getting shot for your pains. It's just as you like, mind you. It don't matter to me. There's gold enough for all I care to give a share to——"

At this one of the "Penelope's" men threw down his spade.

"Well, blow this diggin', say I," he cried. "If your offer's meant, skipper, I'm on it. I've had enough diggin' and seafarin', too."

"Any that feels the same way can come over to the village," said Foster. "I mean what I say."

"Thank you for easin' us of our scum," said Keith. "You're kindly welcome to any that are fools enough to go!" Keith felt very angry and helpless. "I'd just like to mention," he added, "that they as gone over to the other side sails back home in irons."

"Not they," said Foster. "They won't sail home at all, not till they want to. There's some won't go home whether they want to or no, unless they're away before the twenty-four hours is up."

Captain Brenton presently held a conference with Keith. Three of the men had thrown down their spades and gone back to the village with Foster.

"I think we can rely on the rest, and we're well enough rid of those three chaps. They've been a danger and a trouble all along," said Keith, "but that old devil Foster means what he says. He's going to attack us to-morrow mornin'. What's to be done about that, and what's to be done about the diggin'? They've removed the stuff, and no fools either, from their point of view; but where are we going to try next?"

"That's it," said Brenton. "They won't tell us, you bet!"

"Not unless we force 'em. And how are we going to do that? Where are we going to when the shootin' begins tomorrow morning, skipper? That's another thing. Is it best to go back on board or simply entrench ourselves here and await attack? They'd have to attack us from the open, so we'd have the advantage in here."

"Besides, if we took to the ship we'd have to land from the ship, and that'd have to be done under fire all the way."

"The only thing is, is the ship safe?"

The skipper uttered a sudden oath. "I hadn't thought of that," he said. "I don't know that she is. What's to prevent old Foster sendin' a boat's crew to attack her? Could our folks keep 'em off?" Keith shook his head.

"It's awkward," he said, "and that's the truth."

Keith was right; the situation was awkward indeed.

"Luckily they don't know," said Brenton, "how many's left on board."

"Those three fools that's gone over'll have told them," said Keith, "likely as not."

There was silence for a while in this council of two. Then the skipper said that it seemed they were not to have quite such a walkover as was expected.

"Oh, we shall come all right in the end," Keith replied cheerily. "Only we must see that these chaps don't get a chance of murdering us all first. Old Foster's gone mad, pretty nearly, and I wager the rest are just about the same. I've heard the lust for gold does it. We must mind and keep clear of it ourselves."

Warden and the bosun were taken into consultation, but neither had anything to propose. The rest of the crew were

The Adams Copper Mining and Refining Co.

Owns Seven Copper Mines, all of which Show Wide Veins of Pay Ore.

One of its mines, the Copper Coin, has just been equipped with buildings and up-to-date machinery.

The company has no debts and owns its own properties.

At a recent meeting of the directors, the officers of the company were instructed to sell a small block of the treasury stock for the purpose of fully equipping more of the mines with proper buildings and up-to-date machinery, and in pursuance with the above instructions the officers do now offer TWENTY-FIVE THOUSAND SHARES OF THE TREASURY STOCK AT 12 CENTS PER SHARE, on easy payments, as follows: On all orders for 100 shares to 1,000 shares, $5 cash with order and $5 per month thereafter until fully paid. The management fully expects to make this stock worth par in from 12 to 15 months.

The secretary and treasurer of this company bought Gold Coin stock at 12 cents per share and sold it at $6.50 per share within 24 months.

Another officer of this company bought Calumet & Hecla Copper stock at $1.00 per share and sold it for $825.00 per share. This company paid $70,000,000 in dividends.

Adams Copper Mining and Refining Company's stock will do the same, as they have enormous bodies of ore already in sight.

WHEN TO INVEST

HERE ARE A FEW COPPER FACTS well worth the attention of all would-be investors: $100 invested in 1890 in the Tamarack Copper Company is now worth $782; $100 invested in 1893 in Boston & Montana Copper Company is now worth $1 896; $100 invested in 1896 in the Arnold Copper Company is now worth $1 870; $100 invested in 1893 in the Wolverine Copper Company is now worth $5,660. $100 invested in the Butte & Boston Copper Company is now worth $5,600. $100 invested in 1896 in the Calumet & Hecla Copper Company is now worth $8,650.

More money has, in recent years, been made in copper mining than in any other staple enterprise as free from the element of risk. There is nothing misleading in the statement that copper mining as a proposition is better than gold, says the San Francisco Chronicle. The most valuable minin properties in the world are copper properties.

To every purchaser of stock a specimen of ore from the Company's mines will be sent FREE.

STOCK MARKETS

Present Price Level Looks Safe and Attractive

New York, May 23—The absence of public speculation has been the chief disturbing factor of the market of late, as aside from that there has been no element of sufficient consequence to depress values. Gold shipments are natural at this time of year, and with trade conditions of a most encouraging character, fine crops and railroad earnings surpassing the high records of last year, it is difficult to account for market weakness. Discouraged holders of stocks have liquidated most thoroughly and it would appear as though this cleaning out process had run its course. The market may be of a see-saw character for a few days, but short selling will be of a desultory nature and the covering of a large short interest must necessarily advance the market. It is certain that liquidation has placed stocks in the strongest hands and a movement for the rise is the logical result of existing conditions. The declines from the top prices of January show an average of 20 points on 15 active stocks. Penna. is 21, N.N.Y. 22, St Paul 7, U.P. 7, S.P. 7 points below the low prices of last December. Declines have been so material that it would seem as though it would involve only nominal risk to buy standard issues now and ought to produce profitable results in a very short period. It is conceded that the feeling is generally bearish and in this fact is found a strong reason why a decided rally is imminent. Pessimism gives birth to a short interest of such large dimensions that it collapses through its own weight. The reductions of the Bank of England's rate of discount to 3 1-2 per cent. eliminates one bear factor and indicates the ease of money in London and removes the probability of any large gold shipments from here. The price level is attractive and safe and all in favor of the buyer.

MILLIONS IN COPPER

New Mexico as a Copper Producing Region Best on Earth

Mr. C. J. Arthur Former Resident of Peterborough Manager of the Company — A Splendid Investment

From the Daily Mining Record.

The Copper Ranch Gold Mining and Milling Company has an excellent showing in its property near this city. It is the intention of the company to install a mill upon the ground this summer to treat the product. Drifting is now under way from the second level a distance of 210 feet from the collar of the shaft. The vein is three feet wide. There are several streaks of iron-copper sulphide, all of which shows a very good value. The ore will average about $30 to the ton. When this ore is concentrated it runs about $100 to the ton.

General Manager William Rogers, who is in charge of the operations, has had great success in the past. Mr. Rogers has been mining in Colorado for the past 26 years, and all of his knowledge is being used to make the "Copper Ranch" property the first in Boulder county. He states that at the present time there is $50,000 worth of ore blocked out in the mine, awaiting the construction of a mill and that a plant will be installed this summer. Mr. Rogers has the endorsement of the Bank of clear county and the Central Savings Bank of Denver. The company owns 170 acres of patented land.

Among the directors of the Copper Ranch Gold Mining and Milling company are Henry V. Johnston, ex-United States district attorney, Thomas E. Fisher, general passenger agent Colorado and Southern railway; Joshua P. Hall, general agent, passenger department, Santa Fe route; Seth Ketcham, dry goods; William Rogers, mining engineer; Thos. Fielding, mining machinery; William E. Alexander, president Bancroft Land and Irrigation company.

To Whom it May Concern:—

I take pleasure in saying that I am personally acquainted with the Directors of the Copper Ranch Gold Mining and Milling Company, of Colorado, most of whom I have known for many years. They are all gentlemen of the highest character and standing, their names being, for any acquainted with them, absolute guarantee for honest and fair dealing. This company has recently secured the services of Mr. Wm. Rogers as General Manager, and I can recommend him as a thorough, practical and successful mining man.

CATARRHOZONE INHALER is the greatest invention of the century for the cure of diseases of the respiratory organs. It is sure to cure because it cannot fail to reach the germs in the air passages that give rise to the diseased conditions.

The antiseptic vapor of Catarrhozone is inhaled at the mouth, and after permeating the air cells and passages of all the respiratory organs, is exhaled slowly through the nostrils. It goes everywhere the air we breathe goes, and is certain to reach the seat of the disease no matter how remote.

AN ORDINARY COLD lasts about one day if Catarrhozone is inhaled five minutes every hour.

CATARRH and BRONCHITIS are relieved at once and cured for all time, by the persistent use of Catarrhozone.

CATARRHOZONE OUTFIT consists of a beautifully polished hard rubber inhaler and sufficient liquid for recharging to last two months. Costs $1, or trial size 25c. Sold by Druggists and N. C. POLSON & CO., Kingston, Ont.

DREDGING THE RIVER

The Steam Dredge "Trent" Preparing for Season's Work

The Government dredge "Trent," which is in drydock on the Ashburnham side of the river, above the Otonabee bridge, is being put in working order. A new steel dipper is among the improvements that are under way.

As soon as these are completed the dredge will be launched and put to work above the bridge in front of the Cereal Company's property. The work to be done at this point will take some months. When this is finished a channel is to be made between the Otonabee and C. P. R. bridges, an undertaking that will require a couple of years to complete.

A GOOD APPOINTMENT

Mr. H. P. Lindsay New District Agent of Confederation

The appointment of Mr. H. P. Lindsay, late local manager of the Imperial Life Association, to the position of district agent of the Confederation Life Association, is a very wise act on the part of that company. Mr. Lindsay is one of the best known and successful life insurance men in the country.

His appointment in no way conflicts with the position of Mr. Rush, who continues to represent the company with increased duties as cashier and local representative. The Confederation Life expects to secure new office premises in the near future, the Peterborough office now being a central office for the collection of premiums throughout the district. Until such new offices are secured Messrs. Rush and Lindsay will remain in those at present occupied by them.

GRAND CONCERT

Under Auspices of the Athletic Lacrosse Club

A fair crowd turned out to take in the promenade concert and athletic exhibition last night in the new rink.

The 57th Band, under the leadership of Mr. Glidden, is always a drawing card in Peterborough. The music is always good, and it is needless to say that last night there was no exception to the rule, the crowd responding with enthusiastic applause.

Mr. Halpenny gave a capital recitation, and also sang in his usual style, but the rink being so very large, those in the gallery at the far end of the building were disappointed at not being able to hear him distinctly.

Seven clever young men from the Y.M.C.A. gave an athletic exhibition, which was much appreciated by all who were privileged to see and was a credit to those who participated in it. Mr. Sandford Hall and Mr. Ernie Payne were the favorites, although each of the others was scarce less agile and graceful.

Mr. Kenner managed the affair in his usual modest and capable manner.

POLICK COURT

A Number of Cases Disposed of by Magistrate Dumble

Margaret Kennedy, a woman who is a stranger in town, was charged with being drunk. She was given ten days in gaol.

The case against landlord and tenant for unsanitary condition of a drain, which was enlarged, was again enlarged for a week.

H. Metcalf was fined $5 for throwing a stone at a Chinese laundry window.

H. and K. Freeman, charged with perjury, which was enlarged, came up again in court yesterday. After considerable evidence had been heard, the accused were committed for trial. They were given bail on two securities of $250 each.

Persons who have not bought dog tags for their canines are warned that the costs of the court will have to be paid as well as the usual fine. It is understood that several summonses for these offenders were issued to-day.

Dr. Ayers Leaving Town

Mr. Horace Ayers, physical director of the Y.M.C.A., has accepted a position in New York City, and has tendered his resignation to the Board of Directors, to take effect on July first. Mr. Ayers' departure will be regretted by young men connected with the Association. His resignation was accepted by the Board, who by resolution expressed best wishes and prospects for his future success.

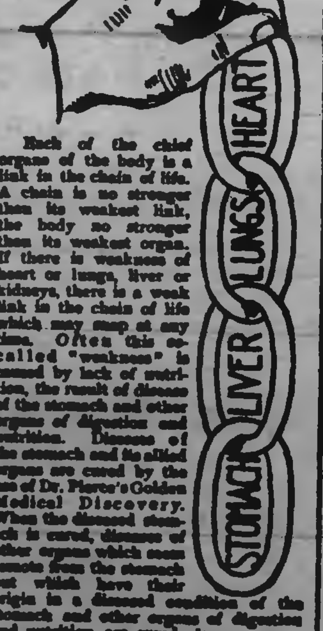
Mr. Morris will be accompanied by Mr. J. S. Robertson, Secretary of the Association, Toronto.



Each of the chief organs of the body is a link in the chain of life. A chain is no stronger than its weakest link, the body no stronger than its weakest organ. If there is weakness of heart or lungs, liver or kidneys, there is a weak link in the chain of life which may snap at any time. Often this so-called "weakness" is caused by lack of nutrition, the result of disease of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. Diseases of the stomach and its allied organs are cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. When the diseased stomach is cured, diseases of other organs which seem remote from the stomach but which have their origin in a diseased condition of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition, are cured also.

"I was in poor health when I commenced taking Doctor Pierce's medicines," writes Mr. Elmer Lowder, of Velpen, Pike Co., Ind. "I had stomach, kidney, heart and lung trouble. Was not able to do any work. I had a severe cough and hemorrhage of the lungs, but after using your medicine a while I commenced to gain in strength and flesh, and stopped coughing right away. Took about six bottles of 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I feel like a different person. I gladly recommend your medicines to all sufferers, for I know it cured me."

The use of Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets will cure that foul breath.

HOW A BEAUTIFUL WOMAN ESCAPED SPRING CATARRH BY USE OF PE-RU-NA.

Nothing Robs One of Strength Like Spring Catarrh— Spring Fever is Spring Catarrh.

MISS HELEN WHITMAN.

Miss Helen Whitman, 303½ Grand avenue, Milwaukee, Wis., writes:

"There is nothing like Peruna for that tired feeling, which gives you no ambition for work or play. After a prolonged illness, about a year ago I felt unable to regain my health, but four bottles of Peruna made a wonderful change and restored me to perfect health. As long as you keep your blood in good condition you are all right, and Peruna seems to fill the veins with pure, healthful blood. I thoroughly endorse it." MISS HELEN WHITMAN.

Have you got nerves? Well, you ought to have nerves. But they ought to be strong nerves, good nerves. Does your hand tremble? You are living too fast. Does your heart flutter at times? You had better call a halt. Americans live too fast. They crowd too much into a single day. They have too little leisure. The hospitals and insane asylums are filling up. The quiet, pastoral scenes of yore are becoming rare. It's time that we quit this sort of business.

How to Get Strong Nerves.

First, repair the injury already done to your nerves. The way to do this is to do exactly as did Mattie B. Curtis, Secretary of Legion of Loyal Women, Hotel Salem, Boston, Mass. She said in a recent letter: "I suffered for over a year with general weakness and debility manifested in severe headache and backache. I took four bottles of Peruna, and for two months have been entirely free from these maladies."

Nervous Prostration.

Thousands of cases might be quoted in which Peruna has been used to rescue people from the perdition of deranged nerves, and put them on the good, solid foundation of health. The County Auditor of Erie county, New York, Hon. John W. Neff, in a recent letter written at Buffalo, New York, stated: "I was persuaded by a friend to try a bottle of your great nerve tonic, Peruna, and the results were so gratifying that I am more than pleased to recommend it."

A Spring Tonic.

Almost everybody needs a tonic in the spring. Something to brace the nerves, invigorate the brain and cleanse the blood. That Peruna will do this is beyond all question. Everyone who has tried it has had the same experience as Mrs. D. W. Timberlake, of Lynchburg, Va., who, in a recent letter, made use of the following words: "I always take a dose of Peruna after business hours, as it is a great thing for the nerves. There is no better spring tonic, and I have used about all of them."

Catarrh in Spring.

The spring is the best time to treat catarrh. Nature renews herself every spring. The system is rejuvenated by spring weather. This renders medicines more effective. A short course of Peruna, assisted by the balmy air of spring, will cure old, stubborn cases of catarrh that have resisted treatment for years. Everybody should have a copy of Dr. Hartman's latest book on catarrh. Address The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio.

Mrs. Lulu Larmer, Stoughton, Wis., says:

Mrs. Lulu Larmer.

"For two years I suffered with nervous trouble and stomach disorders until it seemed that there was nothing to me but a bundle of nerves. I was very irritable, could not sleep, rest or compose myself, and was certainly unfit to take care of a household. I took nerve tonics and pills without benefit. When I began taking Peruna I grew steadily better, my nerves grew stronger, my rest was no longer fitful, and to-day I consider myself in perfect health and strength. My recovery was slow but sure, but I persevered and was rewarded by perfect health."—Mrs. Lulu Larmer.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, O.
